Zucker Keeps His Job In Marathon Hearing

3-2 Vote Swung By Gnoss

By WAT TAKESHITA

Marin County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker, praised for comptence but accused of "rudeness and arrogance," won a 3 to 2 vote of confidence from the board of supervisors yesterday after a non-stop seven and one-half hour hearing.

Just before 5 p.m., Supervisor William A. Gnoss of Novato, leaning heavily on the almost unanimous support of Zucker from North Marin groups, cast the deciding vote in favor of retaining Zucker in his $20,664-a-year job.

Supervisor Michael Wornum moved that the supervisors find the Marin County Grand Jury charges against Zucker unsubstantiated and that the 34-year-old planning director be retained.

GNOSS' STAND

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. seconded the motion. Gnoss admitted he was one of the supervisors who had suggested Zucker resign at last Tuesday's closed meeting. However, the widespread public support for Zucker, particularly the solid backing from the North Marin Federation of Homeowners and Improvement Associations, swayed his vote in favor of Zucker.

Gnoss voted in such a low voice that no one in the audience could hear. When Chairman John F. McInnis announced that Gnoss had voted aye, a cheer went up, and a crowd gathered around Zucker to congratulate him.

Voting against Zucker were McInnis and Louis H. Baar.

Baar explained he wanted to fire Zucker because a man that controversial "is bad for a community." Futhermore, he said, Zucker had been discourteous and rude in his relations with the public. "If the board members feel an employee is not doing an adequate job, the only thing to do is to remove him."

McINNIS VIEW

McInnis said no one questions the professional competence of Zucker. But beyond technical competence, he said, the planning director must make requirements crystal clear and so clearly spelled out that a developer will know exactly where he stands.

"It is my conviction that Mr. Zucker is incapable of carrying out this latter requirement," said McInnis.

He said he criticized Zucker two years ago for being discourteous to the public, but the plan-

ROSS COUNCILMEN APPOINT WALKER

Secret Interviews Upheld As Legal; Second Nomination Gets No Second

Attorney Ralph C. Walker was named to the Ross Town Council last night, filling the vacancy created by the March 27 resignation of Jack Carney.

The appointment was made by a 3-1 vote of the town council after five applicants were interviewed in closed session.

Councilmen Roy Farrington Jones and Dr. W. James Dawson and Mayor Frederick S. Allen voted for Walker, with Natalie Lewis dissenting. She had nominated another of the candidates, John H. Chase of 111 Upper Road, but this received no second.

SWORN IN

The appointment was effective immediately. Walker, 31, of 32 Woodside Way, was sworn in immediately after his selection was announced.

The other applicants for the seat vacated by Carney — who resigned because of his added commitments as a radio and television personality — were H. K. Bate of Lagunitas Road, Walter J. Brown of 94 Baywood Drive and Richard Tracy, also of Lagunitas Road.

SECRECY QUERIED

The council's decision to interview the candidates in closed session was questioned by Clay C. Meredith of Woodside Way.

"Does the Town Council's decision conflict with the (Ralph M.) Brown Act?" Meredith asked. "These people are not applicants for a job, but for public office. Normally, candidates must face the voters and are not interviewed by incumbents."

Mayor Frederick S. Allen, however, said that Town Atty. Robert W. Elliot had ruled that it was not a violation of the Brown Act, a state law which regulates which type of meetings may be held in secret.

"It would be unfair to interview them in public," Allen said. He indicated that since each candidate would be asked the same questions, then the first applicant would be in a far more difficult position than the last."

QUIZ REVEALED

Following the closed session, the council outlined the questions it had asked each candidate. The questions pertained to matters currently facing the town of Ross, including animal control, flood control, expansion of the police and fire units and expansion of Ross General Hospital.

Walker has lived in Ross four and a half years and works in San Francisco. He said that there was no particular issue which spurred his decision to seek the council seat.

All five of the candidates said they felt the closed session of interviewing was the "fairest" way of conducting the selection, although none of them indicated that they would have minded a public interview.

Red Korea Claims U.S. Fled Talks

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea accused the United States today of trying to "reverse black and white" by stating that the U.S. reconnaissance plane shot down in the Sea of Japan last Tuesday was in international air space.

Maj. Gen. Lee Choon-sun, North Korea's chief delegate to the armistice commission meeting at Panmunjom, reiterated his government's claim that the U.S. Navy plane carrying 31 persons was downed after it violated Red air space.

Lee asserted that U.S. Air Force Maj. Gen. James B. Knapp, head of the U.N. Command delegation, "fled" from the meeting because he feared "exposure of the truth" about the plane.

Lee accused Knapp of a "flagrant violation of the Korean armistice agreement" in walking out. The North Korean Central News Agency, which broadcast Lee's statement, said the walkout came 42 minutes after the meeting started when Lee asked three times for identification of the unit to which the downed plane was attached.

In Seoul, South Korean President Chung-hee Park met with top aides to study President Richard M. Nixon's statements to a Washington news conference on the plane incident.

Nixon said yesterday he had ordered protection against armed attack on U.S. intelligence planes near the North Korean coast and added that the flights were being resumed after a brief suspension.

North Viet Living Bombs Batter At U.S. Outpost

SAIGON (UPI)—North Vietnamese soldiers with bundles of explosives strapped to their bodies partially overran a U.S. outpost below the border Demilitarized Zone (DMZ), killing 11 Americans and wounding 23 in a three-hour battle announced today.

At the same time, U.S. headquarters said a column of American tanks yesterday crushed a Communist base camp northwest of Saigon and killed 82 guerrilla defenders. Front reports said the battle cost the United States four tanks and seven GIs killed.

The battle two miles below the DMZ late yesterday saw 150 North Vietnamese charge out of the jungle against U.S. Marines and soldiers of the U.S. 5th Mechanized Infantry Division who drew their armored personnel carriers into a tight circle, wagon train style.

Communist soldiers detonating the explosives strapped to their bodies destroyed three of the armored carriers and blew a hole in the U.S. defense perimeter. Other guerrillas surged through.

War communiques said the American soldiers called in divebombers and artillery strikes to help lift the siege. After three hours, the North Vietnamese withdrew, leaving behind 13 bodies, military spokesmen said.

The DMZ area fighting and the battle 50 miles northwest of Saigon were the heaviest combat of the week reported by the U.S. command.

Military spokesmen said the U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment sent a column of tanks against the guerrilla bunker base camp near Saigon, overrunning the camp but losing four tanks in the process. Seven Americans died and 28 suffered wounds in the fighting.

In Saigon, a U.S. soldier who escaped from 14 months of Communist captivity told of his joy on being picked up by an American helicopter crew. His first words to the pilot were, "I love you! I love you!"

The GI, Spec. 5 Thomas H. Van Putten, 21, of Caledonia, Mich., was suffering from dehydration and malnutrition when he was picked up near the Cambodian border Thursday.

Campus Shut By Invasion Of Bookstore

OAKLAND (UPI) — Oakland's Merritt College was closed at 1 p.m. yesterday after a band of militants raided the campus bookstore and distributed some 500 textbooks to poor students.

The band of black, white and Mexican-American raiders ignored the protests of President Norvel Smith, who said "this is not the way to solve the problems." (See other campus unrest, page 2.)

It was the second day of trouble at Merritt, where 40 per cent of the 10,000 day and evening students are black or Mexican in descent. On Thursday, 30 members of the faculty

Sort-Of-Secret Report Expected To Deny Oil Slick Killed Whales

By LARRY D. HATFIELD

The federal government will issue a report early next week which probably will say the death of five whales washed ashore on Northern California beaches last month was not caused by the huge oil leak from an offshore well in Santa Barbara Channel, it has been learned.

It was not known with complete certainty that the oil which leaked from an offshore rig of the Union Oil Co. would not be blamed for the whales' deaths, but one phase of the report that already has leaked out indicated oil was not the cause.

Additionally, several government scientists on the West Coast said they doubted that the oil could be blamed.

Two of the whales washed up on West Marin beaches.

The U.S. Department of Interior, meanwhile, denied that it had ordered its people in the field not to discuss results of tests on the dead whales.

"There's been no muzzle of any sort," a highly placed Interior Department spokesman in Washington, D.C., said. "At least not from here." He said if such an order had been issued, "It was done by some bureaucrat away from here."

Ford Wilfkie, director of the department's Bureau of Commercial Fisheries Marine Mammal Laboratory in Seattle, told the Independent-Journal he had been ordered not to talk about a study completed by federal researchers on the lungs of at least one of the dead whales. He would not say who ordered him to remain silent. Other govern-

Woman Consumer Aide Sworn In

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virginia Knauer was sworn in Saturday as President Nixon's special adviser on consumer affairs at a Rose Garden ceremony where Nixon promised to support her consumer protection efforts.

The 54-year-old blonde grandmother from Philadelphia took the oath of office from Judge Catherine Kelly of the District Court of Appeals in Washington. Mrs. Knauer's granddaughter, Nancy Knauer, 7, held the Bible.

Regents Take Back Control Over Hiring

BERKELEY (UPI)—The University of California Board of Regents has voted to take back from the president and chancellors the authority to make faculty appointments and promotions.

The vote was regarded as a major victory for Gov. Ronald Reagan, an ex-officio regent, who strongly opposed the appointment of controversial Dr. Herbert Marcuse by San Diego Chancellor William J. McGill.

The chancellors of the nine campuses termed yesterday's action a vote of no confidence and U.C. President Charles J. Hitch said, "You might say that a vote of confidence has been withdrawn."

The authority to hire and promote faculty members had been delegated to the chancellors three years ago in a decentralization move, but campus controversies led some regents to want to take it back.

SPLIT VOTE

The vote was 14 to 10 with Hitch and the chancellors voting against returning the authority to the regents and Reagan and the ex-officio members (state political leaders) voting for it.

The new rule provides that chancellors must submit to the regents recommendations on appointments and promotions each month. The regents have ten days from their monthly meeting to exercise a veto.

Hitch pointed out that since the regents do not meet in August and December, the delay on appointments could be as long as 70 days, long enough for another university to hire a professor in demand.

POLITICAL CLAUSE

After passing the measure on faculty appointments, Regent William M. Roth proposed an amendment to read: "Provided further that no political tests shall ever be considered in connection with any appointment or promotion of any faculty member or employee."

The amendment was passed unanimously.

Earlier in the meeting, Regent Fred Dutton charged that the university was "in fact a racist institution" that is making a "Band-Aid response" to the needs of minority students.

Dutton's remarks came after a report from Hitch on plans the university has for helping minority students.

Dutton said the university has "about 3 per cent" Negroes and Mexican-Americans among its students and declared, "It is silly for us to make a Band-Aid response to the urban crisis when there are 25 per cent blacks and Mexican-Americans in our population."

Dutton also became involved in a controversy when he accused an Alameda County Sheriff's deputy of needlessly roughing up a student demonstrator outside the regents' meeting.

Dutton said he saw a deputy take two steps to strike the student who was obeying orders to walk back across the street and became angered when the deputy refused to identify himself.

"They're going to keep doing as they damn well please, regardless of the citizens of the state," Dutton said.

Alameda County Sheriff Frank Madigan, who watched the incident from a nearby rooftop, denied the deputy had struck the student.

White Radical Actions Hit By Hayakawa

CHICAGO (UPI)—Dr. S. I. Hayakawa says black student militants have definite goals in sight while many white radicals on campus have "nothing but revolution and destruction on their minds."

"I'd like to make a sharp distinction between white radicals and black radicals," the acting president of San Francisco State College said yesterday. "Black radical revolutionaries—such as the Black Students Union—have very definite goals, if and when they create a disturbance.

"Their goal is for a more just society in the future."

He said white radicals may use the same slogans, but they "have nothing but revolution and destruction on their minds." The college president, who lives in Mill Valley, made the comments at a news conference before a speech to the Executive Club.

"Disagreement and dissent are always legitimate...but disorder and destruction are not protected by the university community and cannot be."

Hayakawa rejected a "double standard" applied by some students and faculty members in thinking about campus confrontations. He said large numbers of teachers and students look for any excuse to make "irrational student behavior seem rational." However, he said, "if police act rationally, they get no such break, and this is a double standard."

Hayakawa said many professors seem to have a class prejudice against policemen, most of whom do not hold college degrees.

While Hayakawa spoke, about 40 pickets, both black and white, paraded in front of the hotel, where he spoke. One sign being carried read: "Hayakawa —Tool of Millionaires."

Nixon Tax Ideas Due In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is to send to Congress Monday his first requests for tax reforms expected to include recommendations for lifting the tax burden from the poor.

Nixon did not mention any details at yesterday's news conference when he said an "interim tax reform package" would go to Capitol Hill next week.

But one proposal the administration favors is to increase the minimum standard deduction allowed on income tax returns —a step that would benefit impoverished people who still have to dig up money to pay taxes.

The idea has been under discussion in the House Ways and Means Committee which open hearings Tuesday on administration tax proposals.

The President may recommend that all persons officially classified by the government as "poor" be taken off the tax rolls.

The Johnson administration backed an increase in the minimum standard deduction and estimated it would remove from taxpayer lists nearly half of approximately 2.5 million poor people subject to some tax.

Presidential counsellor Arthur F. Burns, who pulls together economic policy matters for Nixon, indicated last Sunday changes in deductions were under consideration for helping the poor.

The government classification of the poverty level is $3,600 income for a family of four.

New Campus Uproars; Stanford Sit-In Over

COMBINED AP & UPI

Black students occupied the Cornell University student center shortly after dawn today, then scuffled briefly with white students. At the Atlanta University Center, dissident students held about 25 members of the board of trustees as prisoners behind chained doors.

At several other major university campuses — including Stanford — protests had ended or were suspended.

About 40 black students at Cornell, protesting reprimands given to three Negro students for demonstrating last December, took over Willard Straight Hall, forcing the school to order 30 parents and 40 school employees out of the building.

The parents were on the Cornell campus at Ithaca, N.Y., for the annual Parents Weekend.

About 20 white students climbed through a window of the student center about four hours after the peaceful takeover by the members of the Cornell Afro-American Society.

Three of the white students reportedly suffered minor injuries in the scuffle, which was broken up by campus police. The white students were ejected from the building.

The black students broadcast briefly over the student radio station, housed in the building, and charged Cornell with having "racist attitudes" and failing to provide a relevant black studies program.

In Atlanta, Ga., the students at the predominantly Negro, six-college complex were demanding that white trustees resign and that the university be renamed for the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a graduate of Morehouse, one of the six colleges. The trustees were locked in the room yesterday morning.

Coffee and food was brought by campus guards to the trustees.

Students allowed the guards into the third floor conference room where the trustees were held.

Other than campus security police, there was no sign of city police on the Atlanta campus.

Week's end saw at least a temporary halt to student protests on four campuses, including a week-long strike at Harvard and a nine-day Stanford University sit-in.

Several hundred Stanford University students cleaned up after themselves and left the school's Applied Electronics laboratory, yesterday ending a nine-day occupation.

Their decision to leave was apparently influenced by hints by President Kenneth S. Pitzer and the student-faculty judicial council that federal troops might be used to protect secret government files in the building. Pitzer also agreed to keep the lab closed to all but maintenance personnel for a week, and the protestors felt the promise was as good as a continuation of the occupation.

Pitzer had vowed not to use force to end the peaceful sit-in. but the council warned there was "imminent danger that external forces, beyond university control, in particular federal troops, may enter the campus to deal with various aspects of the situation."

The students said they would hold a mass meeting next Friday to consider further action, including possible "reoccupation of a university building."

At Columbia University in New York, 20 students voted to leave because they felt they did not have enough support to continue in violation of the court ban.

Demonstrators at Queensboro Community College in New York ended a sit-down late yesterday after their members dwindled from an original 650 to about 50. Some 300 police entered the campus, told about 50 holdouts they would be arrested if they stayed, and watched them leave.

A three-day sit-in ended yesterday at La Salle College in Philadelphia as university officials agreed to make ROTC voluntary. La Salle had been one of a handful of schools in the country requiring students to take the program.

Pleads Guilty To Lesser Charge

Gary Sheppard Stevens, 19, of San Anselmo, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a reduced charge of being in a place where narcotics were used.

Thus ended almost a year of charges and dismissals stemming from a raid May 28, 1968, on a residence in San Rafael, where the youth was living at the time.

He had variously been charged with possessing LSD, cultivating marijuana and offering mescaline for sale and selling another substance. The latter charge was dismissed yesterday by Judge Peter Allen Smith.

Stevens was ordered to appear for sentencing May 27.

Except for travelers, most Italians appeared unaffected by the strike because it came on a weekend. But the disruption in the national lottery draw disappointed many.

BART Link To Airport Is Urged

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Planning and Urban Development Association (SPUR) has strongly endorsed extending the Bay Area Rapid Transit system to the airport.

SPUR said San Francisco should form a non-profit corporation to issue revenue bonds to finance the extension.

The BART system, now under construction, is to end at Daly City. The system will not, under present plans, serve any portion of San Mateo County, where the airport is located.

The private planning group rejected the concept of a privately owned monorail from downtown San Francisco to the airport.

"If a monorail system could be self-supporting, there is no reason why a BART system would not also pay its own way," SPUR said, adding that "whichever system is constructed first will preclude construction of the other."

The report said jumbo jets will carry up to 500 passengers in the early 1970's.

"We must have a solution by then or else," SPUR said.

Teen Spot Shuts Door In Fairfax

The Purple Perculator, popular teen coffee house in Fairfax, will close after tonight — the victim of disinterest, drugs and alcohol.

Rev. Richard N. Wilmington, pastor of Fairfax Community Church where the coffee house is located, reported interest has begun to subside after 15 months of operation.

He said teen-agers have been coming in after using drugs and alcohol and adult advisors are "past the point of coping with it." He said drugs and alcohol are not brought in — "supervision is close inside."

Wilmington added that the improper use has been "enough to spoil it for the rest" and said he suspects it is one reason for the lack of interest among the high school age group served by the coffee house.

Mrs. Glen Gasaway of Fairfax, who with her husband has been on hand to operate the coffee house each Saturday night, explained that the facility has not been drawing enough young people to pay the bands which perform each week.

When the coffee house opened, Mrs. Gasaway said, she thought it would be successful for about six months, what she considered an average interest span in a new activity.

"A lot of kids are going to be terribly disappointed. They were my great concern in making the decision," she said.

However, Mrs. Gasaway said, she and her husband could not be effective with the young people who were using drugs and alcohol. She added that the coffee house had been a way of reaching young people with problems.

Both Wilmington and Mrs. Gasaway hope the coffee house can be reopened, possibly, Wilmington said, with a different focus — a quieter kind of entertainment.

senate were barricaded for three and one-half hours before being released unharmed.

In addition yesterday, a student branded as a "white reactionary" by blacks was beaten up when he refused to leave the campus cafeteria. Two photographers reportedly were roughed up and film was taken from several cameramen.

Dr. Smith, 44, who last June was the first black to be named president of a junior college, tried to reason with the students outside the bookstore, but his pleas went unheeded.

The campus was ordered closed at 1 p.m. because of what administrators called "great tension." But order soon was restored without police being called on campus.

Zucker Keeps His Job In Marathon Hearing

ning director's attitude has remained unchanged.

Zucker said he considered the 3 to 2 vote enough of a vote of confidence that he could continue with his present county planning programs.

During the heat of yesterday's arguments, hints of a recall came from several speakers. One woman, Mrs. Dorothy Melen of Corte Madera, declared flatly: "Personally I'd like to see Bud Baar recalled for this."

Both friends and foes of Zucker spoke with intensity, but the overflow audience was treated to brief moments of humor.

Anne L. Ellinwood of Tiburon, referring to complaints that Zucker doesn't smile readily, quipped: "Whether or not he smiles a lot should not be our concern. Maybe he was born with stiff facial muscles."

But the statement that had the crowd laughing for almost a full minute came from Strawberry developer Stanley W. Taylor. "Mr. Zucker is a master politician," said Taylor. "Otherwise we wouldn't have this big group here." This brought a few snickers. Taylor then added that during a hearing on one of his developments in Strawberry, "Mr. Zucker aroused up all the nuns from the Sister of Mercy. . . ." The rest of his statement was drowned in a roar of laughter, and Taylor himself managed a smile.

But the bulk of the meeting was conducted purposefully, with McInnis rapping the gavel to silence speakers who went over their allotted three minutes. Even with this strict limitation, the hearing went from 9:30 a.m. to 4:50 p.m. without recess or lunch.

Among those who spoke for organizations, 25 favored Zucker and 10 were opposed. These were followed by about 60 individuals who paraded up to the microphone to demonstrate what the supervisors themselves acknowledged as "an overwhelming show of support for Mr. Zucker."

County officials agreed that the crowd was the biggest in the history of Marin County government, even exceeding the overflow meeting in the old San Rafael courthouse when county supervisors halted construction of the Civic Center in 1961.

Zucker admitted he was "outspoken on issues," but did not intend to be disrespectful or discourteous.

County Administrator Alan Bruce declared he found nothing that would justify Zucker's dismissal. He pointed out that the supervisors, when they hired Zucker in 1955, were aware of his strong personality. "He (Zucker) said he was abrasive and he came on strong," said Bruce. "Today, he is accused of being the same."

Then followed the parade of speakers, totalling almost 100.

Among organizations supporting Zucker were the Gallinas Village Homeowners Association, Kent Woodlands Property Owners, California chapter of American Institute of Planners, Meadowsweet Improvement Club, Marin Council for Civic Affairs, Muir Woods Park Improvement Association, Northern California Chapter of American Institute of Architects, Black Point Improvement Club, Lucas Valley Homeowners, Sleepy Hollow Homes Association, Ecumenical Association for Housing;

Inverness Improvement Association, Mill Valley City Council, Marin Transportation Action Committee, San Francisco Planning and Urban Renewal Association, Fairfax Taxpayers for Planned Progress, Civic Council of Tiburon and Tiburon councilmen, Belvedere Planning Commission and Council, North Marin Federation of Homeowners and Improvement Associations, Lynwood Park Improvement Association, Sierra Club, Homestead Valley Community Association, San Anselmo Homes Association, San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, Academic Senate of the College of Marin and San Anselmo City Council.

Organizations opposing Zucker were the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau, Tiburon Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, Marin Coast Chamber of Commerce, Associated Home Builders of Marin, San Francisco-Marin chapter of Civil Engineers and Land Surveyors, Irate Taxpayers of Marin, Sonoma-Marin Dairyman's Association, Marin Builders Exchange, Marin Property Owners Association and Marin Soil Conservation League.

Those who opposed Zucker argued that he was overly restrictive, uncooperative toward developers, and chased industry and commerce out of the county.

His supporters replied that a man who can stand up and say "no" to developers is needed if Marin is not to become another San Francisco Peninsula.

WHALE

ment scientists in the Bay Area also said they had been told not to discuss results of various tests.

The lung tests, done by scientists at the federal water pollution control administration field station in Alameda, revealed no evidence of oil in the lungs, it was learned. Similarly, scientists on the West Coast indicated tests on other organs from the carcasses of the whales showed no traces of oil.

The department spokesman in the nation's capital said of the biopsies done on the whales' lungs: "That means only one thing; they (the whales) didn't die of oil in the lungs."

He said a report on the lung biopsies and other tests and the government's conclusions on the cause of death of the whales would be announced in Washington, D.C., "early next week." He would not reveal the government's conclusions so far, saying, "all the results are not in."

Scientists in the field, meanwhile, were extremely doubtful that oil caused any of the deaths.

One government marine scientist in the Bay Area said it was "extremely unlikely" oil caused the deaths. "At least one of them was killed by a whaler," he said, adding that, in his opinion, the tests on lungs and other organs "meant damned little because whales wouldn't have breathed in oil any more than they would have breathed in water."

He said the oil conceivably could have caused a reaction on the whales' hides that caused them to die, "but I doubt it."

Scientists said the whale carcasses were in such badly decomposed states when they washed ashore that thorough and conclusive tests on the exact causes of death were virtually impossible.

The scientists in the Bay Area and in Seattle also maintained that the number of whales washed up this year was not unusual. Willkie said the number was not "terribly unusual or extraordinary according to the figures furnished us," adding that in both 1961 and 1964, a similar number of dead whales were found on California beaches.

"They can die from a variety of causes," one scientist said, "including disease, old age and negligence on the part of whalers."

Mountain Fair Dates Selected

The annual Muir Woods Mountain Fair will be held Sept. 27 and 28, members of the Muir Woods Park Improvement Association, sponsors of the fair, agreed last night.

The theme this year will be "Moon Madness," a club spokesman reported.

The association also discussed the continuing burglaries in the area and agreed to write Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos and Judge Samuel W. Gardiner about enforcement and disposition of the cases.

The association's annual kite day was scheduled for May 11 at the clubhouse.

Suspect Shot In Episode On Coast

A 34-year-old unemployed man was shot in the left leg by a sheriff's deputy at Muir Beach yesterday after the man reportedly stole a car, escaped from two deputies and then threatened to throw hand-sized rocks at the officers.

The man, Robert Charles Cohen, was taken to Marin General Hospital, where his condition was reported as good today.

Cohen, officers said, will be booked on suspicion of assaulting an officer, assault with a deadly weapon and vehicle theft.

Deputies James Spears and Michael Aitken were sent at 3:30 p.m. to the Muir Beach area to look for a man in a reportedly stolen vehicle.

They spotted the car on Shoreline Highway about one-half mile south of Green Gulch Ranch and signaled for the driver to stop. The driver, Cohen, headed east, swung around in the middle of the road and raced back to Muir Beach, deputies in pursuit.

Cohen was stopped at Lagoon Drive in Muir Beach. While spreadeagled against the car, Spears went to the sheriff's car to radio that added help was not needed, and Cohen escaped into the creek with Aitken after him.

Cohen came out of the creek with rocks in each hand, threatening to throw them, Spears reported. At this point both deputies began firing and one of the shots hit Cohen's left leg. It was not determined from which gun that shot was fired, Spears said.

Spears said the car, the second reportedly stolen yesterday by Cohen, is owned by Barbara Bowman of Muir Beach. Ownership of the first car was not immediately known.

Military authorities said he had broken away from his captors 18 days before he was spotted.

"I've escaped from the enemy. Give me something to eat," Van Putten told his rescuers as he jumped aboard the helicopter. Reduced to 121 pounds from 185 when he was captured, Van Putten gobbled down chicken with noodles, fruit cocktail and warm root beer the crew prepared. He called it the finest food "in all my life."

Van Putten probably would fly back to the United States tomorrow for a reunion with his parents, military spokesmen said. They refused to let him discuss his ordeal until he had been debriefed.

Floods Damage $30-Plus Million

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials estimated flood waters have caused $31 million damage so far in three Midwestern states, and one official said he felt people in an area downstream were treating the coming flood crests too lightly.

Civil defense and state officials made these preliminary flood damage estimates:

At least $5 million in Minnesota, where 700 families were still homeless.

About $19 million in South Dakota, where 5,000 families were evacuated and 1,000 remain homeless.

At least $7 million in North Dakota.

And the Civil Defense coordinator for northwestern Illinois says residents in his area, where the Mississippi is due to crest April 28, are taking the situation lightly.

"There's been so much publicity given protective works," said Donald E. Lemme," that people believe all they have to do is sweat this thing out.

The problem, Lemme said is a shortage of volunteers to patrol the dikes to watch for washouts.

Rolling Stone Still Has Its Usefulness

ST. JOSPEH, Mich. (AP) — Man's most productive tool — the stone — still has a place in modern industry.

In a factory here, triangular sandstones and automotive disc brake housings are dumped together into a rubber-lined chute vibrating 1,500 times a minute. The ensuing shakeup is violent enough to both effectively smooth out the 22 machined surfaces on each housing and wear out stones at the rate of 27 pounds an hour.

Czech Nuns Busy

PRAGUE (AP) — About 4,000 nuns work in social establishments in Czechoslovakia at the present time, the News Agency CTK reported. Apparently hospitals and homes are meant.

Teen-Agers Cited On Curfew Law

Two San Rafael juveniles — a boy, 16, and a girl, 14 — were cited to the sheriff's juvenile inspector for curfew violation after they were found at about 4 a.m. today sitting on a hill behind Merrydale Apartments in Santa Venetia.

Sheriff's deputies said that eight cartons of cigarettes and two bottles of bourbon, reportedly stolen in a burglary of the Dandy Market at 100 Merrydale Road between 1 and 4 a.m., were found in the bushes where the pair was hiding.

The market had been entered by breaking glass in the front door.

PLANE

dents and citizens staged rallies in the provincial cities of Chongju and Hoengsung to protest the shooting down of the American plane.

In Tokyo, a spokesman for Prime Minister Eisaku Sato said Nixon was justified in ordering fighter cover for U.S. reconnaissance flights over the Sea of Japan. Japanese opposition parties expressed fear, however, that such escort flights might provoke trouble.

U.S. airmen who took part in the search for remnants of the reconnaissance plane said that crewmen aboard two Soviet destroyers in the area had been "cordial" and cooperative, in radio exchanges.

On Thursday, a Soviet destroyer radioed "condolences on the loss of your aircraft" and arranged for a rendezvous to hand over debris it had picked up.

Potent U.S. naval forces, including the battleship New Jersey and possibly a pair of aircraft carriers, were reported steaming to new positions today to provide protection for American intelligence missions off North Korea.

The Pentagon announced redeployment of extensive forces Friday shortly after President Nixon ordered resumption of reconnaissance flights with the promise they will cease to be "fair game" for North Korean jets.

The New Jersey, which had been scheduled to arrive in Long Beach, Calif., today after duty off Vietnam, was ordered to turn around and return to the Western Pacific. The 16-inch guns on the world's only active battleship had been used to shell targets up to 20 miles inland in Vietnam.

While no announcement was made of the strategy to be used in providing protection for the reconnaissance planes, indications were fighters would be stationed where they could come to the swift rescue of any threatened U.S. aircraft. Fighters would be kept in the air during intelligence missions, but not flying wing-to-wing with the reconnaissance aircraft.

One carrier believed on the way to the Sea of Japan is the USS Kittyhawk which carries 90 warplanes. The Kittyhawk left Hong Kong with two destroyers earlier this week without any announcement of its destination.

There was no identification of a possible second carrier.

Another destroyer, the USS Tucker, was ordered back to Sasebo, Japan, with items of aircraft debris which had been found by search vessels.

Nixon revealed for the first time yesterday that the United States is capable of "reading" radar pictures of another country from miles away.

"We know what their radar showed," Nixon said. "We, incidentally, know what the Russian radar showed."

He said both showed that the EC121 was 90 miles offshore—well outside North Korean territory—when shot down. It has not been revealed whether the plane was shot down by cannon or missile fire.

Nixon said the plane had received orders to cut off its mission just before it was shot down. Pentagon sources indicated U.S. units had monitored North Korean radio messages ordering the pair of MIG jet fighters to attack the four engine, propeller driven American plane.

Resident Flees Blaze In Attic

A San Rafael man was driven from his home at 10 Clark Street last night when fire broke out in the attic of the two-story structure.

The occupant, Archie Varnesi, at first thought the sound of the fire was rain, but later saw the roof ablaze and called the fire department, according to a neighbor.

The fire, at 9:03 p.m., never got to the living quarters of the two-story wooden house, firemen said, although it was necessary to chop up much of the roof and attic to reach the blaze. The attic ceiling apparently caught fire from a fireplace flue.

Damage to the structure was estimated at $11,500.

DAVID L. ROGERS

Word has been received in Marin of the death April 2 in Las Vegas of David Lee Rogers, founder of the Baywood Press, now the Point Reyes Light.

Born in New Orleans in 1902, Rogers started his career in the newspaper business at the age of 12 as a printer's devil.

He and his wife, Wilma, by whom he is survived, founded the Bayside Press in West Marin in 1949 and published it for five years before selling it to Alvin Bartlett. The newspaper is now owned and published by Clara Mae and Don DeWolfe.

After leaving West Marin, Rogers sold printing equipment and published a paper at Auburn before retiring to Las Vegas.

U.S. Ambassador Flees Canadian Antiwar Group

VICTORIA, B.C. (AP) — The United States ambassador to Canada took refuge in a government office here yesterday after being pursued by a group of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators.

Harold W. Linder, who paid a 15-minute courtesy call on Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia during a visit to the province, found himself unwillingly leading the group of about 25 placard-toting protestors as he walked toward the province's museum after meeting the premier.

At one point, he turned to the leading demonstrator and said, "Get away from here."

The ambassador, in the company of Milton C. Rewinkel, U.S. consul-general in Vancouver, then ducked into the door of a nearby government building.

There was a brief scuffle as Rewinkel tried to slam the double doors and the pickets tried to force their way in.

Inside, civil servants unlocked a series of inter-office doors and the party finally emerged well down the hall from the demonstrators and made their way from the building.

Third Burglar Gets Sentence

The third of three men who had admitted breaking into a San Rafael cosmetics firm on Jan. 16 yesterday received the same sentence as his comrades had earlier.

Judge Harold J. Haley of Marin Superior Court ordered Jerry N. Okuma, 28, of San Rafael, to spend 20 days in the County Jail and placed him on one year probation.

He and Raymond Edward Lockhart, 21, of Corte Madera, and Thomas Joseph Smith, 21, of San Rafael, were arrested Jan. 16 in connection with the burglary of Synergistic Industries.

All three were ordered to make restitution to the firm.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Unwed Wife Left With Baby, No Husband And Bleak Future

DEAR HELEN:

Tod was good looking and all the girls wanted him. I wasn't anything much, but somehow he chose me—at least he said he was in love with me.

At 16, I was pregnant. My folks wanted us to marry, but Tod's parents wouldn't sign for him. To save my baby's name, and mine, my father insisted that Tod move in with us and tell everyone we were legally married.

I loved him even more after our little boy was born, but he started running around with another girl. We had a big fight and he left. I keep hoping he'll come back to me.

But meanwhile, what am I to do with my life? I'm supposed to be married, so I can't go out. Yet when I'm honest, I know Tod will never really marry me. I'm being true to a lie, and how do I get back to the truth, without ruining my reputation?

UNWED WIFE

DEAR U.W.:

You put across the marriage idea with surprising ease. So why not let the word get around that Tod has filed for divorce and you aren't contesting? Someday the truth will come out, but by that time you'll be more able to face it.—H.

DEAR HELEN:

These campus riots make me sick. There is no reason for violence. If the students don't like the way the college is run, why don't they go to a university that offers what they want?

PROUD STUDENT

DEAR HELEN:

What people don't realize about these college riots is that almost every change is accomplished by violence. The 13 colonies would never have separated from England nor would we have had the democratic system had it not been for violent rebellion. And how about our taking the good old U.S.A. away from the Indians? We never would have gained or maintained our supremacy as a world power if we hadn't used violence.

—STEPHEN

DEAR HELEN:

The best line on a recent television drama was, "A society that fears its children is very, very sick!"

We students have no respect for adults who are afraid of us. But we admire — and will listen to — those who will hear us out and are willing to work at compromise. We can learn a lot from them, and they can learn a great deal from us, too.

—JOHN

World's Most Creative Man Is Subject Of A.M.

With creativity stressed in modern pre-school education and learned seminars devoted to the subject, Dr. Richard McClanathan's talk yesterday on the world's most creative man — Leonardo Da Vinci — had special relevance to his Marin audience.

Speaking at the final program of the Family Service League's A.M. series at the Tamalpais Theater in San Anselmo, the doctor of arts stressed the great Renaissance man's belief in the power of man to understand life and his environment.

Dr. McLanathan, with the aid of his own slides, detailed the artist - inventor - scientist - philosopher's pioneer work in a dozen fields. Leonardo, he said, was the first to know functional anatomy and what the human brain was like; he engineered a canal system whose lock gates are the type still in use, designed a flying wing, a steam canon, diving suit, parachute, worked out the idea for a helicopter, invented the conical screw, designed advanced weapons, armor and the prototype to the tank, made musical instruments and devised the method for saturation bombing.

And Leonardo created some of the greatest paintings in history.

"Leonardo was the epitome of what creative man ought to be, as much an explorer as Columbus but he explored the area of the mind," explained the art historian, who is author of the book, "Leonardo Da Vinci."

Dr. McClanathan described the effect of the Florentine world on the teen-age apprentice there and the impact his lifetime of search for man's truth has had upon the world.

"He who does not value life does not deserve to have it," he quoted the man who constantly sought to reveal the inner life, the special psychology, of each individual in his painting and to understand his natural environment as well.

Leonardo, he said in summary, was the great precuser to the modern world.

Communication's Influence Reaches Entire Families

The television medium, its strengths and limitations, and the evolution of communication in "quantum jumps" — a phenomenon that has brought mankind to its present, highly sophisticated level of communication via television was discussed by Thomas Mullahey, public affairs director of KRON-TV at the Novato Branch of the American Association of University Women Thursday.

He discussed the development of communications, beginning with primitive man's utterances of sounds and expressive gestures. The Chinese used the pictograph to communicate. As an example, he said, picture two radicals together such as two married women under the same roof and you automatically receive a vivid communication.

WITHIN THE SEQUENCE of "quantum jumps" evolved the alphabet and phonetics. When Gutenberg developed movable print, a revolution in the dissemination of knowledge began. Books became accessible to the common people, but this form of communication became suspect by the intelligentsia who feared books in the hands of the masses might stir them to revolutions, related Mullahey.

Next the wireless linked nations and continents together and from the wireless the telegram became an important means of communication. The radio soon followed the wireless and was responsible for changing much of America's social and economic life, he said.

People looked forward to radio programs such as "Amos and Andy" and then the next day they enjoyed discussing the dialogue and characters with friends. This kind of program would be considered absurd in today's world, Mullahey said.

Television was transmitted as early as 1923, he said, but with the outbreak of World War II television suffered a setback and it was following the war when television began establishing itself in society and the responsibility for licensing had to be met through a commission. It was handled similarly to that of radio.

"PUBLIC INTEREST, convenience, and necessity" is the key phrase for licensing, he said. The licensee must be morally reliable, financially responsible and must have experience in communication, such as the newspaper business or publishing. Also the licensee must submit a sample of the month's programming and the segment of population he hopes to gain with each of these programs.

ACCEPTABILITY of program content is determined by the Federal Communications Commission, Better Business Bureau and the television code, Mullahey told AAUW members.

The National Association of Broadcasters has its own house rules and in some areas of programming such as commercials there is often difficulty in deciding what might be questionable good taste. What offends, some may not offend others, he said.

Mullahey said that children discriminate very well between what is fantasy and reality — that death viewed in real life has meaning and impact and children respond with awe and respect. However when children view death and violence in cartoons or westerns they realize the situations are fantasy.

There are two kinds of programming for children, he said. Those recommended by educators, which are good for children, and those which children want to watch. "It is our job to find out what children do like," he said.

PARENTS are still considered the best judges of what is good for their children so public opinion is very important. Even one well argued position stated in a letter directed to the station could effect a change in programming, Mullahey commented. There are only about 400 pieces of mail received monthly and over half of these are favorable.

Time For Sewing Formals Brings Mother's Questions

BY EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

We are trying to decide about what fabric to use for my daughter's formal for her high school prom. What fabrics are appropriate and is chiffon a good choice?

MRS. G. F.

DEAR MRS. G. F.

First, I would suggest you look at the ready-made formals to check for fabrics that are being used. I personally wouldn't suggest chiffon, first because of the difficulty in handling and secondly, because it is too old for a high school girl.

With the return of the truly feminine look, may I suggest embroidered organdy, pique, or voile? There are also lovely satin striped voiles, embroidered organzas, etc. One of the loveliest dresses I have ever seen was made with a soft, full skirt in voile. There were 6 vertical strips of 6-inch wide decorative ribbon stitched to the fabric before it was gathered at the waist. The bodice was solid colored linen to match the skirt and a contrasting color was used for the sash at the waist.

MRS. MARGARET E. VARDAMAN, San Diego, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her suggestion:

"If threading a sewing machine needle is difficult for you, break the thread that is already on your machine as it comes off the spool, tie the new thread on and gently pull it through. You'll find that it will even go through the eye of the needle and save lots of time and tempers."

DEAR EUNICE:

No matter what deodorant I use, I ruin everything I wear because of perspiration marks. I am forced to wear dresses with sleeves so that I may wear dress shields. Is there a solution?

MRS. M. M. S.

DEAR MRS. M. M. S.:

I can only offer a suggestion that has worked for some friends of mine. Before wearing a new dress, literally saturate it with the new water-repellent spray that is made especially for clothing. It won't spot or leave a ring on your fabric. After the spray has completely dried, carefully spray it again for the second time. After your garment has been cleaned, you must repeat this process. I would suggest you try the spray on a scrap of fabric before you take a chance with your new garment.

Silverthorne Faces New Banking Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Don Carlos Silverthorne will go on trial again May 19, facing additional charges of milking his San Francisco National Bank of up to half a million dollars before it collapsed in 1965.

Silverthorne, 69, of Tiburon, was convicted Feb. 18, 1966, on 12 counts of embezzling a total of $190,000 from the bank.

This conviction was overturned by a three-judge federal appellate panel on Aug. 27, 1968, on grounds publicity during his seven-week trial prevented his getting a fair trial "free from prejudice . . . or free from the probability of prejudice."

In setting the date for the second trial yesterday, U.S. District Court Judge William T. Sweigert denied a defense motion to dismiss the charges. He also allowed the government to include a new 40-count indictment charging fraud leading to the bank's collapse and accusing him of embezzling a total of $500,000 from the bank he helped found.

Silverthorne, who was sentenced to 60 years in prison and assessed a fine of $60,000 after his conviction, has been free on bail pending disposition of his appeal.

Guilty Plea To Morals Charge

Ronald Wayne Custis, 20, of Fairfax, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of indecent exposure in Fairfax municipal park Sunday.

Two counts of glue sniffing against him were dismissed.

Judge Hadden W. Roth ordered a probation report and told Curtis to appear for sentencing Friday.

Jury Convicts Weed Suspect

A jury in Marin Superior Court yesterday took less than an hour to find Henry Lee Quiroz, 24, of Fairfax, guilty of selling and possession marijuana.

Judge Thomas J. Keating set sentencing for May 19.

Quiroz, according to testimony during the three-day trial, was a hitchhiker who took a ride with a narcotics agent and then later sold him two ounces of marijuana.

Bruce Lauritzen Now Says More, Better

By LAURA DEVENDORF

SAN FRANCISCO — The two years since Bruce Lauritzen's last one-man show have been meaningful ones. The Marin artist's collages, exhibited through May 2 at the Pomeroy Galleries, 449 Pacific Avenue, are marked by a new consistency and growth.

The new Lauritzen isn't any less organized. His strong sense of order plays importantly in all his canvases, which are still primarily overlays of active geometric shapes. But Lauritzen's statement is now more current. He makes it with a more modern vernacular and a more concrete imagery.

MULTIPLE SERVICES

Now, from behind multileveled surfaces of wallpaper, Christmas wrap, cardboard and corrugated paper appear portions of ornately curled and flower-decked female figures — the sort associated with century-old advertisements and romantic illustrations.

Their flowery intent and their blown-up, black printing dots and lines create a visually stimulating dialogue with the geometry Lauritzen simply rested with in the past. And while his pure abstract canvases still have a mechanistic boldness, the ones containing figurative images have more personalized importance.

STRONG DESIGNS

Paintings such as "Cocktail," and "Purgatory" add these broken portions of the figure to Lauritzen's innate strength of design. They enhance it even more when glazed with overlays of paint or acetate and glow invitingly from behind raised foreground shapes, through holes or other starkly contrasted patterns.

These partially figurative pieces are the best visual summation of what has happened to this artist in two years. Translated into words it simply means his paintings are more interesting to see. They have more to say. And while still not free from others' styles and influences, the best of the new Lauritzen canvases have a quality that attracts the mind.

Sausalitan Made 'Copter Landing

The helicopter which made an emergency landing in a busy San Francisco intersection yesterday was piloted by a 34-year-old Sausalito man, Robert Hallbeck of 346 Pine Hill Road.

Hallbeck, who was piloting the helicopter for KGO radio and television stations covering the earthquake party sponsored by San Francisco officials was not injured

OPERA REVIEW

Dominican's Singers Conquer Difficulties

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Poulenc's "Dialogues des Carmelites," based on the martyrdom of 16 nuns during the French Revolution, was an eminently suitable opera for Dominican College, and the school's opera theatre gave it a fine performance — within necessary limitations — last night in Angelico Hall.

In three acts and 12 scenes, the opera was difficult musically and a challenge in staging. Vocally and dramatically it was well done by the young singers. Arthur Conrad solved the staging problems with starkly simple sets, few props and use of lighting and the cyclorama.

No movement was unmotivated, and snce the opera is rather static, the effect was often that of a series of tableaux. Authentic costuming added much to the visual impact.

UNDERSTANDING PROBLEM

The main difficulty was understanding the words, even though the text was in English. Fortunately the audience was large enough to dampen the echo in Angelico, but some diction was blurred. Because some of the singers, expecially the men, were more successful than others in this respect, it was not entirely a matter of acoustics. An English text with the program helped.

Soprano Darlene Brock, in the leading role of the fear-obsessed Sister Blanche, sang in a clear, strong voice with rather understated acting. A thin-edged quality in her voice was suitable to the character, but at full volume in the higest register it was piercing.

Near top professional level was mezzo Marjorie Broughton's portrayal of the death scene of the old prioress. It was by far the best work she has done. Joan Smith's light lyric voice and vivacious personality were ideal for the young Sister Constance. Especially pleasing in rich vocal quality and convincing in character were soprano Lorie Kutsko as the new prioress and alto Margaret Lee as the assistant prioress Mother Marie.

Powerful voices of fine quality were those of bass-baritone David Johnson — whose make-up was not old enough for Blanche's father, the Marquis de la Force — and of Melvyn Poll as his son. He occasionally put too much force into his singing and in two instances sang too much to the audience.

These two young men baritone Fred Lewis as the father confessor could almost always be understood. Edward Sherry and Douglas Thompson as officers of the revolutionary tribunal sang their parts well.

NEW INSTRUCTOR

There were many moments of musical beauty, especially a nuns' chorus in Act 2, Scene 2, thanks to the musical direction of a new dominican faculty member, Dr. Ted Blair, who provided the only accompaniment on ths piano in a strong, leading manner.

Not attempting to show any devastation of the chapel in Act 3, Scene 1, detracted from the terror preceding the executions but was probably unavoidable for practical reasons.

MUSICAL THRILL

Very moving and thrilling musically was the final scene in which the nuns' voices singing the "Salve Regine" stop one by one as each falls under the guillotine, until in a last minute, conquering her fear, Sister Blanche calmly walked to her death, the last martyr.

The opera will be performed again tonight at 8 o'clock.

Open House Date

A Public Schools Week open house will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at Strawberry School, Mill Valley, not Monday as reported Thursday in the Independent-Journal.

Warrant Issued In Auto Case

A bench warrant for Darlene Bissell, 29, of San Francisco, charged with car theft, was issued yesterday by Judge Hadden W. Roth of Marin Municipal Court when Miss Bissell failed to appear in court.

Gene Paul Laden, of 1 Marin Road, Fairfax, told police on March 5 he gave Miss Bissell permission to take his car to get groceries on Feb. 14 and he had not seen the car, Miss Bissell or the groceries since.

Bail on the bench warrant was set at $2,500.

MISS MARIN FOR 1969

Keri Lynn Wisgerhof, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Wisgerhof of 44 Jade Court, Novato, has won the title of Miss Marin for 1969 and will represent the county at the Miss California Pageant in June. ## Charge Is Dropped In Marijuana Case

A marijuana possession charge against Geraldine Faulconbridge, 21, of Sausalito, was dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court at the request of the district attorney's office.

Miss Faulconbridge was arrested March 20 when she went to the Sausalito police station to ask for return of items she said police had taken from her apartment at the time of the arrest of a 21-year-old man who had been living with her.

Toll Plaza Nod Goes To BART Firm

The building and operating committee of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District yesterday approved a proposal by a San Francisco engineering firm to submit plans and cost estimates for a $3.3 million expansion of the toll plaza.

The firm, Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quake and Douglas, designers of the Bay Area Rapid Transit System, was among six which made proposals to the committee, reported Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring. The plans and estimates are to be provided at no cost to the district, he said.

The expansion is to include a new roadway behind the administration building for southbound traffic and improved toll registry equipment.

An ad hoc committee appointed last week by the bridge board endorsed Luehring's recommendation that the number of board committees be cut from 13 to six. The recommendation will go before the full board at 10 a.m. Friday in district offices at the toll plaza.

GRIM FATHER — Bishara Sirhan, father of convicted killer Sirhan B. Sirhan, grips a newspaper recounting the trial of his son for killing Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. In his home in the Israeli-occupied Jordanian village of Taiyebah, Sirhan yesterday vowed revenge if his son was executed. (AP Cablephoto)

Sirhan Jury Unaware Of Threat By Father

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The jurors who choose life or death for Sirhan B. Sirhan will make their decision ignorant of his father's boasts that the young Arab "did well" to kill Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Nor will they know that Bishara Sirhan yesterday threatened "revenge on American politicians" if his son is executed.

For the seven men and five women who found Sirhan guilty of first degree murder last week this weekend differs little from the others they have spent for the last three-and-one-half months.

Starting yesterday they began the ritual of family visits, bus excursions in the country, and screenings of first run movies.

They looked at newspapers carefully stripped of the minutest reference to the man who shot Kennedy and wounded five other persons last June 5 in the Ambassador Hotel.

They were not allowed within sight of a television set nor earshot of a radio at any time when a newscast was occurring.

Monday they will be taken back to the Hall of Justice for the death penalty hearing, a peculiarity in which California law differs from that of most states.

The "second trial" is expected to take only two days—just about everything that could be said for or against Sirhan already has been said. They may consist of little more than oral pleas from the prosecution and defense. Then the jurors retire to deliberate.

However, Sirhan's chief defense counsel, Grant Cooper, is free to call more witnesses if he wants to, and some death penalty hearings have consumed more time than the trials that preceded them.

If the jurors choose death for Sirhan, he is on the road to California's lethal gas chamber at San Quentin prison. Appeals might easily stretch that last journey out for months or years.

If they choose life, Sirhan technically would be eligible to apply for parole in seven years. The average "life" sentence for murder in California in the past meant about 12 years of confinement.

Stockade Sitdown Called An 'Irresistible Impulse'

FORT ORD (UPI) — The 14 San Francisco Presidio GI's on trial here for mutiny had an "irresistible impulse" to demonstrate at the stockade last Oct. 14, according to their attorney.

San Francisco lawyer Terence Hallinan told the court yesterday that the young soldiers had "on the weekend of Oct. 11-14, an anxiety level up to the point where there had to be some release."

They won that release, he said, by staging a sitdown demonstration on the stockade lawn and singing freedom songs.

"Others in the stockade talked about breaking windows, setting mattresses on fire, even killing guards—but these young men didn't."

Hallinan said he would call in a row of psychiatrists as defense witnesses to prove the defendants were all in a "temporary psychotic state...of mass shock."

Most of yesterday's proceedings were taken up in a tough cross-examination of Pvt. Michael P. Marino, a crew-cut stocky 21-year-old from Vacaville, Solano County.

Marino admitted under questioning by prosecutor Maj. John F. Novinger that he gained 20 pounds during the month that was climaxed by the protest despite his complaints that stockade guards did not give him enough to eat.

The testimony by Marino, whose father is an Air Force sergeant, ended the second week of the current mutiny trial.

Fairfax Woman Hurt In Crash

A 22-year-old Fairfax woman suffered multiple cuts and two broken ribs last night when her car turned over several times and flipped of Highway 101 north of the Marin City exit.

Elizabeth M. Jacobsen of 2501 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard was reported in fair condition at Marin General Hospital today.

The California Highway Patrol said her car skidded out of control, overturned and landed in an ice plant yard 25 feet off the highway.

The English language has changed considerably in the past three centuries. When King James II described St. Paul's Cathedral as "amusing," "awful" and "artificial" in the 17th Century, the architect, Sir Christopher Wren, was not offended. The king simply meant that the cathedral was pleasing, awe-inspiring and skillfully constructed.

Logging, Pier House Hearings Scheduled

An interim ordinance against pier construction on Tomales Bay and a permanent ordinance to control logging in the Bolinas watershed will receive public hearings before the Marin County Planning Commission Monday.

The commission meeting will start at 9 a.m. on the third floor of the Civic Center.

Other items before the commission include a service station proposed at the corner of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Maple Avenue, Kentfield. Pierre Faure, owner of the property, seeks rezoning from the present apartment designation to commercial.

In the afternoon, the commission will consider large apartment projects planned on both sides of Seminary Drive in Strawberry. One is Villa Laguna, a 202-unit project on 11 acres north of Seminary Drive near Ricardo Road. The other is Strawberry Cove Marina, a 112-unit development planned on seven acres to the south of Seminary Drive. Developer L. B. Fleischman of Belvedere seeks rezoning of the property from single family to planned apartments.

Gallinas Village Improvement Association will protest a 56-unit apartment project planned by P. J. Tarrant on his property at North San Pedro Road and La Brea Way, the same site where Western Host Inc. tried unsuccessfully last December to gain approval of 55 apartment units. Tarrant proposes one and two-bedroom units, whereas Western Host had proposed three and four bedrooms.

Pill Blamed In Death

Novato Teacher Submits His Resignation

James D. Kimmel, the Novato High School teacher who was fired after being arrested Nov. 15 by Novato police on suspicion of buying and possession of marijuana on the school campus, has offered his resignation to the school district.

Kimmel has sent a letter of resignation that would be effective Nov. 18, three days after his arrest, according to Deputy Supt. Ralph Giovanniello. The letter will come before the school board Monday night, Giovanniello said.

Meanwhile, a preliminary hearing for Kimmel on the marijuana charges is scheduled to resume at 9:30 a.m. Thursday in Marin Municipal Court after twice being continued. Kimmel seeks a change of venue in the proceedings.

After being fired, Kimmel taught children at Ranch Olompali, the hippie colony twice raided by narcotics agents and since razed by fire.

Marijuana Suspect Enters Guilty Plea

Harry T. Fendler, 20, of San Rafael, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to possessing marijuana on Feb. 23. A charge of petty theft involving the shoplifting of two tape cartridges worth $13 from the Emporium was dismissed.

Judge Peter Allen Smith told Fendler to appear in Superior Court April 28 for a date to be set for sentencing.

Probation Granted In Marijuana Case

Franklin R. Leyshon, 24, of Fairfax, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to possessing marijuana Dec. 3 at his home at 125 Ridgeway Avenue.

Judge Harold J. Haley declared the offense a misdemeanor and placed the youth on one year probation. He also ordered him to pay a $187 fine.

COMPETITION FOR LOCH NESS?

Odd Beast In Las Gallinas Creek

By LARRY HATFIELD

Scientific circles here and in Scotland were all aquiver today at reports that a Loch Ness-type monster had been sighted in Santa Venetia's Las Gallinas Creek.

Scottish authorities, reached beside the Loch, said the Las Gallinas monster, described as eight feet long with a luminous tail, was definitely not related in any way to the fabled Loch Ness monster.

"Our monster has never gone out of Scotland as far as we know," they said.

California border guards agreed, saying, "Our strict rules and regulations regarding what can come into California would never have permitted such a creature across the state line."

The National Geographic Society, meanwhile, reportedly was considering importing some topless natives for local color so a special edition could be published on the creature.

The Las Gallinas monster was first sighted about two weeks ago by Fred Ullner, who spotted the creature from his dock at 59 Vendola Drive.

The latest sighting came just two weeks ago by Ullner and his neighbor, Mrs. William Thompson of 57 Vendola Drive.

"I saw this head sticking out of the water," said Mrs. Thompson, who was out watering her plants at the time. "I'd never seen anything quite like the wake it was leaving."

A while later, she said, she and Ullner saw the creature leave the water and slink into some bullrushes. "I couldn't have told you whether it had eight legs or none," she said.

Mrs. Thompson and Ullner agreed that the creature had a four or five-inch thick head, was about four inches thick in the body with a two-foot luminous tail.

A monster watch was conducted yesterday by Ullner, Fish and Game Warden Russell G. Ild, Lloyd Smalley, animal curator of the Louise A. Boyd Natural Science Museum and I-J photographer Bob Hax. It was not successful. The watchers theorized that the water was too rough for the monsters that day.

Ild was reluctant to guess what the creature was. "I am working on the assumption that it's somebody's loose pet," he said. A boa constrictor, for example, would come close to answering the description of the creature.

There are, he said, no native California snakes that reach that size. Furthermore, eels never get that big either and besides, it's the wrong time of the year for eels in Santa Venetia.

"I certainly hope it's a water animal," said another neighbor, Mrs. Donald Kinderman of 61 Vendola Drive, obviously hoping the creature would stay in the water.

She had not seen it, she said, "But I'll certainly be looking for it."

Two 8-year-old neighbor girls were asked what they would do it they spotted the creature. "Scream," they said unhesitatingly.

Until now at least, the creek has been a swimming hole for neighborhood children.

Most Vendola Drive residents were not at home during the monster watch. One who was, shut the door in a reporter's face after saying, "What are you, some kind of nut?"

Ambulance Delay Reported After Cycle-Car Crash

Two San Rafael youths were treated for minor injuries at Marin General Hospital Thursday afternoon after waiting 25 minutes for an ambulance to remove them from an accident scene, it was reported yesterday.

William Randall Tobener, 17, of 26 Beach Drive, was treated for a scraped forehead and sprained right foot and Thomas Marion Woods, 16, of 75 Briarwood Drive, for a broken bone in his right hand, a hospital spokesman reported.

The two were injured in a collision between Tobener's motorcycle and a car driven by Beatrice Hamilton Bong, 59, of 208 Knight Drive, San Rafael, police said. The accident occurred at 3:10 p.m. on South San Pedro Road east of Loch Lomond.

The Marin County Communications Center reported it took a Bay Cities Ambulance Co. (formerly Doctors Ambulance Service) ambulance 25 minutes to reach the scene because the vehicle went from San Rafael to the accident by way of North San Pedro Road.

The communications center noted the call was not an emergency, but reported the ambulance firm had been told the accident was on South San Pedro Road and had been given identifying landmarks nearby.

Burglary Results In Jail Sentence

Thomas Chassereau, 19, of 180-B Cherry Street, Petaluma, yesterday was sentenced in Sonoma County Superior Court to four months in the county jail for burglary.

Chassereau had pleaded guilty before Judge Lincoln F. Mahan to the Feb. 9 burglary of the Bernard E. Eldredge school, Petaluma, in which a tape recorder and record player were stolen.

STRANGE ACCIDENTS

A Pie Bites Back; Snail Takes Swim

LONDON (London Express) — A meat pie that's been sitting around too long in the heat may be dangerous, for food poisoning germs may lurk inside. But you would hardly imagine a fresh meat pie provoking an accident.

But it did happen to a woman in Fort Worth, Tex., with a court awarding her nearly $5,000 in damages after the pie had put her out for the count. She said that when she bit into the pie, her false teeth shattered on a piece of metal. Fragments of the teeth stuck in her throat, she fainted and fell heavily to the floor, injuring her back.

Then there was the Scot's housewife awarded substantial damages some years ago after a nervous collapse brought on by seeing a snail crawl out of a mineral water bottle.

These freak accidents are happening just when they are least expected. For instance, a woman was sitting in her second floor Boston apartment. A car in the street below suddenly hit a pedestrian, knocked off one of his shoes and hurled it through her open window. It struck her sharply on the head and she had to have hospital treatment for scalp wounds.

In Boston, too, Mrs. Helen Easton had a still more unpleasant accident. She decided to switch on her TV set as she began to clean her flat. As she cleaned, she caught her hand in the back of an enormous old settee — and could not free it. The more she tugged the more her hand swelled — and the more it was trapped.

The blaring TV drowned her screams—and she was trapped for two days before a postman rescued her. During this time she had neither food nor water. There was a bowl of fruit on the table—but, like the telephone, it was just out of reach.

It was a French huntsman near Amiens who suffered injury at the hands —or rather feet — of a rabbit. He had put down his gun to pick up the rabbit after wounding it. It made a leap and landed on the gun which went off, hitting the hunter in the leg.

A similar accident happened to a sportsman in Jutland, Denmark. He was driving home from a rabbit shoot with only a single dead hare to show. Suddenly his gun went off from the back seat and pellets pierced his back. He thought the hare he had "killed" was dead, but it was only stunned. When it regained consciousness, it kicked its hind legs against the trigger of his sporting weapon. He was several weeks in the hospital.

Here is a happier animal accident. One day at the Brenner Pass, Leopold Stovcek, an animal trainer with an Italian circus, had to explain at the Austrian frontier post that two days earlier his elephant had seized his passport from the table with its trunk and had chewed it up. Officials let the trainer and his elephant enter Austria.

A fantastic accident proved fatal to a South African farmer, his wife and son in 1956 on their land in Natal. Shooting at a bird sitting on the overhead power lines supplying their farm, the bullet severed two wires which short-circuited and set fire to the grass. His wife threw a bucket of water over the exposed wires and was electrocuted. His son tried to beat out the flames with a branch, stumbled across one of the wires and was killed instantly.

It was near Pretoria the following year that a tortoise caused a serious traffic pile-up. Ambling along on to a main road, it caused a woman motorist to brake sharply. A car behind her slammed into her and another into that one. Eventually seven cars were piled up, plus two trucks, and a gas tanker which ran off the road. Meanwhile, the tortoise slowly wandered into the pasture on the other side of the road.

Six thousand miles away in Kalamazoo, Mich., at that time there was another strange multiple accident. Sneezing violently, a car driver lost control and crashed into another car. The cigarette he was smoking fell from his lips and he forgot it.

A tow truck was called to remove his car and while on tow flames broke out from the cushion where the cigarette had fallen. Stopping at a fire station, the driver got the flames extinguished. The tow was resumed and the wrecked car was parked in the garage yard. Three hours later flames again broke out and the vehicle was completely gutted.

Among the unique flying accidents where a flier's life has been saved by a miraculous coincidence, one of the most remarkable happened to Capt. J. H. Hedley, an observer in a Royal Flying Corps plane on the Western Front in France in January 1918. As the plane was attacked in a running fight, Hedley was dislodged while the machine was making a sudden vertical dive.

He fell several hundred feet in a direct line with the aircraft, alighted on the tail and was brought safely to earth from a height of some 10,000 feet.

Another incredible accident happened in February, 1891, when the crew of the American whaler "Star of the East" attacked a large sperm whale from two rowing boats. The whale overturned one of the boats and two sailors vanished.

When the whale was captured and cut up, one of the missing men, Jim Bartley, was found in the stomach—alive.

He said, "The whale threw me into the air. I found myself in a slippery channel, then a sort of large sack. Then I lost consciousness."

So . . . the Bible story of Jonah's accident with the whale could have happened.

Two Drunken Drivers Fined

Two men have been sentenced by Judge Hadden W. Roth of Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving. Both were placed on six months probation.

Clifford Joseph Pagano, 43, of 208 Devon Drive, San Rafael, was fined $150. He was arrested April 7 on Highway 101.

Kenneth A. Calvillo, 27, of 151 Morningside Drive, San Anselmo, who was arrested Dec. 8 in San Anselmo, was fined $75.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Disuse, Abuse Rust The Body; More Care Can Delay Aging

VAN DELLEN

Heart transplants and immuno suppressive drugs seem to generate more interest than learning how to delay hardening of the arteries via diet, exercise, not smoking, and maintaining normal blood cholesterol levels.

Few of us will fall heir to a new heart, yet every year almost a million of us die or are disabled by circulatory disorders. Hardened arteries are forerunners of a heart attack, our number one killer.

MANY PEOPLE accelerate the aging process and encourage early senescence by leading a sedentary existence, and by eating, drinking, and smoking too much. Anyone who lives long enough cannot escape senescence, but why hurry the process?

Gluttonous eating adds weight and encourages atherosclerosis via the cholesterol route. Limit animal fats and supplement the diet with vegetable oils and spreads. There also are many good cholesterol-lowering products, such as clofibrate, thyroid extract, and nicotinic acid.

EXERCISE IS IN the limelight today as a popular cardiovascular conditioner. It is becoming extremely important in the treatment and prevention of cardiac disease because it improves the blood flow and the efficiency of the heart.

Walking, jogging, tennis, swimming, and golf are advisable because they enable the heart to perform the same amount of work much more economically than the unconditioned organ.

Cigarette smoking is considered our greatest health hazard and an important cause of premature aging. It has been said that the reason tobacco does not hasten the aging process is that smoking often causes an early death.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

NO PILL ROLLING

T. G. writes: Could a person have Parkinson's disease without hand tremors and the pillrolling movement of the fingers? All my body muscles are stiff. When walking along, I get to running in short steps and can't control this maneuver unless I stand still.

REPLY

Parkinsonism can be present without the manifestations mentioned. However, with symptoms such as yours, other neurological disorders must be considered. This is important, because a new remedy for the disease is available. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on parkinsonism.

THICKENED TOENAILS

A reader writes: My father had horny toenails and now I am getting them. Are these an inherited trait?

REPLY

The only horns that are inherited are those that develop on deer, goats, gnus, and allied animals. Thickened and horny toenails usually come with age, and more so when circulation to the lower extremities is curtailed. The condition can be controlled.

PINNING BROKEN HIP

R. M. writes: I've heard of a new technique for repairing a broken hip in which pins are shot into the hip. Is this method better than the old one?

REPLY

The pins are hammered, not shot, into the hip. When this is done the broken bone usually is exposed or the procedure is done under the X-ray.

LIQUID INTAKE AND OUTGO

A reader writes: Does a person pass as much fluid as he drinks?

REPLY

Yes. The intake is approximately the same as the output via the kidneys. Water consumed in solid foods is roughly proportional to the amount lost via perspiration and exhaled air.

SONS PERPLEX MOTHER

Mrs. Y. writes: My 2-year-old son pounds his head against the crib at night before he falls asleep. As if this isn't enough, my six-year-old picks his nose until it bleeds. What's wrong with these children?

REPLY

Nothing, and if they never acquire any worse habits than these, consider yourself lucky. The head banging will stop soon and a little guidance will go a long way toward making a little gentleman of your six-year-old.

Today's Health Hint — Floors should be free of spots of oil, grease or water.

Church To Welcome New Senior Minister Tomorrow

Rev. John O. Najarian of Salem, Ore., will officially assume the role of senior minister of the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo at tomorrow's 10 a.m. service.

The church, one of Marin's largest Presbyterian congregations, has been without a senior pastor since the resignation last summer of Dr. Henry Kuzenga, who left for duties as chief pastor of the Beverly Hills Community Presbyterian Church.

On March 2 the congregation voted to call Reverend Najarian who has been senior pastor of Salem's Westminster Presbyterian Church for nine years.

For the new pastor it is a homecoming to Marin. In 1957 he received his bachelor of divinity degree from the San Francisco Theological Seminary.

A native of Fresno, Reverend Najarian received his bachelor of arts degree from Fresno State College in journalism in 1954. He then entered the San Anselmo seminary.

Following his seminary graduation he served rural congregations in Oregon before being called to the urban Salem church late in 1959.

For his first sermon tomorrow, he has selected as his topic, "When Is the Church?"

Commenting on the issues facing the church today, he said one of the greatest challenges was to "provide some sort of stability in regard to the changing world and yet still be able to be alive to the issues of today and to minister to them as a church."

"In other words, one foot in the past and one in the present without rocking each boat."

Active in both church and civic affairs in Oregon he is past moderator of the Willamette Presbytery as well as serving in leadership positions within the area's synod; past vice chairman of the Salem Human Relations Committee plus key roles in the city's family life education committee and family council service.

His wife, Daisy, and three children, Susan, 12; Beth, 6, and John, 5, will join him in May. They will reside at 115 Oak Springs Drive in San Anselmo.

POPE MAKES DAILY BIBLE READING PLEA

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI has urged Roman Catholics to read the Bible daily.

"It is not only priests, religious brothers and sisters who should have the Scriptures, read them, meditate on them, and meet Christ our Lord daily in this way," he said.

Speaking to delegates this week of the conference of Catholic Biblical Associations, the Pope stressed "the fundamental importance of God's revealed word in all that we do and say."

Youth Set Dialogue Atop Mount

Youth of Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church of Tiburon will hold a two-day "dialogue on the mountain" tomorrow afternoon atop Mount Tamalpais.

Accordint to Rev. Calvin G. Frisch, church pastor, the outing will offer exchange of ideas on the current "generation gap" between the youth and adult members of the congregation. As well as to explore ecumenical aspects with Father Pruett.

The hike will begin at 1:30 p.m. Participants, hikers and non-hikers, are asked to bring a picnic lunch. The meeting is open to all interested persons.

Library Is Presented Late Bishop's Books

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A portion of the library of Bishop Benedict Joseph Flaget, first Roman Catholic Archbishop of Louisville, has been presented to the Catherine Spalding Library here.

The 2,000-volume collection includes Bibles with woodcuts dating from 16th Century, handwritten histories and leatherbound classics.

CAPITOL LOBBYIST

Pastor Admits His Title 'Has Bad Taste To It'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Rev. Glen A. Holman has a title that he admits "has a bad taste to it." He's a lobbyist.

As director of the California Church Council's office for state affairs, Holman is the legislative advocate for 20 Protestant denominations in Northern California and 16 in Southern California.

The former executive director of the Sacramento Area Council of Churches, Holman has handled lobbying activities for the statewide organization for a couple of years, but only on a part-time basis.

Now he spends full-time working from a small office in Westminster Presbyterian Church a couple of blocks from the Capitol.

"In the past," he said, "the state council's lobby activities have been limited to putting out a newsletter."

He still puts out the newsletter, but adds, "We're taking a more active role."

Besides meeting personally with the legislators in their offices, the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) minister corresponds with them and arranges witnesses for committee hearings.

"We don't try to go over there and say, 'We've got the solution and you guys better listen,' " Holman said. Instead, he uses the soft sell and points to the statement of legislative principles adopted by the church council.

Formulating the 17-point statement, he said, is one way for church people to be involved in the legislative process. The statement covers nearly every area of social concern, from labor relations to sex education.

"During the social revolution so far the church has been pretty uninvolved," he said.

"But part of the role of an active church is trying to bring about change. I believe that was Jesus' intention—not to create a big institution but to be out where the people are."

Holman has to live with the title of "lobbyist" which he admits "sort of has a bad taste to it."

Historically, he said, the lobbyist has been the source of much information which a legislator uses to make his decisions.

"We need to educate the people away from the idea that a lobbyist represents a special interest group with an economic gain involved in legislation," he said.

Holman operates the council's Sacramento office on a budget of "less than $20,000 a year." He doesn't believe in doing his lobbying over dinner and cocktails.

"I seldon even take anybody out to lunch," he said. "They are all available in their offices, and they really don't expect that of us."

Methodist Actors To Present Drama

The Methodist Actors Serving the Church will present a drama, "Even the Hater" at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at the church, Camino Alto and Sycamore Avenue.

The drama by Albert Johnson concerns the effect of love as understood in the New Testament by means of a Cain and Able-type conflict between two brothers.

Membership On Increase Again

NEW YORK (UPI) — The number of church members in the United States increased during 1968 but they comprised a smaller percentage of the total population than in 1967, according to the 1969 Yearbook of the American Churches, published by the National Council of Churches.

Religious affiliation increased 666,454 in 1968 to a total of 126,445,110.

This was 63.2 per cent of the total population, compared with 64.4 per cent in 1967.

Most of the increase—603,423 by Roman Catholics, whose current total the yearbook places at 47,468,333.

Church Slates Annual Session

The Mill Valley Methodist Church will hold its annual church conference next Sunday from 2 to 6 p.m.

Presiding at the session will be Dr. Joyce Farr, Redwood Empire District superintendent.

The agenda will include election of officers, annual reports and a critical review of the past year's work.

TO LECTURE — Jane O. Robbins, a Christian Science lecturer, will discuss today's "identity crisis" in a talk at 8 p.m. Thursday at the First Church of Christ Scientist, 1 Magnolia Avenue in Larkspur. She is a member of the Mother Church's board of lectureship.

Church Parish Honors Rector

Rev. Tod W. Ewald, rector of Holy Innocents' Episcopal Paris of Corte Madera, was honored last Sunday on his 20th anniversary of his ordination into the Episcopal priesthood.

The event, organized by Mrs. Robert C. McGowan, was held in the church's parish hall. Reverend Ewald has served the church for all of his 20 years as a priest.

Mrs. Ewald was also honored for her work in the parish.

Program Of Music

The brass sextet of the Western Baptist Bible College will present a program os sacred instrumental music at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at the Calvary Baptist Church of Larkspur, Baltimore and Holcomb avenues.

Bibles Are Given Away--Page By Page

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A businessman is giving away some $4 million worth of antique Bibles—page by page.

"I donate 12 mounted pages to any church, hospital or organization that will display them," said Stanley S. Slotkin, 60, founder and president of Abbey Rents Co. of Los Angeles.

"I started giving them to churches years ago," he said. "But they locked the Bibles up and only showed them one day a year."

The collector said he wanted people to be able to appreciate the various types of printing, parchment and design of the Bibles.

"So I decided to disassemble the books," he said.

"I have each page mounted on a reproduction of the title page," Slotkin explained. "At the bottom of each title page I type a short history of the Bible—the date and place it was printed, where I found it and the reason it was printed."

The values of the Bibles have been rising at about 10 per cent a year since Slotkin started collecting them in 1945.

Slotkin's interest in Bible collecting came by chance when he was a serviceman in Germany at the end of World War II.

"Right after World War II, people in Germany were selling all kinds of antiques," he recalled. "One woman took me to her home and showed me a 1524 Martin Luther Bible. I bought it for $50."

Slotkin left Germany with about a dozen Bibles that cost him about $700. "Now they're worth over $175,000," he added

After that, he continued his Bible collecting and now has 250,000 Bibles stored in boxes in the basement of his home office in Los Angeles.

The famous Gutenberg Bible is a favorite subject of the Bible expert. He said just 42 of the original 250 Gutenbergs are remaining all over the world.

"The last one was sold to the United States Senate Library for $5 million," Slotkin said, "and I own the page with the 23rd Psalm from one of those Gutenbergs."

Slotkin also collects ancient medical books. He was in Pittsburgh this week to donate Bible and medical pages to Allegheny General Hospital and the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary.

He also gave Duquesne University a 24 by 36 inch sheepskin of a Gregorian chant, handprinted in 1140.

Indian Dances To Be Performed

A group of Kiowa Indians from Oklahoma, led by Frank Ahkeabeo, will present full-costumed tribal dancing, at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians, 240 Channing Way in San Rafael.

Ahkeabeo will describe use of ceremonial expressions used by the dances as well as tell of the special problems facing today's Indian population.

The service will be held on the church grounds.

THE UNITARIANS CARRY NO LABELS

1961 Merger Does Away With Belief That Jesus Is The Divine Son Of God

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The Unitarian Universalist Association, formed in 1961 by the merger of two older denominations, has the distinction of being the only church in America which includes in its membership a substantial percentage of avowed atheists.

There are, of course, practical atheists—people who live as if God did not exist—in virtually all churches. But only in the Unitarian Universalist fellowship is one likely to hear atheism frankly and freely professed, by clergy as well as laymen.

You can imagine the shock a Lutheran congregation would sustain if its pastor announced from the pulpit one Sunday that he had decided to dispense with prayer because he no longer believed in a personal God. But there was hardly a ripple when Rev. Duncan Howlett, pastor of the largest Unitarian Universalist church in Washington, D.C., made that announcement to his congregation not long ago.

NO OFFICIAL CREED

Since the association has no official creed and no creedal test for membership, there are no statistics on how many of its clergy and lay members share Dr. Howlett's theological posture. One estimate, which is probably as good as any available, is that about two-thirds of the 167,000 members are atheists—that is, they hold some concept of a personal God.

Since the early 19th Century, when the two movements were separately launched in New England, Unitarians and Universalists have rejected the belief that Jesus is the divine Son of God. But they continued until comparatively recently to regard Jesus as the supreme human teacher of God's will.

Since their merger in 1961, however, they have abandoned the Christian label and no longer claim for Jesus any particular preeminence over other great religious teachers such as Moses, Buddha and Confucius. The present constitution of the Association states that its aim is:

"To cherish and spread the universal truths taught by the great prophets and teachers of humanity in every age and tradition, immorially summarized in the Judeo-Christian heritage as love to God and love to man."

LIBERAL ELEMENT

The Unitarian movement flowered in New England after 1819 under the leadership of William Ellery Channing and Ralph Waldo Emerson. It began as a liberal wing of Congregationalism, but soon became a separate denomination.

For a time it threatened to engulf the long-established Congregational churches. Within a few years, 125 of New England's leading Congregational churches, including 20 dating back to the days of the Pilgrims, turned Unitarian. Thomas Jefferson, who was greatly attracted to Unitarian ideas, predicted that within a generation every American would be a Unitarin.

This forecast proved to be quite wide of the mark. The movement never grew larger than 200,000 members, but it enjoyed a prestige far exceeding its size because among its mememberes were such notable leaders of early America as John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, John Marshall, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Henry David Thoreau, and John Greenleaf Whittier.

The theology of these early American Unitarians was rather conservative compared to the views which prevail in the Association today. Dr. Channing habitually spoke of Jesus as "our Savior," and the first constitution of the Unitarian General Conference said that "these churches accept the religion of Jesus."

To be sure, the salvation which Dr. Channing ascribed to Jesus was not a matter of being saved from eternal punishment—in which he did not believe—but of being liberated by Christ's teaching and example from the enslaving power of sin in his life.

CONCEPT OF HEAVEN

But there was room in early Unitarianism for the concept of heaven (as a "state" rather than a place) and for the belief that the Bible, while not infallible, was a trustworthy vehicle of God's self-revelation.

From the start, however, the Unitarian movement placed its primary emphasis on "practical religion" exhibited in compassionate service of mankind, rather than on defining dogmas and enforcing orthodoxies. And that emphasis is still the predominant characteristic of the merged Association.

The first Universalist church in America was organized at Gloucester, Mass., in 1779.

Under the leadership of Hosea Ballou, Universalist churches evolved a theology which emphasized faith in God's "all-conquering love" and acknowledged Jesus as the supreme human revealer of God's will and purpose of mankind.

HIGHER EDUCATION

For a small denomination, which never had more than 75,000 members, the Universalist churches were remarkably productive in the field of higher education. Among the famous American colleges and universities founded by Universalists are Tufts, St. Lawrence, Goddard, California Institute of Technology, and Lombard (now part of the University of Chicago).

Although they take a laissez-faire attitude toward theological doctrine, Unitarians and Universalists are passionate believers in social justice. No religious group in America has worked longer, harder or more courageously to eliminate war, poverty and racial discrimination. In any liberal organization working for social progress, you are likely to find a dedicated cadre of Unitarians and Universalists.

There are about 1,050 Unitarian Universalist congregations in the nation at present. Although they can be found in all areas, their heaviest concentration is on the East Coast, from New England to Northern Virginia. National headquarters are in Boston.

the last move

It is said there is a painting of a chess game called "The Last Move." The devil is shown grinning at a young man. The youth had gambled with the devil for the "joys" of the world, and the next move would lose the game and his life.

The last move!

A famous chess champion studied the picture. Then he said: "I will make the young man's move for him."

A chess board was set up exactly as it was in the picture. He made the move which the artist had not seen as possible. The devil lost the game!

If such a champion had come to save the young man, not just in a picture, but in life, would he ever forget the one who saved him?

An even greater Savior has won the victory for you! And it cost Him His life!

He calls us to Himself.

POLICE PROBLEM

What To Do With A 27-foot Boat?

By JERRY MEGAHAN

One of the less publicized functions of any local police department is to maintain a repository for lost items which are turned in by finders almost every day.

Most of the items found in the average police department's property room are banal but some stations in Marin County have received some highly unusual items.

The biggest lost property in recent months around the county was reported to the Corte Madera Police Department on April 4 by Burl Salsman of 187 Golden Hind Passage.

Salsman found a 27-foot cabin cruiser adrift and engineless in San Clemente Creek and moored the cruiser on the mudflats near his house. The Corte Madera police couldn't quite fit the cruiser into their property room, but they kept an eye on it for 10 days until the owner showed up.

In Southern Sonoma county, Petaluma policemen like to play around with a walking cane with a sword concealed inside it. The item, which would be difficult to forget, has never been claimed.

In Sausalito, someone turned up at the station last year with a strayed tombstone. Sausalito police traced it via county death records and phone calls to local funeral homes and found out the stone was missing from Olema Cemetery. A sheriff's deputy picked the stone up and took it to its proper resting place.

Mendacity has become a popular pasttime of late but there are still some honest people around, according to the Tiburon Police Department. They found that out when a newspaper delivery boy came into their office sometime around Christmas and left a diamond ring he'd found.

The ring was later claimed by a woman who had recently moved to the United States, police recalled. She told police the ring was an heirloom, some 70 or 80 years old.

Police sometimes find themselves wondering just how some items manage to get lost in the first place. Mill Valley police recently went through a siege of false teeth being found around the city streets. The best explanation anyone in the department could come up with on that was that partying people had a bad habit of walking around with their mouths open on their ways home from the pub.

In the Petaluma Police Department vault, lost license plates far outnumber any other items. "Most of the plates fall off cars and people have them replaced by the State Department of Motor Vehicles and never think of asking us," said Lt. Henry Eslick.

However, most police departments usually find themselves swamped with such prosaic items as keys, sweaters, sunglasses and bicycles.

Smaller departments don't have so much trouble. "This is such a small place I can usually find out to whom the found items belong," said Cotati's police chief.

However, police stations in larger cities sometimes have a problem. "We have quite an accumulation now," said Officer Patricia Harper of San Rafael. "We auction the bikes off when we have too many but the rest just stays. A lot of it is worthless but you never know when someone is going to come in, looking for something they treasure."

Most larger police departments unload accumulated found items by auction once a year or whenever the property room gets too full. And you never know when you might need a swordcane or a 27 foot cabin cruiser.

Color TV Taken

A color television valued at $430 was taken from the home of Marjorie Manwaring on Morrison Road, Ross, sometime Thursday afternoon, Ross police reported yesterday. Entrance was made through an unlocked sliding glass door, police said.

Petaluma March Felonies Listed

4-19 petaluma police report

Petaluma police have reported that 81 felony offenses were committed during March, with 17 of them solved through arrests.

Police Chief Larry D. Higgins said 17 burglaries were reported with two solved; three auto thefts with all recovered but no arrests; and 60 thefts with 15 of them solved.

A total of 236 offenses was reported and 597 complaints received. The police investigated 35 traffic accidents, 11 of which included injuries.

There are 100,000 species of spiders in the world.

Sheriff's Deputies List Seven Home, Store Thefts

Seven burglaries were reported yesterday by the sheriff's department.

Burglars who removed the panes of a louvered window at the home of Robert C. Miller at 87 LaVerne Avenue, Homestead Valley, on Wednesday took $35 in coins, officers said.

Dorothy M. Rota of 240 Highland Road, San Rafael, reported that someone had entered an outside storage cabinet at her home Wednesday and taken a case of champagne and several tools.

Raymond Hill of 1995 Indian Valley Road, Novato, told officers that when he returned to his car in the parking lot at College of Marin Wednesday evening, he found that a police radio monitor, 50 rounds of ammunition, an electric razor and about $5 had been stolen.

A house trailer belonging to Burnell Van Dalsem of 4 Garden Avenue, Santa Venetia, was broken into yesterday while it was parked at a service station on North San Pedro Road and stereo tapes and an overnight bag stolen, officers said.

The owner of the Terra Linda Laundromat told deputies Wednesday that when he arrived for work he found that six coin boxes and a coin changer had been broken into and about $200 stolen.

A burglar who used a crowbar to force open a sliding glass door at the Church of the Nativity in Marinwood Wednesday took $20, two pipes and a gold watch belonging to the vicar, Rev. David C. Barnett, according to deputies.

On the same day Joseph Theodore Poiesz of 90 Bayview Drive, San Rafael, reported that his home had been ransacked and a German automatic pistol, two radios and $200 in cash taken.

Burglars Open School's Safe

Burglars pried their way into San Clemente School sometime during the night and succeeded in opening the school's safe, Corte Madera police reported.

The safe was overturned and the bottom pried off, according to school officials who estimated the loss at $40.

The coke machine in the teachers' lounge was also entered and about $10 gone, school officials said. Other rooms, too, were entered but it was believed nothing else was missing.

Young San Diego Pitcher Gets Sweet Revenge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The third time proved a charm for San Diego Padres' rookie right-hander Al Santorini, a young man who has pitched exclusively against the San Francisco Giants in his brief major league career.

Santorini worked the first seven innings last night and held the Giants to one run and five hits, as the Padres went on to a 3-1 victory—their first over San Francisco after four losses.

The win was Santorini's first in the major leagues, coming in only his second start. Last year, while with the Atlanta Braves, he made his debut against the Giants and was a loser after being belted for three unearned runs.

"I worked three innings," Santorini recalled, "and got myself in trouble in the third by dropping Ron Hunt's pop for an error. Willie McCovey then hit a 420-foot three-run homer and that was it."

Santorini gained some revenge on McCovey, holding the slugging first baseman hitless in three trips. McCovey, who went 0-for-4, was held hitless and without an RBI for the first time this season.

"I had an operation (bone chips in right elbow) in 1967," the pitcher disclosed, "so it's taken a while for my curve to come around. I didn't have it in Atlanta—and you have to have a curve when you face the Giants."

In a relief appearance against San Francisco Sunday, Santorini yielded two runs.

Last night, he was staked to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Roberto Pena and Ollie Brown, a pair of passed balls and Clarence Gaston's two-run double.

The two-base hit was the first extra base smash for San Diego in 35 innings. Ex-Giant Ollie Brown's 410-foot triple and Gaston's sacrifice fly made it 3-0 in the fifth off loser Ray Sadecki, 1-1.

Jim Hart's walk, Jim Davenport's single, a wild pitch and Hal Lanier's run-scoring grounder ruined the shutout bid in the seventh.

"Santorini was getting tired," explained manager Preston Gomez. "But anytime a 20-year-old kid can hold San Francisco to one run, he's done a helluva job."

With two away in the ninth, Padre reliever Frank Reberger walked pinch-batter Don Mason, then struck out Willie Mays to end the game. "I got Mays on a fastball inside," said Reberger.

Novato Rips Tam, 21-1, Tops League

Redwood Also Romps By 19-1 Landslide

The muddled Marin County Athletic League baseball race unraveled like a first-grader's picture puzzle yesterday as four teams went into action tied for the lead and only one came out still sitting on top.

That happens to be Novato High School, the preseason favorite to win it all anyway. The rest of the erstwhile pretenders all got sidetracked, ambushed and mauled in a day of surprises, balloon-sized scores and good pitching.

Novato, now 4-1 in the won-lost standings mauled Tamalpais, 21-1 and that's no misprint. Neither is the 19-1 licking Redwood handed Sam Marin. And Terra Linda got a distinct shock at the hands of Drake, 6-3 while San Rafael nicked Marin Catholic, 3-1.

Novato, San Marin, Tamalpais and Terra Linda had all shared the league lead earlier in the week.

QUICK LEAD

Novato jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the first inning as Russ Dillon tripled, Barry Berrington doubled, Stexe Majka singled, Bob Helbing doubled and Mike Jobson singled. And the worst was yet to come as the Hornets scored 16 runs in two innings, eight each in the fourth and fifth.

Tom Zechlin, Berringer, and Helbing each drove in three runs and Berringer had a perfect four-for-four day in breaking out of a slump.

BACK IN FORM

Steve McNally showed he was back in form by twirling a neat two-hitter to get the Novato victory.

For San Marin, winner of three straight at one time, the Cinderella shoe continued to hurt as light-hitting Redwood went at three Mustang hurlers with glee, getting 21 hits, including three home runs.

Jim Peters led the barrage with four hits. Ken Roby, Pete Cooney, Frank Pamilia each

Athletics To Try Again

KANSAS CITY (AP) — With Reggie Jackson on the bench and Charles O. Finley out of town, the Oakland Athletics try again today to play their first game here since they unceremoniously moved west.

The one-time Kansas City Athletics and the brand-new Kansas City Royals were rained out last night, forestalling for a day the boos the Athletics are almost certain to hear from those who were their fans until last year.

Jackson, who led the A's with 29 homers last year, was benched Wednesday in favor of young Tommy Reynolds and the rookie came through with two hits. Manager Hank Bauer said he will start Reynolds against Royal left-hander Steve Jones today.

NO PLATOONING

Jackson, who has been striking out frequently, will be used against right-hand pitchers, but he is not thrilled about being platooned.

"I don't like it," he says. "I want to play every day. I'll tell you one thing, I won't be platooned. I mean I'll be back in there."

John "Blue Moon" Odom, 1-1, Finley, the man who moved the A's out of Kansas City, is not expected to be around for the series, which winds up with a doubleheader tomorrow.

Busy, Impressive Kuhn Commands A Second Look

Bowie Kuhn is the kind of name that commands a second look. The man who answers to it also commands a second look. He is baseball's new commissioner and he is physically impressive at 6-5, 222.

When Kuhn was first contacted about the commissioner's job during the Christmas holidays by the Yankee's Mike Burke he wasn't interested. As a member of the New York law firm of Wilkie, Farr and Gallagher, Kuhn already was making better than $100,000 which the commissioner's job offered.

"I told Mike I didn't want the job," says Kuhn. "I preferred they give it to Burke or Chub Feeney."

But American and National League owners couldn't choose between Burke and Feeney and Kuhn became the unanimous choice of the owners. Kuhn's lifelong interest in baseball prevented him from turning down the job.

A Long Line Of Ancestors

Kuhn comes from a line of ancestors that include two former governors of Maryland. One branch of the family gave its name to the tract of ground where Bowie Race Track now stands.

Kuhn, now 43, grew up in Washington, D.C., where he was scoreboard boy at Washington Senator games. ("A dollar a game, two dollars for double headers," he recalls).

He tried to be a baseball pitcher but never made it at the varsity level in the Ivy League where he attended Princeton. After Princeton, he got a law degree at University of Virginia and at 23 joined the New York firm founded by the late Wendell Willkie.

He Knows Jargon Of Baseball

"Lou Carroll, attorney for the National League, is a member of the firm and I told him I'd like to assist him on baseball cases," Kuhn said.

Carroll still is the National League attorney but it was Kuhn who argued many cases, including a successful defense against Milwaukee's antitrust suit resulting from the league's shifting of the Braves' franchise from Milwaukee to Atlanta.

Kuhn, unlike his predecessor Gen. William D. Eckert, speaks the jargon of baseball and he doesn't need cue cards or a program to identify the players. He visited virtually every major league clubhouse this spring in Florida and Arizona. He since has visted the ones he missed in opening day ceremonies.

Kuhn's participation in Candlestick Park's opening day ceremonies marked his ninth ceremonial inaugural in the past 10 days.

On April 7 he was in Washington for the opening in the national capitol. Tuesday April 8 was a doubleheader for the commissioner — Detroit in the afternoon, St. Louis in the evening. Wednesday April 9 he participated in Cincinnati's observance of baseball's 100th anniversary.

A Busy Slate Of Opening Days

It was San Diego April 10, Seattle April 11, Montreal last weekend, New York, April 15 for the Yankee Stadium opener and finally the Candlestick opener Thursday.

When Kuhn took the commissioner's job he weighed 235. He really doesn't mind the 13 pounds he's lost but he smiles when he says: "I don't have much time for those good meals I used to enjoy so much."

COKES BATTERED IN 13

New Welterweight King

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cuban refugee Jose Napoles waited five years for his title shot and when he got it, the fight proved no contest as he hammered Curtis Cokes into submission after 13 rounds for the welterweight crown.

With his eyes swollen shut, Cokes simply couldn't see to continue fighting and although the boxer wanted to go on, manager Doug Lord asked the bout at The Forum last night be halted.

"I knew about the 10th round when he didn't like those left hooks to the body that I was winning," Napoles declared through an interpreter. "I followed our plan of keeping Cokes in the center of the ring and not let him fight off the ropes."

Napoles, who now calls Mexico City his home, weighed 143 to 145½ for the champion, and stood an inch shorter. Cokes had two inches in reach but that didn't help. Napoles kept boring in with his relentless attack.

"I just couldn't get off," the ex-champion said through swollen lips. I just couldn't get started. Yes, I'd like a rematch."

Lord said, "You'll see a different Curtis Cokes in a rematch. If you don't, I'll retire him."

Cuco Conde, the new champion's manager, said they had agreed to give Cokes a chance to get the 147 pound title back but it remained undecided if the fight would be in the United States or Mexico City.

A crowd of 15,878 at the Forum paid a gross gate of $195,480, a new California indoor record surpassing the $193,000 drawn by bantams Lionel Rose of Australia and Chucho Castillo of Mexico last winter.

Cokes collected $80,000 and Napoles $20,000.

A top lightweight contender before he grew into a welter, Napoles now has a record of 53-4 including 38 knockouts. For Cokes, trying to defend the title a sixth time, it was his 10th loss against 55 victories.

"He was strong and intelligent and I knew he wanted to fight me coming off the ropes, but I wouldn't let him," explained the 29-year-old champion, two years younger than Cokes.

The Texan got over right hands that shook Napoles a couple of times, once in the tenth, but never could follow up the punches. The Mexico battler put his foe on the ropes repeatedly during the latter stages, but never could put him down.

At the end, referee George Latka had scored the bout 11-1 as did judge Joey Olmos. Judge John Thomas had it 10-2 under the California system of awarding from one to five points to the winner of a round.

In a five-round middleweight preliminary, middleweight Mike Quarry, brother of heavyweight contender Jerry, made his pro debut by outpointing James Dick of Los Angeles.

In supporting 10-rounders, Halimi Gutierrez, 114½, Mexico City, outpointed Shigeru Tarumizu, 114, Tokyo, and Richie Sue, 127½, Portland, Ore., outpointed Franke Crawford, 128, Los Angeles.

Archer Picks Trevino In Tournament Of Champs; They're Tied For Lead

RANCHO LA COSTA (AP) — U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino and Masters titleholder George Archer, tied for the second round lead in golf's $150,000 tournament of champions, pick the same man to win it—Lee Trevino.

"You have to pick Trevino," said the gangling, 6-foot-6, Archer. "He's the best driver on the tour. He says he only leaves the fairway to go to the phone. That's about right.

"And that's what you have to do to win on this course, stay in the fairway. The rough is really rough."

"If my driver stays like it was today," Trevino said yesterday after shooting a second-round 68, four under par. "I'd say I like my chances very much.

"You've got to keep it in the fairway to win and I can hit it as straight as anyone else."

Trevino, seven shots back going into the second round, and Archer, who has a pair of 71s, are tied at 142 going into today's third round on the 7,114 yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course.

Just one shot back at 143 are Gene Littler, who had a second round 68, South African Gary Player, 49-year-old Julius Boros, the PGA champion, and dynamic Arnold Palmer.

Player, Boros and Palmer all had second round 74s.

First round leader Dick Lotz, a 26- year- old Californian, dropped back with a 78 for 145, while bulky Jack Nicklaus shot himself out of contention with a whopping 80, one of the poorest rounds in years for the golden bear. He has a 36-hole score of 153, 11 shots off the pace.

Trevino, who missed only one fairway, opened with a bogey when he was in a trap, then rallied with four birdies, rapping in putts of 8 and 15 feet, chipping to within four inches at No. 2, and reaching the par five 12th in two and two-putting.

Archer had five birdies and four bogeys, all of the latter coming when he got into the deep rough. His birdie putts were from 20, 20, 20 and 18 feet, and he reached one par five in two.

Littler had a surprising round, going eight under par on the first 12 holes, then collecting two bogeys and a double bogey on the last six.

He included two eagles on his out-going nine when he matched the course record of 30, six under par. One was a 135 yard eight iron shot, the other a 75-yard wedge shot.

Marin Track Team Beaten

College of Marin's thin and outmanned track squad performed creditably in its "home" meet against Santa Rosa Junior College at Tamalpais High School yesterday, but still lost, 84-51.

The Tars did the most with what they had. Distance ace George Stewart ran a torrid 4:14.8 mile, third-best in Northern California and won the two-mile in 9:37.2.

Paul Vanderbilt pole vaulted 12-feet 10-inches, the top mark in the Camino Norte Conference to date. Paul Leete turned in two victories, winning the long jump in 20-4 and the triple jump in 42-0 and John Rowe took the shot with a 46-9¾ toss. The Tars also won the mile relay in 3:35.0.

Tired, Old Celts Back On Top Again

(UPI telephoto)

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, written off as tired old men just a short time ago, are back in familiar surroundings—the title round of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Acting like the old pros they are, the Celtics won the Eastern Division playoff for the 12th time in 13 years by hanging on for a 106-105 victory over the New York Knicks last night in steamy Boston Garden.

The Celtics, who have won the NBA championship 10 times since player-coach Bill Russell entered the league and became a defensive genius 13 years ago, managed only one victory in seven starts against New York during the regular season.

Boston finished fourth in the East and the cry went up: "The Celtics are dead." But the Celtics were playing possum in their own way, aiming for the playoffs.

After finishing off Philadelphia in the Eastern semifinals, the Celtics whipped the mighty Knicks 4-2 in the best-of-seven finals. Now Boston will mark time while Los Angeles battles Atlanta in the Western Division.

Los Angeles can wrap up the series in the fifth game tomorrow.

"I'm glad that's over," Russell said wearily after playing his usual 48 minutes in the finale against New York. "The Knicks were tough, a real good team. We had to go all out."

Russell scored 12 points, grabbed 21 rebounds, blocked a half dozen shots and set up teammates for baskets although he had to play cautiously after picking up his fifth foul at the three-minute mark of the fourth period.

"I had to let Mike Riordan drive as I couldn't take a chance on getting a sixth foul," Russell said. "It makes it a tougher game. If I had just three or four fouls, I could try to stop him. And if I stopped him once, he wouldn't come back."

Riordan, an unheralded reserve, helped bring the Knicks back from a nine-point deficit midway through the finale and finished with 15 points.

Sam Jones, humiliated by being held to just 12 points by New York in two previous games, was the key man in nailing down the victory. The 36-year-old veteran, retiring after this season, scored 29 points, the last a crucial free throw with three seconds left.

"Anytime you end a series with a win you feel great," Jones said as he took the victory in stride wtih the rest of the Celtics. "Does this give me any extra pleasure at the end of my career? I stopped getting pleasure out of playing basketball when I joined the Celtics. It's been a lot of hard work."

New York Coach Red Holzman congratulated Russell and shook each Boston player's hand in a visit to the Celtics' dressing room.

"You guys were the greatest," Holzman told Russell. "It was good basketball the whole series."

Before looking ahead, Russell commented:

"We can take a little rest now. We won't play again until Wednesday night at the earliest."

drove in three runs while Cooney, Tom Wickert and Ross Gondak blasted homers.

Roger Smith hurled a three-hitter for the win.

MASTERFUL JOB

Stan Liljenquist turned in a masterful no-walk, three-hit job against Terra Linda while Dave Alvarado and Al Tyler had two-run singles for Drake, with Alvarado getting his off reliever Mike Timmel, who had taken over for starter Jerry Goodrick.

Terra Linda had gone ahead on a three-run fifth inning, with help from three Drake errors, but the Pirates came right back with four runs in their half of the inning.

San Rafael's Chris Rowland, who hurled a no-hitter against Marin Catholic last year, got a two-hitter this time. Steve Henriksen's two-run homer in the fifth inning, his first league hit of the season, was the margin of victory for San Rafael.

MARIN LEAGUE

Three-Way Tie For Swim Title

The 1969 Marin County Athletic League swim races are over, but there's been no clear-cut decision.

Redwood High School handed Tamalpais' varsity and Class B teams their first losses yesterday to throw both races into a three-way tie at season's end.

The Giants of Larkspur topped the Tam Indians of Mill Valley in the varsity meet, 56-39, with Ken James and Bill Roark winning two events as James did a fantastic 4:07.9 in the 400 yard free style.

The Tamalpais Class B team fell, 60-35.

That left Tamalpais, Redwood and Novato tied for the varsity title with 5-1 won-lost records and Tamalpais, Redwood and Terra Linda tied for the Class B title.

In other action yesterday, Novato gained its first place tie with a 68-27 thumping of Terra Linda, while Drake nicked San Rafael, 48-44.

Marin Softball Star Honored

Rightfielder Gary Swarm of the Sohner Tree Service softball team of San Anselmo was named "player of the week" in the Golden Gate Travel League for his play against San Leandro in last weekend's league-opening action.

Swarm turned in several outstanding defensive plays in addition to going four for seven at the plate and driving in three runs to pace Sohner to a pair of triumphs.

The San Anselmo team won its seventh and eighth games without a loss this year by sweeping a doubleheader Thursday night in the Petaluma "A" League.

The Treemen dumped the Sebastopol Merchants, 5-2, in the opener and nipped the Rose Bowl of Santa Rosa, 2-1, in the second game.

Morey Swarm hurled the first game victory and helped his cause with a triple and a two-run homer.

Padres Release Catcher Gonder

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Diego Padres released catcher Jess Gonder last night to reach the 25-player limit.

Gonder's release was necessitated by the acquisition of infielder Tommy Dean and pitcher Leon Everitt from the Los Angeles Dodgers in exchange for pitcher Al McBean.

Oaks Host Bucs Tonight In Playoff

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Oaks meet the New Orleans Bucs tonight in the first game of their second-round American Basketball Association playoff series at Oakland Coliseum Arena, 8 o'clock.

A dispute over when the second game would be played was settled with a compromise yesterday. The Bucs had wanted Sunday with the Oaks preferring to wait until Tuesday. They agreed on Monday.

Both clubs were extended to the full seven games in their opening-round series and now are meeting for the Western Division title and the right to play the Eastern Division winner for the league championship.

'BEST SHOOTERS'

The Bucs finished 14 games behind the division-winning Oaks during the regular season but Oakland Coach Alex Hannum calls them "possibly the best shooters in pro basketball."

The Bucs are led by Jimmy Jones, fourth leading scorer in the ABA during the regular season with a 26.6 average, and center Red Robbins, the league's third leading rebounder.

Oakland's Warren Armstrong was the leading scorer during the Oaks's first playoff series against Denver, scoring an even 200 points in the seven games.

Today is Saturday, April 19, the 109th day of 1969 with 256 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. The morning stars are Venus, Saturn, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Mercury.

On this day in history:

In 1775 the American Revolutionary War began.

In 1933 the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1951 Gen. Douglas MacArthur, fired from his command in Korea by President Harry S Truman, told Congress, in part, that "Old soldiers never die, they just fade away."

In 1967 former West German chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, died in Bonn at the age of 91.

A thought for the day: American author George William Curtis said, "While we read history, we make history."

Schools Prowled In Santa Venetia

Employees at two schools in Santa Venetia have reported that they found burglars had broken into the schools when they arrived for work Thursday morning, according to sheriff's officers.

At Gallinas School a window had been cut and a door pried open. It was not known if anything had been taken.

A janitor at McPhail School found that a door had been pried open and several offices entered. He thought that possibly a typewriter was missing.

Deliberate Trump Of Ace In Dummy Leads To Five Hearts

In recent years the American Contract Bridge League has prepared hands to be played in all sections of North America during national tournaments, like the big 10-day tournament recently held in Cleveland. One of the most startling of these hands is shown today.

Opening lead — ♠ 4

When West leads a spade, South doesn't know what to discard from dummy. If East has Q-x-x of diamonds, declarer can win a finesse with the jack of diamonds, cash the top diamonds and eventually discard a club on dummy's last diamond (which will then be good).

If East has the ten of clubs and either two other clubs or perhaps 10-x-x-x-x of clubs, declarer might lead a low club from dummy to force out a top club with the nine. By careful play he might win two club tricks, discarding a diamond from his hand on dummy's extra club.

To avoid throwing away a potential trick on the opening lead, South must discard a trump from dummy. In other words, South deliberately trumps his own ace in the dummy.

CHOOSES MINOR SUIT

After drawing trumps with the ace and nine, South must guess which minor suit to develop. He has an extra chance if he starts with clubs rather than diamonds.

Declarer leads a low club from dummy and tries a finesse with the nine since this will work not only if East has the ten but also if West has the doubleton A-10 or K-10. West can take two clubs, but cannot get the third club trick.

FREE FINESSE

If West then switches to diamonds, South gets a free finesse and can use dummy's last diamond to discard his losing club. If West leads another spade (instead of a diamond), dummy ruffs while South discards a diamond. South cashes the top diamonds, ruffs a diamond and returns to dummy with the queen of trumps to discard the losing club on dummy's last diamond.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1-no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ K 10 7 4 3 2
♦ Q 10 4
♣ A 10

ANSWER: Bid four spades. Since you have nine points in high cards you know that the combined count is 25 to 27 points, which should be enough for game. You should be safer in your six-card major suit than at game in no-trump.

Supervisors Take Sensible Approach To Logging

From time to time, we have castigated the Marin County Board of Supervisors for being dilatory. However, we think the board is to be commended for deciding to take 90 days to come up with some sensible regulations regarding logging.

The supervisors on Tuesday were besieged by about 100 conservationists who were upset because logging operations have begun on the Ethel Righetti property in West Marin. The protesters, had immediate visions of the cut extending to Bolinas Ridge, removing trees that not only provide beauty but also help prevent erosion and flooding.

The conservationists' approach was, as usual, highly emotional and simplistic. They wanted the supervisors to pass a law: no logging in Marin.

THE SUPERVISORS are aware they are in no position to pass any such law. If a man owns property that is covered with timber, he pays taxes on that timber. If he can harvest none of it, he is being taxed for a benefit he cannot reap. This is certainly injustice.

In such case, the property owner would be denied his constitutional rights through seizure of his property without compensation — for if he were not allowed to cut the trees, they would have no dollar value to him. He could then rightly demand that all the taxes he had paid on that timber over the years be refunded.

THE COUNTY CAN, however, adopt strict regulations on logging. And it can, if it wishes, set aside certain areas where timber may not be cut, even though on privately owned land. This can be done on the same principle that enables the county or city to require that houses be set back from the street line, that landscaping be provided on commercial or industrial property, etc. The owner of the land is placed under such restrictions to its use as are deemed necessary for the public benefit — but without preventing his use of his own property for his own benefit.

With some such approach in mind, the supervisors clamped a 90-day "freeze" on new logging operations. During the 90 days, the county planning department is to draft an ordinance setting up a natural resources protective district on Bolinas Ridge. This will contain controls over logging, as well as quarrying, mining, and drilling.

THIS IS A SENSIBLE approach. Three months is a short time to deal with such an important matter. And a 90-day "freeze" can work no real hardship on owners of property in which the value is in trees.

How well the proposed ordinance will satisfy the property owners and the conservationists remains to be seen, of course. It is probably a foregone conclusion that neither will be completely satisfied. But neither should expect to be.

LOGGING OPERATIONS call up a lot of rather thoughtless resistance. The sight of big, beautiful trees falling to the chain saw starts the adrenalin flowing, and the viewer is likely to overlook a few things.

For one thing, anybody whose property has its value in trees cannot afford to have that value destroyed. It is in his interest to assure future crops — just as the farmer must look ahead to next year's crop while he harvests this year's.

Since trees do not grow in a single year, the approach is to harvest only part of the crop at one time, and to plant seedlings which will grow in the shade of those trees left while they start becoming the crops of future years.

This has been worked out quite scientifically, and the whole Northwest, with its great forests, is evidence that timber lands may be made to yield almost continuously. The day of utter destruction of forests to provide the lumber needs of the moment is far in the past.

For another thing, the forests themselves can be made both more beautiful and more beneficial by some cutting. Unkept forests, like unkept back yards, are likely to become jungles of uncontrolled undergrowth, with the desirable plants stunted or even killed by them. When a timber crew moves into a grove, it perforce clears away the "snags" of fallen limbs and undergrowth to get at the trees. The jungle then becomes a more open grove. The saplings grow more rapidly. It is possible to wander among the trees where formerly the way was blocked. The fire hazard is greatly decreased. And so on.

Measures to control timber cutting so that it can be beneficial to all — including the conservationists — are well established. It should not be too difficult to incorporate requirements for them into a county ordinance.

ONE THING BOTHERS us about the current logging outcry — apart from the unreasonable "pass a law to ban all logging" demand. That is that the supervisors have asked only for an ordinance applying to Bolinas Ridge. This is the emergency, stop-gap response so common at all levels of government.

An ordinance to control logging throughout the county has long been needed. Such an ordinance should be put in the works now — although it need have no 90-day time limit for preparation.

This would be planning. It is for such things, we should think, that we have a county planning department.

The Instinct For Trees

Much thoughtless destruction of trees goes on in Marin, but probably a bit less than in most of the world because, being tree rich, we are tree/-conscious. When a tree is thoughtlessly cut down, all of us are losers of an intangible something which cannot be measured in monetary terms.

Perhaps man has a natural feeling for trees which is part of his heritage from the time he was an arboreal creature. Just as birds build nests and spiders make webs without being taught, might not man have a portion of a gene which urges him to love trees?

But man has strayed far from the forests. Some urban kids seldom see a tree. In Marin, at least, the tree-loving instinct (if such be) is fulfilled.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

"I just found out that your husband is in the hospital," sympathized a lady's friend over the phone. "What's the matter with him?" "It's his knee," explained the lady grimly. "I found his new secretary sitting on it."

A group of literature profs and graduate students at a Pacific Coast university became embroiled in a heated argument some years ago over the exact meaning of one of William Faulkner's most famous stories, "The Bear." Finally one prof suggested they pool their resources and phone Faulkner himself way down at his home in Oxford, Miss. They got him, too. "Mr. Faulkner," began the professor breathlessly, "we're calling to ask you to tell us the real meaning of your great story, 'The Bear.'"

Faulkner paused a moment, and answered, "It's a huntin' story" — and hung up.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Why Gym, Field Took Precedence

In talking with citizens of Marin regarding the tax election which was held April 15, I found many of the people of the community particularly questioning two of the past decisions of the Marin Junior College District.

These are, first, why was the physical education complex built before other important learning centers?

The answer is that the old gymnasium was destroyed by fire in the afternoon of Dec. 16, 1963. A physical education facility was needed more than any other structure.

The second question which has been asked is, why was a new football field built when we had one already?

The answer to that is that the district badly needed space for the new science building in an area that would tie it in with other learning centers, including the library, and bring the campus community closer together. Also, the new football field location would ultimately make it easier to accommodate automobiles of spectators of the sports events to be held on the campus.

Combining Art Shows Good Idea

Your editorial of April 12 concerning the thought of unifying the various art shows which take place in Marin was enlightened.

With the temendous potential for cultural enhancement which can be achieved at the Civic Center site, it is important that ideas such as your be pursued.

LINES ON LIVING

If You'd Be Accepted, First Accept Yourself

By Rabbi
HAIM KEMELMAN

The bitter cry of the generations for self-acceptance is the wailing trauma of our age also.

The need to get along with one's self is not satisfied by the comfort, convenience and luxury of modern sophistication. And easy access to a good time is not necessarily the gate of promise to the good life. Moreover, the many choices and possibilities of our free society and the rapid changes in our culture make of our conscience a crippled culprit.

IS SELF-ACCEPTANCE still possible for us moderns? It is, if we learn to meet ourselves on our own personal terms, knowing our limits and surrendering to our limitations. We must leave the world of goods and gods that are worshipped by the faceless and nameless masses as we cling to the personal choice of our conscience as our supreme guide and light.

The non-self conformity, whether it be new or old, must not corrupt our individual taste and choice. Neither must we compete against anyone but ourselves in setting up attainable goals and practical standards of self-fulfillment.

If we demand too much of ourselves, we will be cruel and inconsiderate of the limits of our individual nature and capabilities. And if we expect too little of ourselves, we will fall short of our potential gift for development and growth and remain unfulfilled. In either case, the torment of the soul will prove unbearable and unpardonable.

THE WISDOM of ages, as the necessity of our time, whispers to us in edifying refrain: Be yourself, trust yourself by allowing your personality to unfold totally into the man you want to be. Be gentle with yourself. Don't tear yourself apart by doing what is not in your nature to be doing. Don't permit grudges, petty frustrations and past wrongs to consume your vital powers with guilt, to envenom the healthy circulation of your relationships with others.

Forgive yourself, for you are only human; and if you can't put up with yourself, how can you expect others to befriend and tolerate you. Be good to yourself; for if you have the right attitude toward yourself, you will know it and the whole world will not fail to recognize it, as you will reflect a right attitude toward others as well. It will be imprinted in the large writ of your conntenance and dispositiona nd dipped in the clear conscience of your soul.

You are a personality in your own right, in your unique God-given grace. You must not have an image personality borrowed from others.

SAY WITH Noel Coward and believe what you're saying: "My importance to the world is relatively small. On the other hand, my importance to myself is tremendous. I am all I have to work with, to play with, to suffer and to enjoy. It is not the eyes of others that I an wary of, but my own. I do not intend to let myself down more than I can possibly help, and I find that the fewer illusions I have found myself or the world around me, the better company I am for myself."

You may not set the world on fire, but you can save it from becoming a cosmic torture chamber by saving your soul and by becoming what you are destined to be — yourself. If you like in yourself what you have, you may someday have in yourself what you like in others.

Old Game Of Divide, Conquer Working For Campus Anarchists

WASHINGTON — As the uproar on the campuses grows with each pasing day, the threat to the whole structure of higher education is an ominous cloud on the academic horizon. A little band of extremists in one university after another sets the pace with some form of violent confrontation. All too often bumbling, entrenched authority responds with arbitrary action that enlists the moderates on the side of the extremists.

So what to do? If the erosion continues there will be more conflict, more violence, with the end result resembling what has happened in Japan. The University of Tokyo, which is rated as Harvard, Yale and Princeton rolled into one, was closed for nine months. In a highly competitive society this was a blow to thousands of young people.

REP. EDITH GREEN of Oregon, chairman of the special House subcommittee on education, is putting in a bill to create a federal office that would offer campus mediation resembling the labor mediation service. A mediator could enter a dispute on the request of any of the three parties of interest — students, faculty or administrators.

A student group could be represented once it had obtained signatures of 20 per cent of the student body on a petition.

The initial reaction to Mrs. Green's proposal among educators and members of Congress has ranged from polite hope to frank skepticism. Students on the far left would make every effort to obstruct such mediation. The activists in Students for a Democratic Society hold that government has lost its legitimacy. They carry their fierce opposition to every facet of the establishment. They mean to bring it down. So, say the doubters, such a measure would be futile.

AT THE OTHER END of the political spectrum doubts are grounded in a conviction that students have no right to demand a part in administration. As a prominent trustee on the board of a distinguished New England college put it in response to student demand for a definition of the trustees' duties and responsibilities:

"Let 'em read the charter. They can find out there what we do and the rights we exercise."

So it appears unlikely that the mediation measure will have much of a chance between these two poles of opposition.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Green deserves marks for trying to find a way to avoid the confrontation that the extremists are playing for in every situation. On the survace, at least, hers is a reasonable proposal.

ANGER at the anarchic behavior of the students is bound to take a political form. The shape of that is increasingly clear. As in California, following the series of blowups at Berkeley, both faculty and students are to be disciplined. Gov. Ronald Reagan is riding high on the crest of the reaction. Liberal Democrats say despairingly that, with the middle mass of the voters enraged at the obstructionism of the small minority of extremists on the Berkeley campus, Reagan is a shoo-in for reelection next year.

This, of course, is exactly what the activists on the left want — a showdown between the two extremes. The moderate middle, confused and disorganized, will not come down on the side of reaction. Something like this appears to have happened at Harvard, with Students for a Democratic Society celebrating a triumph.

Divide and conquer! It is an ancient tactic with modern attachments. In a society increasingly polarized between extremes this is no threat to be laughed away as though it were a panty raid.

Maybe It Would Work Better If Secretaries Went To Meetings

WASHINGTON — The idea of having cabinet wives attend President Nixon's cabinet meetings may have several virtues, but it also has its drawbacks. Even if nothing happened at the meetings, I would still hate to be a cabinet officer when I got home that night.

"Well," the cabinet officer's wife says, "you hardly opened your trap during the entire meeting."

"But, dear, the President didn't call on me."

"And why, may I ask, didn't the President call on you? Your department is as important as anybody else's. I was so embarrassed with you just sitting there having nothing to say."

"IT SO HAPPENS that some days I do all the talking. Unfortunately, you were there on the wrong day."

"A likely story! I'm not sure the President even knows what you do. The least he could have done is let you read a report or something. If you don't have any pride, I do."

"You're overreacting. Several of the cabinet officers didn't have anything to say either. There's only so much time in a cabinet meeting, and we have to discuss what the President is interested in."

"DID YOU SEE the smug look on Mrs. Laird's face when her husband was explaining the Soviets' first-strike potential? And did you see Mrs. Rogers react when her husband said he didn't believe the Soviets would use it? I just had to sit there like a dummy."

"I think you've got the idea of these cabinet meetings all wrong. The President invited the wives so they will get more interested in their husbands' jobs. I should have thought you would be intrigued with that."

"I would have, if I had found out what you did. As far as I could tell, the only contribution you made to the cabinet meeting was to spill a pitcher of water when the secretary of the treasury gave his report."

"DEAREST, it was an accident. Bob Finch spilled his water and you didn't see Mrs. Finch get mad."

"I only got mad when I realized that no one had even noticed you did it. That's how much attention they were paying to you."

"You're oversensitive. Everyone in that room knows the job I'm doing."

"Then why was Mrs. Nixon staring at me as if she didn't know who I was?"

"She knew who you were. You were sitting next to me, weren't you?"

"But maybe she didn't know who you were."

"GOOD GRAVY! I didn't realize you took everything to heart. The whole point of the exercise wasn't to show each other how bright we were. We were conducting the nation's business."

"You could have said something about inflation."

"I could have said something about the ABM or the Middle East or the Poverty program. But what good would it have done?"

"It would at least have let Mrs. Agnew know who you were?

"I frankly thought the meeting went pretty well."

"Well, you can say what you want to, but I'm not going to attend another one of those 'bring-your-wife-to-the-cabinet-you will ask for the flor."

"To do what?"

"To ask the President for a fresh pitcher of water, if nothing else."

While the history of the world reveals social orders, both good and bad, created through violent uprisings, no one can point to a single constructive society maintained by force.

Who Truly Holds Vietnam Countryside?

One Province Looks Loyal By Day, But Red At Night

By PETER ARNETT

VINH LONG, Vietnam (AP) — A political map of the Mekong Delta province of Vinh Long looks like a face with a severe attack of the hives.

The clear skin is controlled by the Saigon government.

The communist Viet Cong either control the rest of the face or are actively trying to take it over.

The whole of Vietnam is similarly blemished.

A close look at the countenance of the typical Delta province of Vinh Long points up one major problem hovering over any future political settlement of the Vietnam war: The splotchy control that both sides have in the countryside.

There are claims and counterclaims, with neither side being able to offer any real substantiation. The Viet Cong can go almost anywhere at night; the government almost anywhere in day.

A large part of the population admits to paying taxes to both sides. The issues that sway the allegiance of a village are not international or national, only local.

The difficulties of establishing control in the countryside led to the mounting of the Vietnam war in the first place.

The Saigon government attempted to spread its influence from the heavily-barricaded province capitals and district capitals.

The Communists established themselves in base areas located in jungle swamps or in remote provincial border areas where the government administration was the weakest, and attempted to fan out from there.

The peasant was caught in the middle.

In Vinh Long, the government is centered in seven districts. The Viet Cong have a similar number of base areas.

Of Vinh Long's half-million population, 200,000 of them are considered by the government to be either under Communist con-

Captured documents indicate that the Viet Cong claim a far greater number, and by their reasoning this is probably true. The Viet Cong technique in the Vietnam war has been to gain the secret allegiance of peasants inside government spheres of influence, using them only occasionally, and letting them go about their innocent jobs most of the time.

The people in Vinh Long live in 65 villages divided into 285 hamlets located in patches of fertile ground bordering the Mekong River that splits to go around the province, or along canals. By blowing up roads and bridges years ago, the Communists managed to isolate whole populations from government influence.

In some districts the government has held only the district town and precious little else. It is from these areas that the Viet Cong have recruited and launched forays against government installations elsewhere.

The pendulum of control swung badly for the government in the 1968 Tet offensive when nearly all the Vinh Long countryside was lost to the Viet Cong, along with 65 per cent of the population.

The government has been painfully winning the lost terrain and population back. By the beginning of March this year, American officials in Vinh Long were figuring they were back to where they were before the Tet offensive began, and were hopefully in a better position. But this still gives the Viet Cong a strong hold on the province. The peasant who makes up most of the population watches the ebb and flow of the war, suspicious of the city folk and the government, identifying only with his fellow peasants.

Both sides sensed a political settlement of the war in the wind late last year. They geared up for the battle.

The Viet Cong began holding elections throughout Vietnam in their areas of control, publicizing the results around the world in an attempt to gain international political standing, local analysts reasoned.

The Saigon government, with American prodding, moved in to grab as much territory as possible in the "accelerated pacification program" that in Vinh Long Province totalled 59 hamlets.

The Saigon government has now launched an ambitious program to pacify 90 per cent of Vinh Long by the end of this year. The Viet Cong, on the other hand, with the spring offensive, are apparently attempting to regain some of the territory they won at Tet only to lose again.

What this means to Vinh Long is that both sides are pushing hard against the middle.

The government has amassed 10,000 troops of various categories in Vinh Long, most of them regional and popular forces. There are no American ground troops in the province, but a U.S. armored unit is operating and the province has full use of allied fighter bombers.

The Viet Cong have at least 4,000 armed men, broken up into three main force battalions of about 300 men each, and seven province companies of about 100 men. The remainder are guerrillas.

Americans believe they are slowly breaking down enemy strength, but they have said that before.

They admit that if Communist main forces now operating across the Mekong River were to switch their activities to Vinh Long, the province might well revert into the Red.

Any political settlement in Vietnam could easily come to grief in the treacherous shoals of Vinh Long and the other provinces. The Saigon government believes that by flying flags in as many hamlets as possible this will give them the authority to govern in the event of a cease-fire.

But what if a Viet Cong sympathizer pulled out the flag of his choice and flew it over his house? How should he be handled?

And there is the matter of determining who really owns what. The Saigon government moved into 50 hamlets between November and February in Vinh Long as part of the "accelerated pacification program." This merely meant the positioning of a platoon of government troops in a hamlet, with no attempt to sway the population to the government cause, or even to rout out the Viet Cong infrastructure.

There is little question that the Viet Cong still regard those hamlets as their own, and may well be targeting the government troops inside them in the spring offensive.

But on the other hand, the Viet Cong have no visible government apparatus in the areas they hold sway over in Vinh Long. Their rule is clandestine. However, the Communists claim control over some hamlet simply because the government has never been there before.

There is no evidence in Vinh Long of any mutual understanding that might make a political settlement work. The Vietnamese and U.S. authorities are working towards what they hope will be a military and political victory.

The Viet Cong are exhorting their followers to fight harder.

The Saigon government privately talks of some kind of political settlement that will eventually end the Vietnam war. And the Communists, in their captured documents, mention the same thing.

But in Vinh Long today it looks like permanent war, with neither side seemingly interested in ending it.

U.S. Raps Korea For Plane Attack

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The North Korean shootdown of an unarmed U. S. Navy plane over the Sea of Japan caused a new flareup in the Far East this week, but it appeared unlikely that the United States would retaliate.

At a meeting in Panmunjom early yesterday, Air Force Maj. Gen. James B. Knapp assailed the attack as "a calculated act of aggression" and demanded "appropriate measures to prevent similar incidents in the future."

North Korean Maj. Gen. Yi Choon Sun charged that the United States had illegally dispatched the plane for spying. Knapp ignored the charge, and the meeting adjourned after 46 minutes.

The EC121 radar reconnaissance plane which was shot down carried a crew of 31, all of whom are believed to have been killed in the attack. At week's end, search destroyers had already recovered some bodies and bits of wreckage from the sea.

The North Koreans charged that the four-engined propeller plane — a modified Constellation — had violated its airspace, extending 12 miles out to sea, but Knapp said the EC121 was at least 90 miles offshore when it was attacked.

The plane apparently was shot down by MIG fighters of Soviet design. The Russian Navy was cooperating in the search for the downed plane.

U.S. Youth Intently Watching Nixon

Politically Alive Students Disagree In Evaluations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most politically vocal young ggeneration in America's history is watching intently to see how the Nixon administration will shape up.

Some are optimistic. Many are cynical. The majority seem to be keeping their fingers crossed, hoping that President Nixon will find ways to unite America, relieve ghetto misery — and above all — start listening to what young people have to say.

UPI interviews with young Americans across the country disclosed that they feel President Nixon, so far, has proved more liberal than they had expected. This is causing second thoughts among many who were prepared to dislike him, and has led to a widespread suspension of judgment.

"I haven't made an evaluation," said Alan Taliuaga, 21, student, body president at St. John's University, Brooklyn, N.Y.

"I think it's too soon to tell what kind of a President he'll make."

"I'll wait and see," another New York student said. He added, however, that "if Nixon remains cautious and uncommitted, he'll be the most hated president in history."

LACKS CHARISMA

Ralph Crum, a graduate student at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., forecast another kind of difficulty for the President. "Nixon doesn't have the great image of all the Kennedys," he said. "So Nixon can't go on charisma, he has to come up with solutions."

Crum, whose father works at the Pentagon, thought Nixon already had made a few mistakes. "Some of his appointments seem to indicate he is merely a spokesman for the defense establishment. It looks like Nixon is more interested in keeping the old order from collapsing than in setting up a new order."

Andrew Loewi, a sophomore at Iowa's Grinnell College, said Nixon "has not done anything particularly outstanding" since he took office, but added: "Fortunately, he is not as reactionary as I feared he would be."

Criticizing the President for being "short on action," Joe Spollen, 20, of Arlington, Va., said: "So far he has only plugged a leaky oil well."

Another Grinnell student, senior Fredericka Nelson, who worked for Sen. Eugene McCarthy in the Democratic presidential nomination battle, said she has been favorably impressed with "the way Nixon presents himself to the public" She qualified her praise with the comment that "his public relations man probably deserved more credit than Nixon for that."

But Nixon's "new Image" isn't going over well with everyone.

"I thought Nixon was the more conservative and the more responsible candidate in terms of experience," Harvey Hukari said. He is president of Stanford University's Young Americans for Freedom. "But I'm concerned that he's not appointing as many conservatives as I might have hoped."

Some of those interviewed were totally pessimistic.

"Nixon is proving that he, like Johnson, is enslaved by events and trends but offers no leadership in shaping policy," said Matt Andrea, a Georgetown University, Washington, D.C. graduate student.

Some students predicted Nixon would rather alienate people who were dissatisfied with present conditions, rather than unite America.

"Nixon will use repressive measures to put down protest movements," a Columbia University student warned, "and those tactics will come back to haunt him."

PROGRESSIVE CABINET

Other students felt Nixon would leave the situation on the campuses to the states, but Dennis Liff, a young Republican chairman at New York's Queens College, said approvingly, "I think he'll adopt a tough line of not tolerating rioting and he'll probably favor cutting off aid to rioters."

Among the optimists was Iowa senior Lance Levi. "The fact that Nixon is a Republican might mean that he'll be slow in initiating improvements. But I believe he has selected a progressive cabinet and will do something soon to alleviate the problems."

Another student at Queens College predicted that Nixon would operate with "less flash than the Democrats did" but with greater effectiveness. "He'll improve the programs that are working and eliminate those that are not," he said.

Ralph Paladino, a college senior from Flushing, N.Y., had high praise for Nixon's performance during his first months in office.

"I think he's handled things magnificently," Paladino said. "I like his pragmatism. He's a problem solver. He'll make a list of priorities and not be subject to pressure groups."

High school seniors, in Washington, D.C. for a "presidential classroom" program, were generally more sympathetic than college students to the new administration.

"Kids are much too ready to criticize but not ready to accept good points," Margaret Roberts of Michigan said.

Michael Marohn, from Indiana, praised Nixon for his honesty. "He's saying, 'I don't know what to do. I'm studying.' We need good at drawing people emotionally but making them stop and think, too."

Emilio Jaksetic, a New Jersey high schooler, disagreed, saying: "There are times when a person's silence is just as much of the problem. It's natural for a new President to wait awhile. But I don't want to end up after all this eases with a catastrophe."

Nixon's campaign pledge to end the draft is a definite plus mark with most students, even those who doubt it can be done or who think a lottery system is more feasible.

"At this point I favor the lottery proposal because I have doubts as to the number of people who would join a volunteer army," Joe Armin, president of the Young Republicans in San Francisco, said.

Jim Nabors, a black militant leader of the Third World Liberation Front at the University of California at Berkeley, strongly disagreed. "A volunteer army should be the only kind of army. If you want to go, you go. If you don't want to go, you just say 'hell no' and stay home."

"I don't think the Army could pay people enough to enlist, even in peace time," one junior from Ohio said. He suggested instead compulsory national service, not necessarily military, which would involve young people after the age of 18.

The idea of service projects here and abroad was raised by youths all over the country, usually as an alternative to the draft.

TEACHERS CORPS

"There's a gap between vocation and education," said Andy Mayer, a graduate student in New York City. He favored the teacher corps but said the Peace Corps and VISTA were other possibilities in which he was interested.

President Nixon is interested, too. In a news conference following his European tour the President expressed hope of finding "a new purpose and idealism" for youth. Nixon said his administration is "searching for an answer" to student unrest.

John L. Campbell, a 24-year-old White House aide, is helping in that search as one of two special youth liaisons for the President. He said in an interview that many possible service projects for youth are being studied and that final proposals might be answered "around the commencement period."

A dominant theme in all of the interviews was the fervent hope of young Americans that Nixon will "do something soon" to move forward on domestic and foreign problems.

Struggling to find some meaning in a complex and confusing world, young people are impatient for solutions. And they are looking to Nixon to come up with some ideas — even if some don't think they'll like his solutions.

Campbell said Nixon is aware of this mood and wants "to involve more people in the problems the government is concerned about." But, he adds, it will take awhile.

He pointed to a pile of tape recordings made by students during Nixon's campaign and said he was using them for ideas on youth programs.

"No one listened to them then," he said, "but we're listening now."

Will Reagan Sign Gas Tax Boost?

By CAPITAL NEWS SERVICE

Months of controversy and debate have ended with the approval of the conference committee compromise to AB-76, by Assemblywoman Pauline Davis, D-Portola, which will increase the state gasoline tax by 1 cent to provide funds for repair of roads, streets, highways and bridges which were damaged by recent storms and floods.

Both the Senate and the Assembly have given the measure their approval and it has been sent to Gov. Ronald Reagan for his signature.

Some debate still rages as to whether the governor will be breaking his pledge, made earlier this year, of no new taxes during 1969.

The bill, if signed by Reagan, is expected to produce between $7.5 and $8 million a month for use on the roads and highways. Reagan can call a halt to the tax after only one month, but under the bill, it will not extend longer than six months, or during the tourist season.

Also included in the bill is an appropriation of $25 million from the general fund to help pay for damages to public buildings. Assemblyman Frank Lanterman, R-Pasadena, and one of the conferees, said that the group exhausted all other means of providing the needed funds before approving the compromise.

Secret probation reports, urged by Assemblyman John J. Miller, D-Oakland, in AB-179, has been rejected by the assembly by a vote of 24-40. Miller was handling the bill for the State Bar Association. It proposed to make all probation reports "secret" but the objections to the proposal by Assemblymen W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, and William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, that the public "has the right to know" resulted in its defeat. Joining Miller in proposing the measure were Assemblymen Willie Brown, Jr., D-San Francisco; Robert Crown, D-Oakland; and John L. Burton, D-San Francisco. The final vote was almost along party lines.

Pay increases for state legislators, proposed in a bill by Sen. James Q. Wedworth, D-Inglewood, has passed the senate by a 28-9 vote. It would grant an increase from the present $16,000 annually to $19,200 and would cost the state taxpayers an additional $384,000 annually. The measure now goes to the assembly, where much opposition is expected.

Cigarette advertising is the subject of SB-341, by Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Los Angeles, who seeks to ban such advertising. The Senate Governmental Efficiency Committee has taken the proposal "under submission" which is tantamount to killing the proposal for this session of the Legislature.

Called an "infringement on the rights of business to advertise a legal product," the measure contained no restrictions on smoking, but only put a ban on all types of advertising of the product.

Reagan has indicated he plans to push for a presumptive limits statute to curtail the drunk drivers in the state. The Governor, in a message to the Legislature, urged passage of the proposal which will set .1 per cent as the blood alcohol concentration level at which a driver's ability is presumed to be imparied. Gordon C. Luce, secretary of business and transportation, said that more than half of the 4,850 motor vehicle deaths in the state last year included some form of alcohol problem.

Romania Takes Tough Stand With Kremlin

BUCHAREST (London Express) — Nicolae Ceausewcu, the shoemaker turned president of Romania, is stepping up the pace of his dangerous juggling act with Moscow.

The odd-man-out in Russia's Warsaw Pact alliance is again at work needling the Kremlin powers more blatantly than at any time since he publicly condemned the Russian intervention in Czechoslovakia last summer.

Romanian government leaders are now making it plain that in no circumstances will any support — military or moral — be given to Russia over the armed clashes with Red China on the eastern borders of Siberia.

They are doing it cannily by underlining the Clauses Three and Four of the Warsaw Treaty which defines the alliance as a defensive one to counter armed attack in Europe.

Legally they appear on unshakeable ground. But this cool initiative to limit the responsibilities of the Warsaw Pact powers must be infuriating Moscow.

Romania is continuing to stress her good relations with China. Two curious telegrams were recently sent to Peking — one deploring the death of an almost unknown Chinese dignitary, the other sending warmest good wishes to the Chinese Communist Party Congress.

In a vigorous follow .through, Romania's state council now produces a resolution urging "That all states refrain from demonstrations and acts of force, inclusive of military maneuvers, on foreign territories or at the frontiers of some states . . ."

This is an undisguised reference to the Czech crisis and to the new Russian military maneuvers reported from the Czech borders.

Rarely has Moscow had to put up with such a wigging from a junior league partner.

But Ecausescu seems confident that although he is on dangerously thin ice there will be no immediate Russian riposte. He gambles on the belief that Russia is too involved with China to the east, and with the obviously unresolved Czech issue, to want any fresh adventures in Eastern Europe.

And if the gamble does not come off? A senior government official assured me: "Everyone knows Romania is ready to defend her frontiers against no matter what attacker."

The Cause Of Regional Government

Women Voters Say Time For Action Has Arrived

By DON KEOWN

"Regional planning is fundamental to the orderly development of the Bay Area."

With that precept as a guiding principle, the Leagues of Women Voters of the Bay Area was established in 1961 with the two Marin leagues among the member units.

But the interest of the Central Marin and Southern Marin leagues in regional approaches to Bay Area problems had preceded the formation of that organization by a number of years.

It was the mushrooming metropolitan growth of the San Francisco Bay Area after World War II that underscored the need for cooperative study, the women say. For the population surge brought with it such regional problems as pollution of the air and water, inadequate area-wide public transportation, insufficient open space for public recreation, the uncontrolled development of prime lands and indiscriminate filling of the bay.

IN 1959 THE two Marin leagues began contacting city and county officials, technicians and other authorities, seeking the opinions of these decision-makers on the new regional problems and asking for ideas for governmental approaches that munities to engage in cooperative effort to preserve the high quality of the environment that has made living in and around San Francisco so attractive.

The example set in these Marin-originated questions and contacts plus a growing awareness that the local governments lacked the authority to deal with problems that extended beyond their jurisdiction resulted in the organization by the women voters of the Bay Area federation for a study of these common concerns.

Transportation and air pollution were selected as the two most pressing problem areas of the region and became the primary points of interests with the leagues.

WHILE COOPERATING with the some 20 other leagues of the Bay Area, the two Marin units have also been extremely active within their own county in the two fields.

In 1962, the two leagues urged Marin County's supervisors to refrain from withdrawing from the Bay Area Rapid Transit District until a study could be conducted to determine whether the Golden Gate Bridge could be used for high-speed rail transport.

Then, in 1967, the leagues opposed a decision of the Golden Gate and Highway District Board to build a second deck on that span without first looking into the practicality of possible alternatives such as improved bus service and the use of ferryboats.

A JUST completed and detailed study by the Central Marin League of Women Voters of transportation along the San Francisco-Marin corridor, with Mrs. Allen Jensen and Mrs. Vincent MacKenzie as co-chairman, gave special attention to the conflicts between commuter convenience and community interests.

The league has extended its support to a balanced transportation system between public and personal automobile transit, and has backed a plan by Arthur C. Jenkins, former engineer with the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, for a fleet of 150 modern buses to be operated between San Francisco and its neighboring counties to the north by the district, with the costs partially subsidized by bridge tolls.

A more recent development has been the introduction in Sacramento by Assemblyman John F. Foran of a bill establishing a metropolitan transportation agency to operate most of the transportation facilities in the Bay Area. The Golden Gate Bridge is excepted, but would be required by a second Foran bill to develop "a total transportation facilities plan" defining the district's future before its bonds are repaid in 1971.

AMONG THE responsibilities Foran would assign the new metropolitan agency would be the operation of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District system, once it is completed.

Foran's proposals conform generally with those made by a Bay Area Transportation Study Commission.

The Marin leagues, in practicing their broad regional view of Bay Area problems, have also supported such controversial proposals as the recently enacted ban on backyard burning as an air quality control measure. The women have pledged their continued backing of efforts by the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District to prevent air pollution and of endeavors by the state to curb motor vehicle emissions.

LAST YEAR the Southern Marin League directed attention toward Marin's serious and growing sewage disposal problems with an evaluation led by Mrs. Roger J. Fleischmann of a report by consulting engineers Brown and Caldwell that took a 50-year look ahead at the county's needs.

The report, endorsed by the league, outlined a countywide sewerage plan that would assure that discharges of sewage in the county did not violate the requirements of the North Coastal and Regional Water Quality Control Boards set to protect the recreational and esthetic qualities of the bay and its shoreline.

The leagues strongly supported legislation for planning the use and control of the bay waters and shore.

"IT WOULD be hard to count the number of letters written to the governor and the legislators, and the number of trips made to Sacramento to appear before committee hearings on this subject," the officers of the two leagues say. Ultimately all this effort paid off handsomely with the enactment in 1965 of the McAteer-Petris Bill establishing the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

Mrs. Ernest Hoppe and Mrs. Allen Lovejoy, the women who represent the two Marin units with the Leagues of Women Voters of the Bay Area, say that it would be difficult to overstate the importance of that commission "when one realizes that a section of Paradise Cove, except for Angel Island, is the only significant piece of bay shoreline in Marin that is open for recreational use by the public at this time."

They note that the situation elsewhere in the Bay Area is little more heartening.

ONE OF THE commission's most important responsibilities is its authorization to act on bay-filling.

With active support from the Marin leagues, a bill extending the functioning of the commission until 90 days after the close of the 1969 legislative session was enacted last year, thus clearing the way for possible action on more permanent legislation regulating the development of the bay and prohibiting indiscriminate filling in the interim.

The Bay Conservation and Development Commission is currently locked in battle in Sacramento on behalf of its master plan for the bay that was three years in its development.

BEFORE THE legislature are bills that would extend the life of the commission, or establish a new permanent agency to carry on its work. But long range proposals developed by the commission for halting or slowing the shrinkage of the bay are missing from most of the measures before the legislators.

The Marin leagues have been represented before the Bay Conservation and Development Commission in opposition to fill projects at the mouth of Corte Madera Creek and in Richardson Bay.

"One shudders to think that if all the proposed and contemplated plans for filling were permitted, the bay might be reduced to little more than a river," says Mrs. Hoppe.

THE BEST solution lies, she says, not in piecemeal opposition to specific objectionable projects, but in the League of Women Voters supported idea for overall regional planning and control.

Which, adds Mrs. Hoppe, leads in turn to the most basic issue of the regionalization movement and one of the most hotly debated — the question of the kind of governing body best suited to managing regional affairs.

This presents, she notes, such questions as:

Should the members of the official body be elected directly from existing or especially constructed districts, or should there be a combination of directly elected and appointed officials who might be more responsive to local interests?

THOSE WHO favor the plan for new districts feel that it would preserve the "one-man-one-vote" principle and foster direct responsiveness to the wishes of the people, and would best coordinate the functions and authorities of the many, sometimes overlapping agencies already in existence.

Those who urge a combination of elected and appointed officials believe that system would best protect Marin County from domination by the three larger, more populated metropolitan centers of the Bay region. The appointive officials, they say, would serve as a liaison between regional government and local interests.

Marin County Supervisor John McInnis has spoken for a bicameral legislative arrangement with one house of appointed and one house of elected members that might later be changed to an all-elected unicameral body once the concept of regional government were better established and more generally accepted.

BEFORE THE California State Legislature is Assembly Bill 711, co-authored by Assemblyman John Knox and Sen. Lewis F. Sherman, chairman and vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Bay Area Regional Organization, which, if passed, would establish a regional government following its authorization by a majority of the voters of the Bay Area in an election on June 2, 1970.

The Knox-Sherman plan incorporates a system of a board whose members would be elected directly from small districts.

"Perhaps the most cogent aspect of the bill is that of sending it to the people for ratification," says Mrs. Hoppe.

MORE RECENTLY the legislative situation became more complicated with the introduction by Assemblyman William T Bagley of a bill that would transform the existing Association of Bay Area Governments, now a study and advisory body, into a more formidable instrument of regional government.

By the Bagley bill, existing regional agencies regulating water and air pollution would be merged into the strengthened ABAG which would be given broad planning powers and the authority to implement those regional plans. The bill also includes another one-year extension for the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

Mrs. Hoppe says that the Marin leagues followed closely the development of ABAG and encouraged local supervisors and councilmen to participate, regarding it as "a first small step in the right direction." But, she adds, in its present form, "it is not effective regional government."

"A REGIONAL government strong enough to be effective," she points out, must have delegated to it such powers as the planning, developing and "in some cases" the construction of facilities for bay preservation. These powers, she adds, would need to include the right of eminent domain, the issuance of permits for bay filling, the planning of transportation corridors, the control of solid waste disposal, the planning of open space, etc.

"The Leagues of Women Voters feel that it is time to give regional government teeth," she says, adding that the leagues have discussed and argued extensively the merits of the proposals for so doing.

Along with the questions of selecting representatives for a regional governing body and with defining its powers is the further issue of financing.

"IT IS THOUGHT that any added tax burden should be submitted to a vote of the people of the region that will bear the taxes," the Marin women voters say.

The Knox-Sherman plan favors a personal income surtax and a business privilege tax, supplemented by various fees for the use of the bay, to support the regional government's operating costs. The bill would also grant the new government the authority to issue general obligation revenue bonds for land acquisition purposes in order to carry out a master plan for the bay.

The members of the Leagues of Women Voters admit that in a time when Marinites and Bay Area residents, like other Americans, are much preoccupied with campus unrest, urban crime and turmoil, poverty, racial controversy, rising taxes and the war in Vietnam, regional government often seems like an intangible issue that could well be postponed and dealt with sometime in the distant future.

"BUT THE time will not wait," they say.

They point to a conference on "Regional Government: Ready or Not?," sponsored jointly in 1967 by the Central and Southern Marin leagues, in which Marin officials and experts participated in panel discussions that underscored the interdependence of all the various sections of the Greater Bay Area and the need for an effective regional government.

At that conference, Fred Enemark, executive vice president of the Marin County Savings and Loan Association and active in the Bay Area Council, representing business and industry on the regional level, stressed the importance of a movement toward regional government without procrastination if the bay and its environment are to be saved.

"THE LEAGUES of Women Voters share Mr. Enemark's sentiments," say Mrs. Edward Boessenecker and Mrs. Farrel Schell, presidents of the Southern and Central Marin leagues respectively.

They point out that Assemblyman Knox in a television interview, while expressing concern over a general lack of knowledge on the part of Bay Area residents of the problems and issues involved in the regionalization movement, paid special tribute to the Leagues of Women Voters for their work to counteract that situation and urged them to continue to use their energies and resources for public education prior to the projected 1970 referendum.

Marin's leagues fully intend to accept that challenge, Mrs. Boessenecker and Mrs. Schell say.

IN THE NEXT year, they say, the two units will be more deeply involved than ever not only in educating the public to an awareness of growing regional problems and possible solutions, but also in testifying on behalf of regional government.

The league watchword reads: "Study without action is futile; action without study is fatal."

The two Marin leagues have been deeply committed to study of the complicated subject of Bay Area regional problems and government, largely through their resource committees on regional government, as well as other committees delving into specific problem areas.

IN THE SOUTHERN Marin League, Mrs. Hoppe heads a five-member resource committee on regional government. With the Central Marin League, Mrs. Lovejoy is chairman of a seven-member committee.

Personnel on those key committees have varied since they were first set up a decade ago. But throughout those 10 years the women have been busy observing regional meetings, studying pertinent legislation, comparing the problems and achievements of the various Bay Area communities and political entities, compiling information on regional programs in other sections of the United States and in other lands, soliciting the opinions of experts, conducting surveys, interviews and conferences, educating themselves as well as others.

With that firm foundation now available to them, the Marin leagues feel that the time has arrived for final action — for positive steps to make the

TRANSPORTATION is one of the fields of particular concern to the Marin Leagues of Women Voters for which they feel a regional approach is required. The Central Marin League, after a study, has endorsed a balanced system between public transit and private automobiles as the best solution.

Leagues Urge A Regional View—

Time To Act, Women Say

dream of effective regional government a reality in the Bay Area.

THEY ACKNOWLEDGE that it will likely prove a difficult undertaking that will see them bucking the traditional reluctance of Americans to abandon any of their local governmental prerogatives as well as encountering the certain-to-exist distrust of an additional bureaucracy with its costs. There will be disagreements, too, even within the ranks of those favoring regional government as to how the system should be set up.

But the women voters are confident that the kind of reasoning they have arrived at after long and careful study will prevail, that ultimately the doubts and fears of many of the opponents of regional government can be quieted, that differences among the supporters can be compromised, and that a new era of badly needed cooperative action lies ahead for the cities and the counties of the Bay Area.

There is a definite movement in that direction, they say, pointing out that in 1959 there were six agencies in the Bay Area with jurisdictions covering more than one county (although but one, the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board established in 1949, had responsibilities over the entire area), while 10 years later there are nine separate governmental agencies dealing with all or large segments of the Bay Area.

THEY POINT, too, to the exhaustive surveys they have conducted among public officials which they say showed strong support for the concept of regional government.

"The overwhelming majority of those interviewed were in favor of directly elected representatives by districts, on a non-partisan basis for four-year terms, with compensation adequate to attract qualified people," they say.

The majority also favored "a consolidated organization," they report, "and gave priority to regional planning, bay conservation and development, environmental pollution controls, solid waste disposal, parks and open space, and transportation."

Minority officials also urged social planning in such fields as manpower utilization, jobs, housing, transportation and education.

INCOME TAX was the favored financing method, followed by sales tax.

A majority of those contacted approved granting the new government the power of eminent domain, but often with restrictions such as the concurrence of local officials.

The widest split, the women say, was whether the new system should be established by legislative action or by a referendum of the people.

Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum, for instance, favoring a strong regional organization of directly elected representatives, told the women that the state legislators should accept their responsibility and pass the necessary measures.

STATE SEN. John F. McCarthy, according to the women, also favoring the directly elected representatives system for a regional government limited to regional problems that would take no authority away from local governments, has spoken for a referendum by the voters and has predicted that such a plan would be approved by the people of the Bay Area.

Assemblyman Bagley has urged that regional government begin with its functions limited, perhaps to environmental planning at the outset. He has suggested an organization composed of both directly - elected representatives of the people and appointed representatives of the elected officials of the cities and counties. Bay Area legislators will support such a limited type of regional government, he has said, and that other members of the Legislature are likely to also go along with it.

Bagley has suggested in his discussions with the league women a property tax limited to a two-cent levy or in lieu vehicle funds as possible sources of financing.

WHILE THERE are differences in the details and varying degrees of enthusiasm, the Marin Leagues of Women Voters note there is near unanimous realization that some kind of concerted and coordinated action must be taken by the Bay Area counties and cities to confront their mutual problems and to solve them.

In the year ahead the two Marin leagues will be attempting to crystalize that feeling into effective action. They take heart from the fast that in so doing, they will have the support of some 20 other leagues of civic-minded women in the Bay Area, as well as the backing of many other farsighted persons in and out of government, in Marin, and in its neighboring counties.

PAYING AN INSPECTION visit to the marshlands at the mouth of Corte Madera Creek are, left to right, Mrs. Allen Lovejoy, Mrs. John Becker and Mrs. Walter Olson. Mrs. Lovejoy is the Central Marin League of Women Voters representative to the Leagues of Women Voters of the Bay Area, while Mrs. Becker and Mrs. Olson both formerly served in that capacity. The Marin leagues have opposed successfully fill proposals for the area.

THE LEAGUE TURNS 50 THIS YEAR

The League of Women Voters of the United States this year is observing its 50th anniversary as an effective instrument for good government in America.

The league dates its birth from the proposal of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt in an address before the National American Women Suffrage Association in 1919 for the formation of such an organization "to finish the fight (struggle for suffrage) and aid in the reconstruction (democracy's postwar needs)."

Formal organization took place the following year.

On May 28, 1936, in Mill Valley the first Marin league was formed.

Marin Collegians Take A Trip

By PAUL MILLER

There must be many citizens who are convinced that all that most college students do is get stoned, sit shirtless on lawns, swear, play bongo drums, and, when stirred up a bit, demonstrate.

But a trip with College of Marin students of instructor Al Molina's field biology class south to Death Valley discloses another side of the collegians — a deeper and better one.

To be sure, the students traveling in the old yellow school bus enjoyed themselves.

AND THEY GOT stoned — stoned over the magnificence of the Panamint Range at sunrise as seen from the coldness of Dante's View some 4,000 feet above the east side of Death Valley's baked floor.

The boys sat shirtless, in the hot sun on the edge of salt pools, and as they did so examined with curiosity the exquisite white and transparent fans of crystalization, and peered into the cool, bitter waters in search for signs of life.

And some of them swore just a bit — as they crawled with painstaking care along a patch of green near Furnace Creek Springs, and yet, with their nets, just missed one of the prized specimens among the 100 desert insects they were required to collect and identify.

WITH NO BONGO drums available, the students beat out the rhythm instead on their canteens as they sang every verse of "Ninety-Nine Bottles of Beer on the Wall" and argued and discussed every subject from ecology to theology while on board the packed bus which zoology instructor Noel Nelson, the driver, piloted over more than 1,100 miles of asphalt and dirt.

And they demonstrated — enthusiasm for everything they saw and experienced.

The first time the 22 students got out of their bus was at dawn at a marsh beside San Pablo Bay. Thereafter they hopped in and out of their yellow "Gila Monster" from six to 10 times a day at any point where there was something Molina wanted them to see, hear, touch or smell — plants, animals or rocks — or to enjoy a cold bottle of soda pop.

MOLINA'S WIFE, Bev, drove him in their family car while he lectured over a two-way radio to the bus and four other vehicles in the college caravan, sometimes humorously, sometimes groggily, but always informatively.

Some of the stopping places were in the snow at Mono Lake, in the wind at Petroglyph Loop, at Ownes Valley, and at Morro Bay State Natural History Museum after a rain.

Where horned toads were supposed to be, in the sand under the gray sage brush of a stopping point between Shosane and Baker in San Bernardino County, the collegians and the children of some of the faculty members making the trip made the surprising find of Easter eggs bearing the initials "COM."

WHILE MOLINA and his biology students traveled, so did instructor Stephen Bruff, originator of Easter recess field trip courses at the college, with his geology students, and instructor Gordon Chan with his biology class.

Molina first joined Bruff in a team trip in 1962, and he credits much of the success of his travel-and-teach techniques to Bruff and to the late Dr. Paul T. Wilson, whose widow, in a fitting tribute to her husband and his untiring work as a naturalist and teacher at the college and in Marin County, joined this year's tour. Dr. Wilson had died the preceding week, after a long illness.

Molina says he would like to call his course "Adventure in Observational Ecology."

BEFORE THEY leave, he tells his students: "You will see that in spite of the fantastic growth of California's technical industries, the economic roots of the state are still firmly anchored in the rich fertile soil of the Central Valley.

"You will better understand the problems that confront the state in controlling wisely the management of this soil and the water vital to its productivity."

Molina predicts that "each turn of the road will bring you something new to see and to think about."

AND, HE continues, "some of what you see will be fairly unimpressive . . . while some of it will . . . bombard your senses by its magnitude, delicacy or sheer beauty."

By the end of the second day of their trip, the students were in full concurrence with their teacher's prediction. Except that the unimpressive was rare.

For the students, the eight-day field trip in Biology 4-B plus one-hour-per-week lectures throughout the semester, plus reading and studying a formal syllabus compiled by Molina to a thickness approximating a Los Angeles telephone book, is worth two units credit. To take the course, the student must first have completed or be enrolled in an introductory biology class.

BESIDES MAKING the trip, attending the lectures, studying the syllabus, participating in the discussions, the students must compile a diary of the trip and complete other written assignments — and pass the inevitable final examination.

REGULARLY THE College of Marin biology students climbed from their sleeping bags at 6 a.m. to begin their day's adventures. But for the optional trek to Dante's View to watch a Death Valley sunrise, instructor Al Molina awakened his charges at 4:30 a.m.

On the trip, they collected, keyed, listened, discussed. Following the evening review lectures by Molina or his teaching assistant, Al Blair, they played volleyball to work out the kinks.

When the collegians arrived back at their home base in Kentfield, they were a weary lot.

But they, and Molina, had the satisfaction of realizing that their "knowing where it's at, baby" had taken on a new dimension. Within them had grown an awareness that man is but one link in nature's grand scheme. And that all other forms of life are entitled to his respect and his understanding.

AT MORRO BAY, one of the traveling College of Marin biology students uses a lunch break stop to work on some field assignments. A visit to the natural history museum there was a highlight of the trip.

Marin Odd Fellows Mark An Anniversary

Fraternal Organization Looks Back On 150 Years Of Service In U.S.

(Editor's Note: William T. Ortman, pioneer San Rafael resident now living in Oakland, is believed to be the oldest living member of Marin Lodge No. 200, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He joined that lodge on June 26, 1916. He has written the following history of the fraternal order in Marin County in conjunction with the Odd Fellows' observance next week of the 150th anniversary of their organization in the United States.)

By WILLIAM T. ORTMAN

On the evening of Feb. 24, 1872, in the Masonic Hall on rutted Olema Road in the southeast portion of the Mission San Rafael Arcangel's abandoned pear orchard, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows instituted its Marin Lodge No. 200.

It had been a rainy day, but one of excitement for the usually sleepy little village that had looked forward with anticipation to the public ceremony and the dancing and feasting that were to follow.

Rev. William H. Hill, the lodge's grand master for the state, had left San Francisco at 3 p.m. aboard the SS Contra Costa, accompanied by Past Grands Henry C. Squire, Henry J. Hyland, James Davis and E. B. Spencer, to cross the bay to San Quentin Point. They arrived at the B Street station in San Rafael at 6 o'clock on the small, one-coach, narrow gauge train that covered the three miles between the point and B Street in seven minutes.

A CONSIDERABLE crowd had gathered at the depot to greet the visiting dignitaries. San Rafael was an unincorporated community without city officials, but Judge A. I. Barney acted as the official welcomer, assisted by Oliver Irwin, banker, and Tom Hansen, a young attorney.

With the welcoming speeches over, Frederick H. Pratt, the San Rafael postmaster, organized some 300 townsmen into a column of marchers that proceeded down B Street. Flickering pine-oil torches were held aloft by the men marching behind a brass band, and with the Reverend Hill and his four fellow Odd Fellows from the grand lodge accorded places of honor.

"The Old Gray Mare Ain't What She Used To Be," blared the band. And at Fourth and B a great bonfire blazed and roared.

THE PARADE broke up at the Marin Hotel where the grand lodge members were escorted inside for their dinner before going on to the lodge room in the Masonic Hall.

The rains had ceased and the gala affair that followed was one of the highlights in the annals of what was still a frontier community. The hall was packed with listeners who heard the Reverend Hill stress the principles of the fraternal organization — friendship, love and truth — and then trace its history.

Odd Fellowship was very ancient, Hill told his audience.

He gave mention to a piece of yellowing parchment confined to a bottle in a museum at Hardwick, Scotland, upon which was inscribed a charter granted to the "Society of Odd Fellows." It was dated May 6, 1557.

HE TOLD of other records of Odd Fellowship in England another 200 years later.

The tenets of Odd Fellowship —those principles of friendship, love and truth —had come, he said, from somewhere in the Near East, perhaps from the land of the pharaohs or the rocky Galilean countryside. Because of the organization's monotheistic doctrine and ritualistic adherence to the Old Testament, many Odd Fellows had taken the stand that the order's creed was born in a theology that ages ago had pulled itself out of the Godless materialism of Egypt.

Reverend Hill told of Sir Francis Drake's contacts in the Near East "with a strange cult, the like of which he had never before known." Upon his return to England's shores, the speaker said, Drake introduced the rudimentary principles of "what we know today as Odd Fellowship."

HILL TOLD, too, of how the novelist Daniel DeFoe had reported that Odd Fellowship had established its roots deeply in England in the 18th Century. Later, he said, it took on a deeper, more charitable character and devoted itself to providing care and humanitarianism not only for its members but for all fellow men.

Those early lodges were supported, Reverend Hill went on, by the payment of a penny by each member or visitor as he entered the lodge room, and by the voting of special funds for a brother in need. An Odd Fellow out of work was supplied with a card and a sum of money sufficient to take him to the next lodge; then he went from lodge to lodge until he found employment.

These lodges, Reverend Hill said, gradually developed a common ritual and became confederated under the name Patroitic Order of Odd Fellows. Toward the end of the 18th Century, however, the confederation was broken up by prosecutions by the state that claimed its purpose was "seditious."

LATER, THE lodges came together again as the United Order of Odd Fellows. And in 1813, at a convention in Manchester, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Manchester Unity, was formed, and it grew to overshadow all other such societies in England.

Odd Fellowship, Hill related, first came to the United States in 1819. It was brought by Thomas Wildey, born in London Jan. 15, 1782, and an active Odd Fellow from 1805. He came to the United States in 1817, settling in Baltimore.

He recruited four other men who had been members of the parent organization in England — John Welch, John Duncan, John Cheatham and Richard Rushworth — and together, on April 26, 1819, they organized Washington Lodge No. 1.

ON FEB. 21, 1821, the Grand Lodge of Maryland and the United States was formed. The Grand Lodge of the United States has since become the Sovereign Grand Lodge. Thomas Wildey was elected grand sire, a position he held until 1833. For some years he traveled widely, organizing many state grand lodges. He attended every session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge until his death on Oct. 19, 1861.

Reverend Hill also told his listeners in the San Rafael hall of the history of the fraternal organization in California, of how San Francisco Lodge No. 1 was instituted in 1849 by pioneers of that city and was followed quickly by other lodges throughout the state, particularly in the gold-mining country.

Lodges were formed in such towns and camps as Marysville, Rough and Ready, Grass Valley, Whiskey Flat, Hangtown,

Other long-time Odd Fellow members contacted were also not certain as to the identity.

Comptonville, San Juan, Downieville, as well as many other settlements.

WHEN THE gravel beds of the ancient river channels and creek bottoms were mined out, the gold-seekers drifted to other parts of California, particularly to the agricultural sections and small towns, taking Odd Fellowship with them.

Thus Petaluma Lodge No. 30 was created in 1854 at a time when that community was a settlement of log cabins and duck-hunter shacks clustered in a small clearing hewed out of a dense forest of redwoods on the west bank of the salt water Petaluma slough off San Pablo Bay.

Then, continued Reverend Hill, there came to the west a man who was to play a key role in the growth of Odd Fellowship in California — Samuel H. Parker. He was born in New Hampshire on July 23, 1818, and became an Odd Fellow on Nov. 4, 1842. He became grand master of that jurisdiction.

HE HAD BEEN commissioned deputy grand sire of the Sovereign Grand Lodge prior to his second trip West in 1853, when he found six Odd Fellow lodges functioning in the state. He called together their past grands and organized the Grand Lodge of California, being elected the state's first grand master. In May, 1856, he was also chosen grand representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the United States.

Ever devoted to the order and its principles, Parker gave of his time and money in the building of the Odd Fellows' Library in San Francisco that was for many years the leading library of that city.

He died March 14, 1866, and it was said: "His work in behalf of Odd Fellowship has passed into history, and his memory will be cherished with veneration and long abide in the affections of his brethren."

FOLLOWING HIS resume of the history of the order, Reverend Hill next read to the hushed audience assembled in the lodge room of the San Rafael Masonic Hall the charter that granted Marin Lodge No. 200 of San Rafael formal membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of North America.

The charter founders listed on that document, as read by the instituting officer, were Oliver Irwin, John Dixheimer, William H. McGraw, Johannes Petersen, Thomas Hansen and Julius Goedge.

Following that reading, a new district was pronounced created by the grand master, and Henry J. Hyland of San Francisco was appointed its district deputy grand master.

Reverend Hill then initiated the first candidates into Marin Lodge No. 200.

THEY WERE 13 in number and they were G. W. Bond, John Dixheimer, Julius Goedge, Thomas Hansen, Oliver Irwin, O. M. Irwin, William H. H. McGrew, Johannes Petersen, McAllister, A. McLeod, Johannes Petersen, John Regnalds and John Sims.

The organization of the Marin Lodge was completed with an election of officers. Oliver Irwin was chosen noble grand, John Dixheimer vice grand, William H. McGrew secretary and Johannes Petersen treasurer.

The business meeting was terminated and both the public and the Odd Fellows then enjoyed dancing in the ballroom until 2 a.m.

THE YEAR 1872 was a time when there were few buildings along Fourth Street between Looten Place and B. The present courthouse, soon to be vacated, was only a dream in the minds of civic-spirited citizens. The old mission ruins had vanished and in their place stood the new Catholic church.

For some unknown reason, Marin Lodge No. 200 functioned under the borrowed by-laws of a San Francisco lodge for a time. Then the first constitution and by-laws of Marin Lodge No. 200 were adopted June 25, 1877. Their approval by the committee on laws of subordinates on June 30 of that year made them effective July 1, 1877.

This approval was recorded by Henry C. Lund, as recording secretary of the lodge. He was also one of the hardest workers among San Rafael's early Odd Fellows.

HE WAS A business man engaged in the lumber trade with partner Thomas Hansen. After my initiation into the Odd Fellows on June 26, 1916, I came to know him well as a gentle soul with a sincere love of his fellow man. By then he was in his late 60s, had served through all the chairs and in every station of the lodge, worked on innumerable committees, and stood ever ready to fill ably the chair of any absent brother.

He served, too, for many years as treasurer and maintained a keen interest in the financial affairs of the lodge.

I know of only one other Marin pioneer with a similar dedication to Odd Fellowship. He was Henry Jefsen, who was initiated in 1888, making him 14 years Lund's junior in the organization. Jefsen was a carpenter and, like Lund, totally consecrated to Odd Fellowship and its precepts.

OFFICERS and chevaliers made an impressive display in Canton uniforms as they posed for this photograph at the Independent Order of Odd Fellows Grand Encampment, held in Eureka in October of 1925. The large photograph taken in front of the Eureka Inn is the property of Mrs. Pauline Walker, whose late husband, Alexander Walker, was a San Rafael Canton leader, and who is herself an active member of the Canton Auxiliary.

AFTER THE incorporation of the Marin Lodge in 1872, Louis J. Peters Sr., Thomas Hansen, Johannes Petersen, A. C. McAllister and Julius Goedge set about building the Odd Fellows' Hall on the northeast corner of D and Fourth streets.

The building grew in size until it was San Rafael's largest

"Should The United States Flag Ever Be Destroyed?"

Our flag is our most important fabric and there is a time when it should be destroyed. According to the Flag Code, Public Law 829 passed by the 77th Congress, when the flag of the United States of America is ". . . in such a condition that it no longer is a fitting emblem for display (it) should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning."

There are other regulations of respect in the Flag Code, i.e., the flag ". . . should never be used as a drapery of any sort whatsoever, never festooned, drawn back, nor up in folds, but always allowed to fall free. Bunting of blue, white and red, always arranged with the blue above, the white in the middle and the red below, should be used for covering a speaker's desk, draping in front of a platform and for decoration in general."

Copies of the Flag Code may be obtained through the American Legion. The Fabric Doctor suggests you obtain a copy and make certain that the code of conduct toward the most important fabric we can ever own, is observed.

structure west of the three-story San Rafael (later Commercial and Central) Hotel. The venerable Odd Fellows' Hall was known to four generations of San Rafael residents as the scene of festive occasions and solemn rituals, until it was destroyed by fire in 1957, causing the lodge to build its present edifice at 1522 Fifth Avenue.

One such special occasion I have good cause to remember personally.

WHEN I returned home from the war in Europe in 1919 Marin Lodge No. 200 made plans for a banquet honoring another doughboy, Charles Brown Jr., and myself in the large upstairs hall.

I was advised to prepare something to say. But I had expected only a small gathering of lodge brothers, and so had rehearsed only briefly a short talk. When I arrived at the entrance to the building, Lee Duncan met me and escorted me upstairs. To my consternation, the hall was packed with Odd Fellows, including many important out-of-town guests. Rows of long tables decked with food stretched the length of the room. The standing-room-only turnout crowded the anteroom as well.

Seated beside Charlie Brown at the table of honor, I was suddenly numb with stagefright. Charlie sensed my terror, leaned over and whispered: "The war wasn't so bad, was it?"

WHEN MY turn came to speak, I stood up and looked about the room. Never had I seen such a sea of faces. Not even the kindly, encouraging smile of Capt. V. S. Cheda, banker, former commander of Company D, Fifth Infantry Regiment, California National Guard, and long-time Odd Fellow, could put me completely at my ease. And when I noticed M. F. Cochrane, publisher of the San Rafael Independent, with notebook before him and pencil poised, ready to record my speech, words failed me completely.

I had lost all recollection of what I planned to say. Desperately I reviewed the history of the closing months of the war. But those present had already read this in their newspapers. So my speech fell flat.

Nevertheless, it was a tremendous welcome home and a heartwarming honor accorded me by my brother Odd Fellows of Marin Lodge 200 that I have never forgotten.

LOOKING BACK over my more than 50 years of Odd Fellowship, I would like to mention a few of the elder statesmen of the Marin Lodge — Walter Helwig, a splendid Odd Fellow who for many years was building inspector for the city of San Rafael; Harry B. Hawk, former mailman; R. L. Duncan, known to all San Rafael as Lee; John Aull, for many years an electrician for the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Co.; Alexander Walker, a dedicated Odd Fellow who was initiated in 1915; Frank Reid, former mayor of San Rafael; Louis J. Peters Sr. and Louis J. Peters Jr., father and son, both engaged in the drygoods business.

These personalities and many others gave much of their time and money to advance the early cause of Odd Fellowship in Marin.

In 1886, the 36th annual session of the Grand Lodge of California, attended by Louis J. Peters Sr. and Johannes Petersen as representatives of District No. 11 and Lodge No. 200 respectively, began considering establishing a boys' home.

IN 1887, MARIN'S Golden Star Rebekah Unit No. 112 was instituted in San Rafael as a unit of Odd Fellowship with an enrollment of 33 members.

And that year, at the 37th session of the grand lodge, the Golden Star Rebekahs joined with the Rebekahs of Gilroy's Lodge No. 24 in pressing for the passage of a resolution authorizing an orphanage. The resolution was adopted in the Assembly of Rebekahs in the closing hours of the session.

Nine years later, in May of 1896, Mrs. Caroline A. Hoxett, past noble grand of Rebekah Unit No. 24, provided five acres of land in Gilroy for an Odd Fellows Orphanage Home. The cost of the building was met by Rebekahs and Odd Fellow lodges throughout the state. The cornerstone was laid on May 8, 1897, and the home was completed Sept. 1, 1897.

MARIN LODGE and Golden Star Rebekah members also worked closely with the elderly people of the Odd Fellows' Home at Saratoga to help meet the special needs of that institution.

During the 1880s and the 1890s there was a general surge of Odd Fellow philanthropic effort. Changes were occurring in the human social structure. It was a challenge. And Marin's Odd Fellows and Rebekahs accepted that challenge, under the dynamic leadership of such noble grands as F. M. Angelotti, Charles H. Dubois, Robert L. Duncan, W. F. Jones, Henry Jepson and Henry Knittel.

Another noble grand worthy of special mention was C. F. Mockler, in private life a general messenger for the business interests of San Rafael, traveling daily to San Francisco on special business errands for the merchants of Fourth Street. His keen judgment was invaluable to the Marin Lodge.

WHEN EARTHQUAKE and fire devastated San Francisco on April 18, 1906, the Marin Lodge moved quickly into high gear, providing relief for the victims and continuing that work until the people of San Francisco were again in a position to care for themselves.

On Aug. 3, 1906, a group of 35 Odd Fellows of Marin Lodge formed the Mount Horeb Encampment 106, a brotherhood branch of Marin Lodge 200. Their first meeting was called to order by President G. P. Jessen who was installed along with High Priest H. O. Bower, Senior Warden L. W. Bowen and Scribe G. E. Davis. Twenty-seven applicants were approved and elected.

In the early years after the turn of the century and following the completion of the electric third rail system into Mill Valley, Southern Marin County had begun to grow rapidly. Thus it became imperative that there be established an Odd Fellows Lodge in Mill Valley.

ON SEPT. 28, 1907, Mount Tamalpais Lodge No. 399, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, was instituted in the Keystone Building in Mill Valley. Forty candidates were initiated and took all three degrees. The candidates were business men of Mill Valley and railroad employees from Mill Valley and Tuburon.

The district deputy grand master presided, assisted by degree teams from various San Francisco lodges. And the proceedings lasted well into the early morning hours.

Mount Tamalpais Lodge No. 399 was to become exceptionally active in Heart Fund and Blood Bank work and to be a contributor to the World Eye Laboratory, a research foundation established by a grant from the IOOF's Sovereign Grand Lodge. It was to support, too, youth camps at Long Barn, the Veterans' Home at Yountville, a Tamalpais High School scholarship program, and many other worthwhile projects.

BLYTHEDALE Rebekah Lodge No. 112 became its sister unit and participated wholeheartedly in the work.

For a time, from 1926 to 1952, a San Anselmo IOOF lodge also functioned in the county. When Ayoda Lodge No. 478 ceased its operations, San Anselmo's Tamal Rebekah Lodge No. 393, was not ready to "close shop." It became a second Rebekah lodge to use the hall of Marin Odd Fellow Lodge No. 200, and it has continued to be an active participant in organizational and humanitarian work.

A SPECTACULAR FIRE on July 29, 1957, burned to the ground the building of Marin Lodge No. 200, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and destroyed most of the society's possessions. On Aug. 25, 1958, the San Rafael Odd Fellows held their first meeting in the new building they had constructed at 1522 Fifth Avenue, with Elmer Kaysen presiding as noble grand.

In still earlier years Marshall, too, had its IOOF lodge.

IN THE SPRING of 1923 members of Marin Lodge No. 200 began organizing an advanced Canton No. 39. It was instituted on June 2, 1923, by Maj. Gen. C. H. Krenbeck, department commander, with a charter membership of 20 Odd Fellows. W. G. Coogin was installed as captain.

A youth movement within Odd Fellowship was exemplified in Marin by the aims and activities of the Marin Star Theta Rho Girls' No. 121 unit, made up of young people 10 to 18 dedicated to the Odd Fellow aspirations of "friendship, love and truth."

Largely responsible for bringing this youth movement to Marin was Wanda Willey of Novato, a member of Golden Star Rebekah Lodge No. 112 of San Rafael. She investigated the IOOF and Rebekah youth programs and determined to bring a Theta Rho Girls' Club to Marin County. Her idea was approved by the Golden Star Rebekahs, and Marin Star Theta Rho Girls No. 121 was instituted on April 14, 1967, with ceremonies conducted by Suzie Jones, president of the California Theta Rho Assembly for 1967-68.

CHARTER MEMBERS and first officers of Marin Star No. 121 were Jean Snyder, president; Melissa Johnson, first vice president; Cynthia Russo, secretary; Rhonda Bordgren, treasurer; Rise Russo, financial secretary; Jacquie Willey, warden; Nancy Irwin, conductor; Janice Hoffman, marshal; Claudia Walters, chaplain, and Stacy Adams, guardian. Wanda Willey was installed as advisor.

Marin Star Theta Rho No. 121 was organized, says Mrs. Willey, to give Marin County youth a constructive service outlet.

Shut-in Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are visited particularly at Christmas time. Holiday baskets are delivered to the needy. Rest homes are visited regularly, and the residents entertained. Present membership of the club is 23 girls and six Rebekahs with five more members soon to be added to the rolls.

THE ODD FELLOW movement also authorized in 1923 a Junior Odd Fellow Lodge program for boys as part of its emphasis upon and appeal to youth. Formation of a Marin County unit is now under way.

Next week the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will be observing its 150th anniversary in the United States with appropriate rites and ceremonies. In San Rafael, for instance, Marin Lodge No. 200 will hold a special "family pot-luck" affair Monday night at which the guest dignitary and speaker will be an important Canadian government official, Newton Stacy, past grand master of the IOOF's District of Columbia, Canada.

It will mark a time when Odd Fellows will not only celebrate the past achievements of their order, but will rededicate themselves to a future in which they will continue to practice with vigor the axiom, "I am my brother's keeper."

MR. AND MRS. ALEXANDER WALKER, long active in Odd Fellow and Rebekah affairs in Marin County, posed with the banner which Mrs. Walker had made for the newly organized San Rafael IOOF Canton No. 39, instituted in 1923. That is also Mrs. Walker at right, since the framed photograph that hangs in the San Rafael Odd Fellows Hall on Fifth Avenue is actually a composite of two pictures showing both sides of the banner. The banner was lost in a 1957 fire which destroyed the IOOF quarters that were then located at Fourth and D. Alexander Walker is deceased, but Mrs. Walker continues to be an active Rebekah.

THIS PHOTOGRAPH IS one of the few mementos from the past history of Marin Odd Fellows Lodge No. 200 and its affiliates to survive the 1957 fire. It also hangs on the wall of the present San Rafael IOOF Hall. It shows the Marin parade team that won first place in competition at the Grand encampment of 1929, held in Watsonville. Uniforms and ritual have long been on important part of Odd Fellowship, but humanitarian and brotherhood efforts are foremost in the IOOF program.

On How To Scratch Those Itchy Palms

If you are one of those who are irritated when the cab driver takes them four blocks out of the way to reach their hotel, when the wait for the after-dinner check in the restaurant seems interminable, when an overzealous porter insists on carrying their overnight cases, then welcome to the ranks of the grudging tipper club.

It's an ever-growing organization among travelers.

Membership entitles you to frown while you resentfully scratch those outstretched itchy palms with your inflation-depreciated money. It even permits you to snatch back your overnight case from that grabby porter, or to leave the barest 10 per cent tip for the waiter when dinner service has been something less than satisfactory.

BUT, ALAS, the times and customs being what they are, in most instances, it does not entitle you to forget to tip the people who perform services for you — especially while abroad. In many instances, the tips are the principal income of these workers.

What does a taxi-driver in Milan expect in the way of a tip? Does the 15 per cent service charge added to your bill in Europe take care of the friendly wine steward who recommended a really magnificent wine at a very reasonable price?

Too large a tip can be as offensive as too small, and. believe it or not, in some places, a very few to be sure, people are offended if you tip them at all.

For both domestic and international travelers, the American Society of Travel Agents has some advice on when, where, whom and how much to tip.

THE BASIC principle to remember is that there are no hard and fast rules concerning tipping, since customs vary widely from country to country, by mode of travel, and by the efficiency and courtesy of the service rendered. Local customs largely determine tipping practices.

The problem, however, especially for the American tourist, is determining what the local customs really are.

Tipping is usually calculated on a percentage basis. Fifteen to 20 per cent is the standard range for almost all services in all countries. If there is a doubt, it is often wiser and safer to overtip by a few cents.

Tipping really is a reward for service and it has traditionally been even more widely practiced in Europe than in the U.S. Europeans seem to tip more often than Americans, but in lesser amounts each time.

Remember, too, that in many countries elaborate service is held in higher esteem than it is in the U.S., so that what seems like the red carpet treatment to Americans might even be considered poor service by some Europeans.

If in doubt about local tipping customs, ask someone who lives in the area.

Following are some guidelines formulated by the travel agents.

AIR TRAVEL — Never tip airline personnel such as flight crews, stewardesses or reservations staffs, no matter how helpful they have been. If someone has been especially helpful, write to the airline and commend that person.

Air terminal porters, and limousine drivers are always tipped. The size of the tip depends on the amount of luggage and the promptness and courtesy of delivery.

HOTELS — Foreign hotels generally add a service charge of 10 to 25 per cent of your bill. In Europe, 15 per cent is customary. Tip porters, bell boys and dining room waiters as they perform their services.

In resort hotels, tipping scales are slightly higher than in metropolitan ones. Occasionally these hotels will add a service charge. Be sure to check. Here, again, tip porters, bell boys and dining room waiters as they perform their services. As you leave the hotel, leave a tip for the room maid. The rate is normally $1 per day of your stay.

RESTAURANTS — Most European restaurants add a service charge to your check. If the service has been good you may still leave 5 per cent above this. If no service charge is added, 15 per cent is the standard tip in Europe. In the Far and Middle East, tips of 10 or 12 per cent are ample.

BARBERS and Beauty Salons — Tip 10 to 20 per cent depending on service and the plushness of the place.

GUIDES — Tip about 15 per cent, which works out usually to be 25 to 50 cents. If the tour is of a religious institution, however, do not tip the guide. Rather, leave the money for charity.

LOCAL TOUR conductors and drivers — They usually are tipped, depending on the cost of the tour and the length and helpfulness of their services. These are often joint tips collected from everyone on the tour.

TAXI DRIVERS — They are normally tipped 15 to 20 per cent of the cost of the ride. In Tokyo, however, they are not tipped.

THEATER USHERS — They are generally not tipped in the U.S. but they are in Europe, with the exception of Switzerland. At least 15 cents is common.

If you are traveling on a tour, a large portion of your tips may be included in the total cost, but probably not all of them. Check with your travel agent or tour conductor as to which tips are included.

The association advises travelers to tip in the local currency. If American money is used, you will often be overtipping because of the difference in the value of the currencies. And, unless you really want to be an ugly American, never tip with gifts.

THREE FACES OF FORMOSA

THE ECONOMY of Formosa or Taiwan is heavily dependent upon three sources or income—fishing, agriculture and tourism. At top, fishing boats are shown tied up along the China Sea coast of the Far Pacific island. Thanks to their catches, shrimp, prawns, lobster, pronfret and other seafood delicacies are a featured part of Formosan cuisine. In center photo, Taiwanese farmers, both men and women, are shown preparing a flooded paddy field for a second planting of rice. The first crop has already been harvested. Fields are terraced and irrigated so that every tillable acre can be used by farmers for growing rice and such other crops as bananas and pineapples. In bottom photo, golfers on a course at Chung Tsing Lake near Koahsiung play in the shadow of one of the many pagodas that dot the island. Taiwan boasts many golf courses, the best known being the Taiwan Golf and Country Club at Tamsui. The courses welcome visitors to Formosa as guest players.

The Big Show At Yosemite

YOSEMITE PARK'S great falls will be more spectacular than ever this spring, National Park Service rangers say, thanks to a large snowpack with an unusually high moisture content. Such falls as Yosemite Falls, above, that drops 2,425 feet in three stages, second only to remote Angel Fall in Venezuela, will become thundering cascades in early May as the thaw sets in.

Record snow depths accumulated at the higher elevations in Yosemite National Park this winter are expected to result in the most spectacular waterfall display in the Park's history this spring.

By early February, well over 100 inches of especially wet snow had piled up at each of nine measuring stations in Yosemite, three times the amount of snow recorded last winter, and twice the park's 30-year average. And, since that date, a good deal more snow has fallen.

NATIONAL PARK Service rangers who made the measurements reported that not only was the snow at record depths, but it had an exceptionally high water content.

As a result, when the big spring thaw comes in May, Yosemite's famed waterfalls are expected to pour forth with cascades of water much larger than ever before. In addition, it is anticipated that the falls will flow full longer into the summer than usual, perhaps into August.

Even before the thaw, the various Yosemite falls, usually just a trickle in the cold winter months, were running fuller than normal. When the spring run-off begins, countless rivulets will cascade down the sheer granite cliffs which ring the Yosemite Valley.

BUT, THE BIG attractions will be such great landmarks as Yosemite Falls, whose 2,425 foot drop is exceeded only by the remote Angel Fall in Venezuela; the picturesque 620 foot Bridalveil Fall; and the smaller but equally beautiful Vernal, Nevada, Royal Arch and Illilouette Falls.

Yosemite officials said that spring in the famed California park, always a particularly pleasant season, will be more dramatic than ever this year.

Vonnegut's New Novel

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE or THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE by Kurt Vonnegut Jr.; Delacorte Press, 186 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Jerry Megahan.

On the day of Feb. 13, 1945, an American prisoner of war was sitting in a cellar in Dresden, Germany, when Allied bombers swept over the city and wreaked the greatest destruction in the history of aerial warfare.

While the city was being reduced to rubble, a gigantic fire storm rolled through the streets, roasting nearly every inhabitant instantaneously. A total of 135,000 lives were lost, compared to 71,379 killed when the first atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

The prisoner of war who lived to tell the tale was Kurt Vonnegut Jr., and whether he knows it or not, in a way, he has been writing about Dresden every time he sits down at a typewriter.

Long before Black Humor became a cant phrase with every kid who ever took Composition 101, Vonnegut's searing vision of the human condition was burning holes in science fiction magazines all across the United States.

From "Sirens of Titan" through "Cat's Cradle," the only book in American history to become a best-seller through sheer word-of-mouth, Vonnegut has had just one real subject: the pettiness, stupidity and indifference of the two-legged animal called man.

Only one black humorist has ever matched him for sheer virulent brilliance of attack; that was Malcolm Purdy and in just one book, "Cabot Wright Begins."

That's why it's such a drag to have to say that "Slaughterhouse-Five" doesn't quite get it.

The trouble is that Vonnegut Indian-wrestled with his subject too long and, above all, the trouble is that Joseph Heller came out with a novel called "Catch-22" about eight years ago. When it comes to writing anti-war novels, prudent men stack arms after reading Heller.

All of which would seem to imply that "Slaughterhouse-Five" is a klinker as a novel. It is not, but neither is it the well-timed shot to the jugular that every novelist lives for.

Vonnegut got Dresden at the heart of "Cat's Cradle" and "Mother Night"; he missed by a hair with this book.

I can even give him a clue as to what went wrong. If Vonnegut is as anxious to repudiate his science fiction beginnings as he appears to be, he had better excise them from his style first. The Tralfamadorean schtick is by far the weakest link in a book which has to be letter-perfect if it would do what Vonnegut wants it to do.

And I'd like to venture a very shrewd guess that the classic phrase "and so it goes" occurred to Vonnegut long before he ever thought of inventing Tralfamadore to justify its usage. To paraphrase the immortal Ed Sullivan, "and so it goes" is a phrase that needs no justification.

KURT VONNEGUT JR.
The nitty gritty

Tralfamadore is a shuck and Vonnegut knows it. It was a cheap way of doing what Vonnegut wanted to do with time in this book. In other words, Vonnegut has allowed his skill at constructing handloomed outhouses to interfere with his genius as an architect.

However, I might also opine that "Slaughterhouse-Five," weak as it is for Vonnegut, whittles any novel, say, Norman Mailer ever wrote down to what it really is.

Mailer and his press agent like to talk about the nitty gritty; Vonnegut has been there and gone.

An Important Work From Soviet Union

CANCER WARD by Alexander Solzhenitsyn; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 560 pages, $10. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

Another chapter in contemporary Russia has reached the shores of the United States with the recent publication of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's massive novel, "Cancer Ward."

It is surely one of the most important works to come out of the Iron Curtain country where the author's works are banned by the Soviet hierarchy.

In sweeping prose Solzhenitsyn portrays the relationships of a group of patients thrown together in a cancer ward in a provincial Soviet hospital.

The hero, Oleg Kostoglotov, clearly resembles the author who himself was confined in such a hospital ward in the mid-1950s and later recovered.

The fear of death is nothing new to Kostoglotov. He had been living in exile when downed by cancer and is only returned for special treatment.

With the word cancer ever present, the author presents a deep insight into the structured society of Communist Russia where privacy is swept away in the confines of a dreary, overcrowded house of mercy for the suffering.

Entwined into this setting is Kostoglotov's tender love affair with one of the hospital's woman doctors. It closely resembles the poignant love affair in "Dr. Zhivago" where destiny played such an important part in bringing the two lovers together and just as sadly tore them apart.

This translation, by Nicholas Bethell and David Burg, is one of two being offered. It is a scholarly presentation, footnoted occasionally, for accuracy. In the novel status "Cancer Ward" will probably equal the success of last year's "Full Cycle," by the same author. But it should also be treated as a great literary art as well. The author's honesty and his challenge of the Soviet machine should alone put it in this class.

Another important chapter in this novel is Solzhenitsyn's letter to the Fourth Congress of Soviet Writers, pleading his case for publication of the work in his native land.

The frustration of the Soviet writer is summed up in one paragraph. In it he asks the congress to discuss:

"The no longer tolerable oppression, in the form of censorship, that our literature has endured for decades, and that the Union of Writers can no longer accept."

'There's Nothing Useless'

HOW TO MAKE SOMETHING FROM NOTHING by Ruth Stearns Egge; Coward-McCann, 224 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

The conversion of discards into decorator items is a hobby that is catching the fancy of more and more Americans. They call it "junking."

In this book, Mrs. Egge tells how she got caught up in it, and how she practices it.

It offers two-fold fun. First there is the search for something unused — in the attic, the garage, the second hand stores, etc. — that strikes a note with the finder. Then its conversion into something that will be used —or at least admired.

Not only is it easy on the budget, but it is also satisfying to the creative urge.

Much of Mrs. Egge's book is devoted to the projects she has carried out successfully — candlesticks from table legs, cabinet chest from an old sewing machine, centerpiece from bits of metal jewelry, compotes from old bowls, etc. Her descriptions of her handiwork techniques are quite clear, and are further amplified by photographs that also prove the worth of her finished pieces.

"A sensible person finds nothing useless," she quotes as her conclusion.

Me And Thee Made Very Real

EXCEPT FOR ME AND THEE by Jessamyn West; Harcourt, Brace and World; 309 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bruce Coleman.

It was the time of the katydids.

"Jess placed his large hand upon her small rough one. 'Thee glad to have it summer, Eliza?'

" 'Summer for us, too,' she said unexpectedly."

This is the tenor of the language between Jess Birdwell and his wife, Eliza, in this warm story of two Quakers and their three small children who go west to Indiana to start their own farm.

It is something very special in our hip times when there seems to be so little of the Birdwell way of life left.

Reviews Of New Reading

Jess and Eliza start out in a log house, suffer the loss of their daughter, Sarah, by scarlet fever and endure unusual hardships when they shelter slaves in the Civil War's underground railroad.

Dialogues are good and so is the humor of Miss West as when Jess, who likes to race horses but feels it a bit un-Quakerish, tries to outmaneuver Eliza. When he returns home from a lost race on the pike, he learns that Eliza had prayed that he would lose. Jess didn't think his wife even knew about the race.

And a sad but plausible talk between Josh and Labe after their sister, Sarah, died: "I wish they hadn't put her in such a deep hole," said Labe. "It was only her body," Josh replied. "It was Sarah," Josh said. "She is an angel." "Can she fly?" "Yes." "Why do you have to die to fly?" Labe asked. "Angels fly," Josh said. "That's why."

Miss West, author of "The Friendly Persuasion," was born in Indiana of Quaker parents and now lives in California. She makes the Birdwells—me and thee—very real.

A Book That Falls 'In-Between'

THE GIRL IN MELANIE KLEIN by Ronald Harwood; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 182 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Jerry Megahan.

One of the curses of being a potluck book reviewer is the small-scale, well-made novel which is too good to be sluffed off with a negative review and too slight to make one want to pull out the stops.

"Melanie Klein" is Harwood's third novel. Not having read the first two, I have no idea whether his career is running forward or backward.

What is very nice about this book is Harwood's ability to shade scene and character in a few quick strokes. Any number of big-reputation writers could take lessons from him on that.

Then, too, he has been very canny in picking a narrative voice. Not many people could write a novel seen through the eyes of a mad, androgynous 50-year-old ballet dancer without toppling over into Carson McCullers. Harwood accomplishes this feat so handily the reader doesn't even notice.

Wing Commander Wassler is a stock "Mad Englishman" character but Miss Nora almost runs away with the whole book. Some Dame Edith Evans type would run amuck with such a part, if this was ever made into a movie.

However, the book falls down when Harwood takes on the task of delineating the catalytic figure, Niobe Grynne, who is "The Girl in Melanie Klein." She never quite comes to life, unfortunately. Her fatal secret is a nice piece of black comedy but not the kind of climax Harwood has been so carefully building.

Dr. Lipschitz, the curator of this madhouse, is similarly inert. And he has tantalizing possibilities, too.

To close with one of the most tiresome of cliches "Melanie Klein" is the work of a most promising writer who has not yet fulfilled that promise.

Maybe next time Harwood will put it all together.

It Might Have Been Something You Ate, Says Science Writer

By DON KEOWN

POISONS IN YOUR FOOD by Ruth Winter; Crown, 248 pages, $5.95.

That stomach churning and head spinning you endured a few days or weeks back may not have been influenza after all. It might have been something you ate.

For all-around quality, admits Ruth Winter, award-winning medical science editor of the Newark, N.J., Star-Ledger and syndicated columnist, America's abundant food supply is the best in the world.

But, she adds, it could and should be much better, and much safer, and she documents that claim in her book, "Poisons in Your Food."

Whether they eat in restaurants or at home, Americans run a considerable risk of consuming along with their salad or entrees a variety of contaminants that play havoc with their insides. And very often they fail to connect their malaise, which may occur many hours later, with their eating.

The villain may have been an additive intentionally placed in the foodstuff after receiving a too hasty clearance for human consumption. It may be a pesticide sprayed on the fields or used in the kitchen. It may be plain filth or a poisonous bacteria promoted by unsanitary surroundings or careless handling.

Mrs. Winter makes the charge that 40 per cent of our communicable diseases are transmitted by food. While it would be impossible for her to prove that figure, she makes it clear that more of our sicknesses, sometimes serious and even fatal, but more often on the discomfort level, are due to contaminated foods than we suspect.

Her book is replete with food poisoning incidents, certain to raise the hackles of an industry which will accuse her of exaggerating the bad and ignoring the good. But she might well reply that the trade should hardly expect applause for doing exactly what it is supposed to do — provide us with clean and wholesome foods. And that if it were meeting that responsibility more consistently, she would not have available to her this lengthy list of horrible examples.

Her most spectacular citations deal with transmissions of salmonella, staphyloccus, shigella, etc., with the spread of trichella and brucellosis, with cases of botulism and virus diseases, sometimes in epidemic proportions.

But perhaps the more sinister aspects of the problem are the slower acting poisons — the pesticides that have crept into our foods and from them into our vital organs, and the additives that have been put there deliberately in answer to our demands for more and more convenience in our groceries.

There are, Mrs. Winter says, 2,764 such products now being added intentionally to our foods, and many of them have been inadequately researched and tested. Man has what amounts to only a shadowy knowledge of the effects of pesticides and many of the additives upon the human body. Indeed, she reminds us, science is frequently and belatedly discovering health hazards in products that the public has been ingesting for years.

Mrs. Winter's book, while alarming, is not purely alarmist. She has concrete, constructive suggestions for dealing with the problem. On the individual level, she offers checklists to help the customer determine the sanitation standards of supermarkets and restaurants. She presents procedures to assist the homemaker in managing her kitchen so as to reduce the dangers of tainted foods. Not all her ideas are easy to implement without virtually unlimited refrigeration space. But they provide a goal.

Her most sweeping recommendations are on the governmental level — for legislation establishing closer supervision of food processing and preparation, for better inspection services, for stepped-up research. Mrs. Winter estimates that inspectors of the understaffed Pure Food and Drug Administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture, check no more than 10 per cent of the food destined for American tables — and that is only "spot-checked." State systems are even less effective.

From her book one learns that our pesticide regulations are less rigid than those of Germany, that our trucking of frozen and highly perishable foods is often done without the temperature graphs required by law in Britain, that with all our use of chemicals our growing methods are less efficient than those of Japan, that our medical schools pay but slight attention to nutritional studies contributing to poor diagnoses of food illnesses and allergies.

Mrs. Winter, incidentally the wife of a neurosurgeon, has written a book in the Rachel Carson-Ralph Nader tradition pointing up a problem deserving of more attention than it has been receiving from the public and from the government. No doubt what she has written will create a stir — perhaps a storm — of interest. It is to be hoped that it will be of sufficient intensity, and duration, to effect at least some of the reforms she advocates.

PHOTOGRAPHER Robert Wenkam's picture of a pandanus tree on Ke's Beach in Hawaii is one of the illustrations in "Kauai and the Park Country of Hawaii," originally published by the Sierra Club in its Exhibit Format Series and now reprinted by Ballantine Books as a $3.95 paperback.

SUNSET EDITORS have issued an "all-new edition" of their "Garden & Patio Building Book," 96 pages in softcover and priced at $1.95.

The publication is crammed with construction ideas for the outdoor living area, ranging from a garden gate to a gazebo. There's practical instruction for such projects as waterfalls and ponds, steps, retaining walls, benches, trellises, storage sheds, barbecues, screens, hotbeds and fences. Both drawings and photographs serve as illustrations, and are employed generously and effectively.

Lane Magazine & Book Co. of Menlo Park, the Sunset parent firm, is the publisher.

"FALL OUT Laughing, Beetle Bailey" is a collection of antics of the Mort Walker-created cartoon character, the fouled-up GI, Beetle Bailey, and his buddies, published as a 75-cent paperback by Grosset and Dunlap on its Tempo Books label.

Beetle was lousing up the army long before Gomer Pyle began unraveling the Marine Corps, and the syndicated strip now appears in 1,100 newspapers as one of the few comic strips that are really comic.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE OLD ENGLISH PEEP SHOW by Peter Dickinson; Harper & Row, 216 pages $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Peter Dickinson, former Punch editor and satirical versemaker, scored big with his first suspense novel, "The Glass-Sided Ants' Nest." This, his second, is certain to earn him new praise for originality and style.

Superintendent Pibble is dispatched by Scotland Yard to Herryngs, ancestral home of two of England's most distinguished World War II heroes. There has been a death there. In the midst of the historical spectacle, plus lion park, that have made Herryngs a major tourist attraction, Pibble begins to suspect that the unreality goes deeper than just the veneer of showmanship for visiting Americans.

Dickinson writes with a fine, restrained sense of humor that enhances his story-telling and adds zest to a novel rich in eccentric characters and geographical color.

VINTAGE, a Random House division, has published an interesting list of paperback reprints aimed at the intellectual readers.

Heading the list are Jean Lacouture's definitive political biography of Ho Chi Minh, and Staughton Lynd's "Intellectual Origins of American Radicalism."

Some of the other titles include Andre Malraux's "Man's Fate," the "Latin American Radicalism" report on nationalist and leftist movements in the lands to our south, edited by Irving Louis Horowitz, Josue de Castro and John Gerassi; and another highly regarded collection, "Towards a New Past; Dissenting Essays in American History," edited by Barton J. Bernstein.

There are others on the same high plane, priced at from $1.65 to $2.45, and indicative of the kind of brain-testing reading fare that is available today in the inexpensive softcover format.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Dover Publications has completed the reprinting of Andrew Lang's great collection of fairytales with the appearance of six more volumes in its high quality paperback format.

The new arrivals are "The Crimson Fairy Book," "The Olive Fairy Book," "The Grey Fairy Book," "The Orange Fairy Book," "The Pink Fairy Book" and "The Lilac Fairy Book," each priced at $1.95.

The other six members of the color series that began in 1889 with the publication of "The Blue Fairy Book' had been reissued earlier by Dover.

Lang collected the classic stories of many lands, from the popular tales of Denmark's Hans Christian Andersen and Germany's Brothers Grimm to Eskimo and African folk stories. There are approximately 35 fantasy and magic stories per book, all retold with the special facility that made Lang famous.

All of H. J. Ford's original illustrations are also reproduced in what is a dazzling piece of scholarship and a most worthwhile contribution to the archives of folk and fairytale literature. Parents, as much as children, will enjoy these delightful reminders of a world of princes, sorcerers and speaking animals.

Some other new books for the juniors:

Peter Dickinson, African-born Londoner who turned from satirical verse to suspense novels and scored a big hit with adults, has now written his first book for juniors, "The Weathermonger" (Little, Brown, $4.95). It is a science fiction-adventure tale about a young British couple five years in the future and in a dramatically changed country that has reverted to the Middle Ages. Dickinson is a most imaginative plotter and a superb stylist, so that his depiction of a clash between superstition and science is charged with excitement. Youngsters at the 13 and 14-year level capable of handling the taste of terror will revel in Dickinson's inventiveness.

Writing for girls in the primary grades, Jean Little, the Formosa-born Canadian daughter of missionaries, has added another book to her growing list—"One to Grow On" (Little, Brown, $4.50). Janie Chisholm seemingly can't help herself from lying. But her godmother, Tilly, comes to her rescue and together they find the cause, thus opening up a whole new way of life for the young girl. Jean Little stories are always professionally written and plotted on sound moral grounds.

There's a phantom hound that howls at the moon and all kinds of other strange goings-on in "The Mystery of the Crimson Ghost" (Westminster, $3.75). And deeply involved in this ghostly mystery set in New Jersey's Sussex County are the young girl, Janey, and the horse, Star. The author is Phyllis A. Whitney, one of the best of the spinners of Gothic novels for both adults and juniors. This is a particularly appealing and exciting effort on her part, ideal for girls in the 12, 13 and 14-year bracket who are mystery story buffs.

Sister Noemi Weygant of the Order of St. Benedict might well be called "the photographing nun." Her camera work has won her many professional awards. In her earlier "It's Autumn" she combined poetry, photographs and nature lore into a most appealing book. Now she has done "It's Spring," (Westminister, $3.95) that captures beautifully the special magic of this season. While it is essentially a book for young people to whom spring has a special meaning, the poems and colored photographs will attract all ages.

Fibrous Begonia Is A Marin Favorite

There's good reason — in fact a number of good reasons—for the popularity that fibrous begonias enjoy among Marin County gardeners.

First, they are perennials that reward their growers with not one, but several years, of beautification.

Secondly, they are among the showiest of the perennials, indeed one of the few that can compete with the annuals from the standpoint of colorful bloom.

THEY ARE among our hardiest perennials. While they are essentially shade lovers, they will take a considerable amount of sun in Marin. And they are capable of withstanding far harder frosts than those normally experienced in this county.

They have a long blooming period.

Care is minimal.

And they are extremely versatile and diverse. Fibrous begonias come in blooming colors of red, white and pink. Foliage hues range from apple green to a deep red-brown that is almost a mahogany.

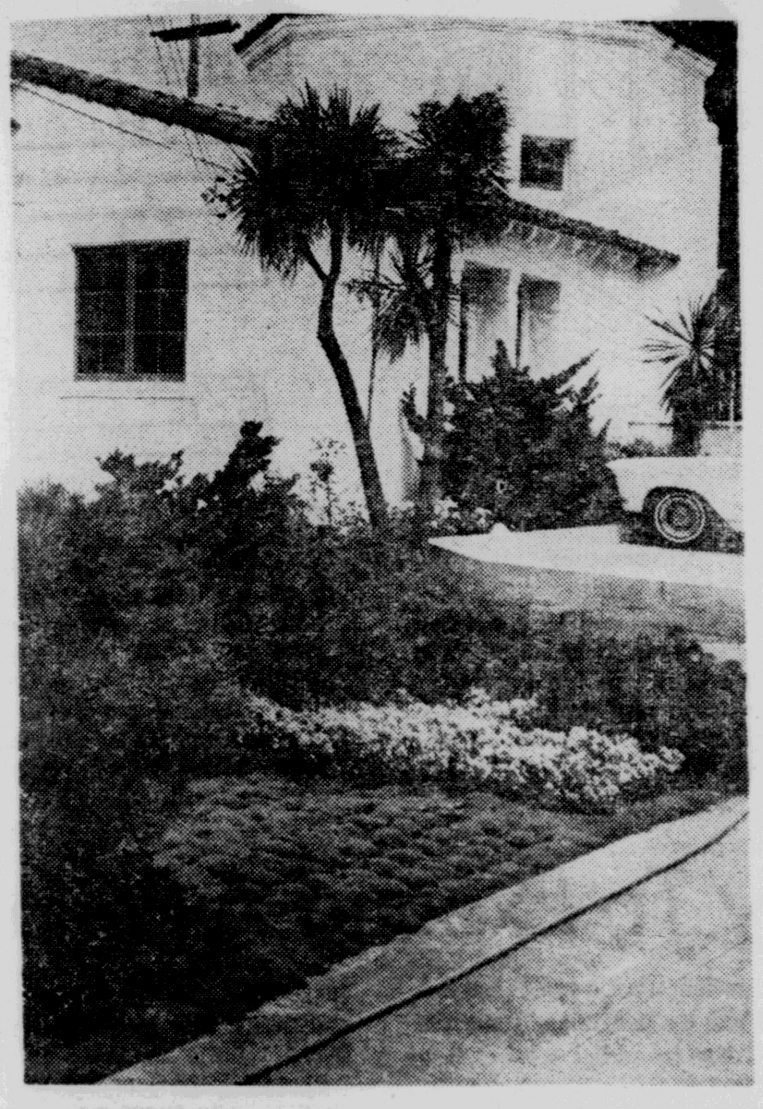
AS FOR SIZE, there are the semperflorens that stand 24 to 30 inches tall, ideal for foundation and background plantings. And there are the dwarfs less than a foot high that make splendid borders or massed beds.

Now is the time to purchase fibrous begonias in the nurseries as small, inexpensive bedding plants in flats.

In planting, use a nurseryman's prepared mixture to assure good drainage and the humus needed in the soil.

Once in the ground, fibrous begonias need no pampering. Just water regularly and deeply, feed sparingly.

If you haven't already been won over to them, you won't be long in discovering why fibrous begonias enjoy such a loyal following among Marin gardeners.



DWARF PINK fibrous begonias planted in a setting with junipers and mugho pines and with a Scotch moss groundcover provide just the proper accent, eye-pleasing without being overpowering. Such begonias, available now from bedding flats in the nurseries, will continue to bloom into the winter months. (Photo courtesy of the California Association of Nurserymen)

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓It is planting time for dahlias, tuberous begonias, gladiolus and a large assortment of other summer-flowering bulbs.

✓To prevent damage to your grass in mowing the lawn, take these two precautions: Make certain that your mower blades are sharp. And do not cut lower than an inch and a half from the ground. Mowings that are too close expose the grass to sunburning and result in browning of the lawn.

✓If you haven't already done so, "spring-feed" your lawn. And while you are at it, combine the application of an insecticide with your fertilizer to take care of two jobs at once.

✓Bedding plants of popular annuals and perennials are in abundance at the nurseries.

✓Gardenias should be fed once a month, beginning now. Special food is available. And unless your soil is perfect, the feed should be augmented with applications of iron chelates.

How To Repair That Pesky Leaky Faucet

Handyman's Page

A leaky faucet wastes water and causes discoloration of the sink, important reasons why it should be fixed. But it is likely that more persons are annoyed by the persistent drip-drip than are worried by the waste of water or the resulting stain.

Whatever the reason for the decision to halt the leak, the repair usually can be made effectively, even by someone to whom most plumbing problems are something of a mystery. The most important step is the first one — shutting off the water.

IN SOME fixtures, this is done by turning the handle underneath the sink in a clockwise direction. In others, the shut-off valve to that particular line may be in the basement or the utility room.

And in a small minority of instances, it is necessary to close the main shut-off valve.

Step No. 2 is to loosen the cap or packing nut just under the handle. Use a wrench with smooth jaws so as not to mar the nut. To be doubly sure of not causing any damage, wrap adhesive tape around the nut, which is turned counterclockwise.

WHEN THE cap nut is loose, turn the handle in the same direction as when you turn on the water, going as far as you can. The shaft or stem of the faucet can then be removed, either by lifting it out or unscrewing it.

The washer at the end of the stem will be worn or chewed up. Remove it by taking out the holding screw. Put a new washer of the same size in its place, replace the parts in the opposite order in which they were removed, turn on the water and the job is done.

In nearly all cases, it's as simple as that. Once in a while, you'll run into trouble. The screw won't come out. Or there will still be a leak after the washer has been replaced. Or your faucet won't be of the compression type still in use in the majority of homes.

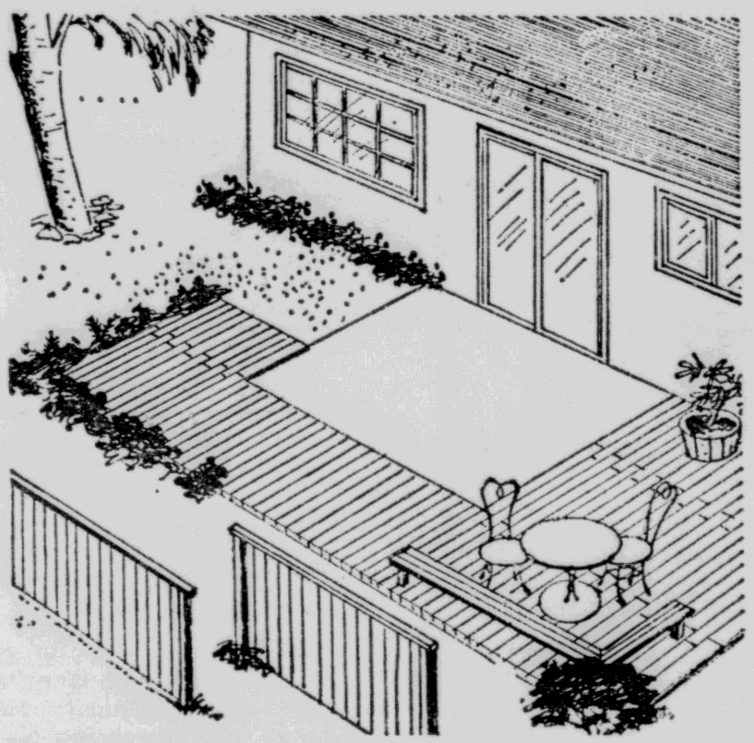
IN ANY OF these events, you can take the stem to your hardware dealer and ask his advice—or you can call a plumber.

In discussing the matter with the hardware dealer, ask him about the possibility of using a gadget other than a washer. Some work well, some don't.

If you're having a lot of trouble with old faucet fixtures and you're in the mood to spend more money for something better, consider the purchase of the single lever or other type of modern faucet, some of which do not utilize conventional washers.

BUT IF YOU do purchase a washer, be sure to get one of the same size as the old one.

In this area, too, you have a choice. There are different kinds of washers, some made of materials which last longer than others and some of which work better with hot water faucets.



AN ORDINARY paved patio has been expanded to a more generous size simply by adding a wooden deck. Built in joining eight-foot squares, the deck uses pressure-treated Douglas fir two-by-fours for both framing and deck boards. Joists rest on 12-by-12-inch concrete pads. Gravel beneath the deck inhibits weeds and helps drainage. Screens may be added for privacy.

An Easy Way To Expand A Patio

Of all the rooms in the house, it's the roofless one that a family outgrows the fastest.

No sooner is the barbecue purchased and a chaise longue installed than the family begins discovering the many enjoyments of outdoor living. And all of them add up to a need for more space.

Fortunately, when the backyard is more or less level, expanding a patio can be easy — on both the budget and the back. It's done by adding a wood deck all around the existing patio.

THE DECK addition will be easy to handle if it's built on an eight-foot-square module, using a framing system so simple that the only materials required are two-by-fours and concrete foundation pads, plus nails and some gravel.

The construction crew can be family-size and, for tools, just a hammer, saw and carpenter's level are needed.

After roughly leveling the ground, the first step for each square is to position 12-by-12-by-three-inch pads on three-foot, six-inch centers. Nine pads are needed, one at each corner, one centered on each side, and one in the middle of the square.

JOISTS COME next: three eight-foot two-by-fours are laid parallel, on edge and centered over the pads. Be sure joists are level.

Now two-by-four-inch blocking is nailed crosswise between joists. Six pieces are needed, one at each footing. If offset slightly, they can be nailed through the end where they meet the center joist.

Spread a three-inch layer of gravel on the ground under the deck to inhibit plant growth and improve drainage.

Finally, nail on the deck boards, laying them at right angles to the joists. Again use eight-foot two-by-fours, spacing them about one-eighth inch apart. Nail deck planks twice to each joist.

IT'S NO TRICK to join the basic eight-foot squares to make a deck of whatever size or shape is needed. Going in the direction of the joists, simply repeat the basic square. Going in the direction of the deck boards, adjoining squares share a row of foundation pads.

But instead of a single centered joist, two joists are used laid on opposite edges of the pads with a nine-inch space left between.

Then, to avoid a hard, straight line where deck boards meet end-to-end, a staggered joint may be created by cutting every other plank three inches shorter than those in between. For the adjoining square, the same thing is done, but opposite.

WHERE NEEDED for shape or size, the basic eight-foot square is easily broken down into a two-by-four-foot rectangle or a four-foot square. It's also easy to split the basic square diagonally to make a triangle, as desired.

For a close-to-ground deck pressure-treated Douglas fir or cedar two-by-fours should be used for joists.

Zucker Keeps His Job In Marathon Hearing

3-2 Vote Swung By Gnoss

By WAT TAKESHITA

Marin County Planning Director Paul C. Zucker, praised for comptence but accused of "rudeness and arrogance," won a 3 to 2 vote of confidence from the board of supervisors yesterday after a non-stop seven and one-half hour hearing.

Just before 5 p.m., Supervisor William A. Gnoss of Novato, leaning heavily on the almost unanimous support of Zucker from North Marin groups, cast the deciding vote in favor of retaining Zucker in his $20,664-a-year job.

Supervisor Michael Wornum moved that the supervisors find the Marin County Grand Jury charges against Zucker unsubstantiated and that the 34-year-old planning director be retained.

GNOSS' STAND

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. seconded the motion. Gnoss admitted he was one of the supervisors who had suggested Zucker resign at last Tuesday's closed meeting. However, the widespread public support for Zucker, particularly the solid backing from the North Marin Federation of Homeowners and Improvement Associations, swayed his vote in favor of Zucker.

Gnoss voted in such a low voice that no one in the audience could hear. When Chairman John F. McInnis announced that Gnoss had voted aye, a cheer went up, and a crowd gathered around Zucker to congratulate him.

Voting against Zucker were McInnis and Louis H. Baar.

Baar explained he wanted to fire Zucker because a man that controversial "is bad for a community." Futhermore, he said, Zucker had been discourteous and rude in his relations with the public. "If the board members feel an employee is not doing an adequate job, the only thing to do is to remove him."

McINNIS VIEW

McInnis said no one questions the professional competence of Zucker. But beyond technical competence, he said, the planning director must make requirements crystal clear and so clearly spelled out that a developer will know exactly where he stands.

"It is my conviction that Mr. Zucker is incapable of carrying out this latter requirement," said McInnis.

He said he criticized Zucker two years ago for being discourteous to the public, but the plan-

ROSS COUNCILMEN APPOINT WALKER

Secret Interviews Upheld As Legal; Second Nomination Gets No Second

Attorney Ralph C. Walker was named to the Ross Town Council last night, filling the vacancy created by the March 27 resignation of Jack Carney.

The appointment was made by a 3-1 vote of the town council after five applicants were interviewed in closed session.

Councilmen Roy Farrington Jones and Dr. W. James Dawson and Mayor Frederick S. Allen voted for Walker, with Natalie Lewis dissenting. She had nominated another of the candidates, John H. Chase of 111 Upper Road, but this received no second.

SWORN IN

The appointment was effective immediately. Walker, 31, of 32 Woodside Way, was sworn in immediately after his selection was announced.

The other applicants for the seat vacated by Carney — who resigned because of his added commitments as a radio and television personality — were H. K. Bate of Lagunitas Road, Walter J. Brown of 94 Baywood Drive and Richard Tracy, also of Lagunitas Road.

SECRECY QUERIED

The council's decision to interview the candidates in closed session was questioned by Clay C. Meredith of Woodside Way.

"Does the Town Council's decision conflict with the (Ralph M.) Brown Act?" Meredith asked. "These people are not applicants for a job, but for public office. Normally, candidates must face the voters and are not interviewed by incumbents."

Mayor Frederick S. Allen, however, said that Town Atty. Robert W. Elliot had ruled that it was not a violation of the Brown Act, a state law which regulates which type of meetings may be held in secret.

"It would be unfair to interview them in public," Allen said. He indicated that since each candidate would be asked the same questions, then the first applicant would be in a far more difficult position than the last."

QUIZ REVEALED

Following the closed session, the council outlined the questions it had asked each candidate. The questions pertained to matters currently facing the town of Ross, including animal control, flood control, expansion of the police and fire units and expansion of Ross General Hospital.

Walker has lived in Ross four and a half years and works in San Francisco. He said that there was no particular issue which spurred his decision to seek the council seat.

All five of the candidates said they felt the closed session of interviewing was the "fairest" way of conducting the selection, although none of them indicated that they would have minded a public interview.

Red Korea Claims U.S. Fled Talks

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea accused the United States today of trying to "reverse black and white" by stating that the U.S. reconnaissance plane shot down in the Sea of Japan last Tuesday was in international air space.

Maj. Gen. Lee Choon-sun, North Korea's chief delegate to the armistice commission meeting at Panmunjom, reiterated his government's claim that the U.S. Navy plane carrying 31 persons was downed after it violated Red air space.

Lee asserted that U.S. Air Force Maj. Gen. James B. Knapp, head of the U.N. Command delegation, "fled" from the meeting because he feared "exposure of the truth" about the plane.

Lee accused Knapp of a "flagrant violation of the Korean armistice agreement" in walking out. The North Korean Central News Agency, which broadcast Lee's statement, said the walkout came 42 minutes after the meeting started when Lee asked three times for identification of the unit to which the downed plane was attached.

In Seoul, South Korean President Chung-hee Park met with top aides to study President Richard M. Nixon's statements to a Washington news conference on the plane incident.

Nixon said yesterday he had ordered protection against armed attack on U.S. intelligence planes near the North Korean coast and added that the flights were being resumed after a brief suspension.

North Viet Living Bombs Batter At U.S. Outpost

SAIGON (UPI)—North Vietnamese soldiers with bundles of explosives strapped to their bodies partially overran a U.S. outpost below the border Demilitarized Zone (DMZ), killing 11 Americans and wounding 23 in a three-hour battle announced today.

At the same time, U.S. headquarters said a column of American tanks yesterday crushed a Communist base camp northwest of Saigon and killed 82 guerrilla defenders. Front reports said the battle cost the United States four tanks and seven GIs killed.

The battle two miles below the DMZ late yesterday saw 150 North Vietnamese charge out of the jungle against U.S. Marines and soldiers of the U.S. 5th Mechanized Infantry Division who drew their armored personnel carriers into a tight circle, wagon train style.

Communist soldiers detonating the explosives strapped to their bodies destroyed three of the armored carriers and blew a hole in the U.S. defense perimeter. Other guerrillas surged through.

War communiques said the American soldiers called in divebombers and artillery strikes to help lift the siege. After three hours, the North Vietnamese withdrew, leaving behind 13 bodies, military spokesmen said.

The DMZ area fighting and the battle 50 miles northwest of Saigon were the heaviest combat of the week reported by the U.S. command.

Military spokesmen said the U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment sent a column of tanks against the guerrilla bunker base camp near Saigon, overrunning the camp but losing four tanks in the process. Seven Americans died and 28 suffered wounds in the fighting.

In Saigon, a U.S. soldier who escaped from 14 months of Communist captivity told of his joy on being picked up by an American helicopter crew. His first words to the pilot were, "I love you! I love you!"

The GI, Spec. 5 Thomas H. Van Putten, 21, of Caledonia, Mich., was suffering from dehydration and malnutrition when he was picked up near the Cambodian border Thursday.

OAKLAND (UPI) — Oakland's Merritt College was closed at 1 p.m. yesterday after a band of militants raided the campus bookstore and distributed some 500 textbooks to poor students.

The band of black, white and Mexican-American raiders ignored the protests of President Norvel Smith, who said "this is not the way to solve the problems." (See other campus unrest, page 2.)

It was the second day of trouble at Merritt, where 40 per cent of the 10,000 day and evening students are black or Mexican in descent. On Thursday, 30 members of the faculty

Sort-Of-Secret Report Expected To Deny Oil Slick Killed Whales

By LARRY D. HATFIELD

The federal government will issue a report early next week which probably will say the death of five whales washed ashore on Northern California beaches last month was not caused by the huge oil leak from an offshore well in Santa Barbara Channel, it has been learned.

It was not known with complete certainty that the oil which leaked from an offshore rig of the Union Oil Co. would not be blamed for the whales' deaths, but one phase of the report that already has leaked out indicated oil was not the cause.

Additionally, several government scientists on the West Coast said they doubted that the oil could be blamed.

Two of the whales washed up on West Marin beaches.

The U.S. Department of Interior, meanwhile, denied that it had ordered its people in the field not to discuss results of tests on the dead whales.

"There's been no muzzle of any sort," a highly placed Interior Department spokesman in Washington, D.C., said. "At least not from here." He said if such an order had been issued, "It was done by some bureaucrat away from here."

Ford Wilfkie, director of the department's Bureau of Commercial Fisheries Marine Mammal Laboratory in Seattle, told the Independent-Journal he had been ordered not to talk about a study completed by federal researchers on the lungs of at least one of the dead whales. He would not say who ordered him to remain silent. Other govern-

SOUND ON SOUND — SOUND WITH SOUND. What's the difference? Some confusion exists about sound on sound and sound with sound. Many times the instructions that accompany a tape recorder are not very clear with their explanations.

SOUND WITH SOUND is the simplest of the two. One way of accomplishing sound with sound is to record, say from a record, an orchestra onto channel A or left track of a recorder. While recording the music, record someone singing along with the music by using a microphone plugged into the B channel or right track of the recorder. When the tape is played back, the orchestra will be heard from the left speaker and vocalist will be heard on the right speaker; thus, sound with sound. Of course, any two combinations may be used such as an orchestra and a musical instrument. Another form of sound with sound is used for language instruction. The instructor track contains spoken phrases in a foreign language followed by a pause of about the same length as the spoken phrase. The student listens to the instructor track and records his version of the spoken phrase on track two immediately after hearing the instructor; thus, the student's phrase will accompany the pause on the instructor's track. When finished the student can play back the tape and compare his phrase with that of the instructor's by listening to both tracks. The student track may be erased and used over and over again without destroying the instructor's track.

SOUND ON SOUND is a method of combining sounds. To illustrate, a person makes a recording on track A by playing a guitar and singing the lead part. The tape is then rewound back to the starting point. The singer-guitarist puts on a headset. The microphone is plugged into the B channel of the recorder. While listening over the headset to the original recording, he sings a melody part and plays additional parts with his guitar. This second set of voice and music is recorded on channel B at the same time as the original sound of channel A is being transferred or dubbed onto channel B. When finished, channel B will contain two voices and two guitars. This is sound on sound. This process can be continued by transferring the two parts on channel B back to channel A and at the same time recording third parts along with it. To do these things, one must have a stereo recorder. Visit us for further information.

"WHO KNOWS WHERE THE TIME GOES?" — Judy Collins — Elektra EKS-71033:

Judy's latest attests to the mature taste and sensitivity which pervades not only her delivery of a song but also her choice of tunes and instrumental backing. Electric piano adds an interesting touch here and there, and such fine performers as Van Dyke Parks and Steve Sills contribute to the excellent accompanying group. "Pretty Polly" reminds one of Weill, "Story of Isaac" sounds like Leonard Cohen (which it is), and in "Someday Soon" Judy sounds more like Joan Baez, with the pedal steel guitar adding a subtle country mood to the tune. Bravo Judy again!

"WHEATSTRAW SUITE" — The Dillards — Elektra EKS-74035:

This group produced some delightful Kentucky bluegrass LPs a few years ago, and now they are back with their version of the latest "sound" from that part of the country. It is sort of a pop-country-folk-bluegrass mixture, with the distinctive sounds of the Dobro, mandolin and pedal steel guitars. The voice and tunes of Rodney Dillard are a real treat. You don't even have to be a country music fan to enjoy the Dillards.

"RESTORATION RUIN" — Keith Jarrett — Vortex 2008:

This is an amazing LP. Jarrett, pianist for the Charles Lloyd jazz group, has put together a tour-de-force of talent and imagination. He wrote all 10 tunes, and aside from a string quartet background on some, all the varied instruments heard are played (through tape overdubbing) by himself. He also sings on several. The style is unclassifiable, touching on jazz, rock, blues, classics. This is one of the most inspiring examples of the fantastic musical creativity which very young performers in the music of today are coming up with.

"CLEANLINESS AND GODLINESS SKIFFLE BAND'S GREATEST HITS"—Vanguard VSD-79285:

The "good time sound" in folk-rock seems to have fallen by the wayside and I for one regret it. The Lovin' Spoonful and Sopwith Camel were at their best a barrel of fun, and for lovers of those optimistic, whimsical tunes here is an LP that will have you jumping for joy. Contrary to the title, this is the local groups' first LP, and it features such standards as "Dr. Jazz," atmospheric ballads like "Lotus Blossom" and hilarious originals such as "Do It Up." Annie Johnston is the female member of the group, heard in some great vocals as well as on mandolin and guitar. Hank Bradley is a singing fiddler, as well as doing mandolin and harmonica.

Regents Take Back Control Over Hiring

BERKELEY (UPI)—The University of California Board of Regents has voted to take back from the president and chancellors the authority to make faculty appointments and promotions.

The vote was regarded as a major victory for Gov. Ronald Reagan, an ex-officio regent, who strongly opposed the appointment of controversial Dr. Herbert Marcuse by San Diego Chancellor William J. McGill.

The chancellors of the nine campuses termed yesterday's action a vote of no confidence and U.C. President Charles J. Hitch said, "You might say that a vote of confidence has been withdrawn."

The authority to hire and promote faculty members had been delegated to the chancellors three years ago in a decentralization move, but campus controversies led some regents to want to take it back.

SPLIT VOTE

The vote was 14 to 10 with Hitch and the chancellors voting against returning the authority to the regents and Reagan and the ex-officio members (state political leaders) voting for it.

The new rule provides that chancellors must submit to the regents recommendations on appointments and promotions each month. The regents have ten days from their monthly meeting to exercise a veto.

Hitch pointed out that since the regents do not meet in August and December, the delay on appointments could be as long as 70 days, long enough for another university to hire a professor in demand.

POLITICAL CLAUSE

After passing the measure on faculty appointments, Regent William M. Roth proposed an amendment to read: "Provided further that no political tests shall ever be considered in connection with any appointment or promotion of any faculty member or employee."

The amendment was passed unanimously.

Earlier in the meeting, Regent Fred Dutton charged that the university was "in fact a racist institution" that is making a "Band-Aid response" to the needs of minority students.

Dutton's remarks came after a report from Hitch on plans the university has for helping minority students.

Dutton said the university has "about 3 per cent" Negroes and Mexican-Americans among its students and declared, "It is silly for us to make a Band-Aid response to the urban crisis when there are 25 per cent blacks and Mexican-Americans in our population."

Dutton also became involved in a controversy when he accused an Alameda County Sheriff's deputy of needlessly roughing up a student demonstrator outside the regents' meeting.

Dutton said he saw a deputy take two steps to strike the student who was obeying orders to walk back across the street and became angered when the deputy refused to identify himself.

"They're going to keep doing as they damn well please, regardless of the citizens of the state," Dutton said.

White Radical Actions Hit By Hayakawa

CHICAGO (UPI)—Dr. S. I. Hayakawa says black student militants have definite goals in sight while many white radicals on campus have "nothing but revolution and destruction on their minds."

"I'd like to make a sharp distinction between white radicals and black radicals," the acting president of San Francisco State College said yesterday. "Black radical revolutionaries—such as the Black Students Union—have very definite goals, if and when they create a disturbance.

"Their goal is for a more just society in the future."

He said white radicals may use the same slogans, but they "have nothing but revolution and destruction on their minds." The college president, who lives in Mill Valley, made the comments at a news conference before a speech to the Executive Club.

"Disagreement and dissent are always legitimate...but disorder and destruction are not protected by the university community and cannot be."

Hayakawa rejected a "double standard" applied by some students and faculty members in thinking about campus confrontations. He said large numbers of teachers and students look for any excuse to make "irrational student behavior seem rational." However, he said, "if police act rationally, they get no such break, and this is a double standard."

Hayakawa said many professors seem to have a class prejudice against policemen, most of whom do not hold college degrees.

While Hayakawa spoke, about 40 pickets, both black and white, paraded in front of the hotel, where he spoke. One sign being carried read: "Hayakawa —Tool of Millionaires."

Nixon Tax Ideas Due In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is to send to Congress Monday his first requests for tax reforms expected to include recommendations for lifting the tax burden from the poor.

Nixon did not mention any details at yesterday's news conference when he said an "interim tax reform package" would go to Capitol Hill next week.

But one proposal the administration favors is to increase the minimum standard deduction allowed on income tax returns —a step that would benefit impoverished people who still have to dig up money to pay taxes.

The idea has been under discussion in the House Ways and Means Committee which open hearings Tuesday on administration tax proposals.

The President may recommend that all persons officially classified by the government as "poor" be taken off the tax rolls.

The Johnson administration backed an increase in the minimum standard deduction and estimated it would remove from taxpayer lists nearly half of approximately 2.5 million poor people subject to some tax.

Presidential counsellor Arthur F. Burns, who pulls together economic policy matters for Nixon, indicated last Sunday changes in deductions were under consideration for helping the poor.

The government classification of the poverty level is $3,600 income for a family of four.

New Campus Uproars; Stanford Sit-In Over

COMBINED AP & UPI

Black students occupied the Cornell University student center shortly after dawn today, then scuffled briefly with white students. At the Atlanta University Center, dissident students held about 25 members of the board of trustees as prisoners behind chained doors.

At several other major university campuses — including Stanford — protests had ended or were suspended.

About 40 black students at Cornell, protesting reprimands given to three Negro students for demonstrating last December, took over Willard Straight Hall, forcing the school to order 30 parents and 40 school employees out of the building.

The parents were on the Cornell campus at Ithaca, N.Y., for the annual Parents Weekend.

About 20 white students climbed through a window of the student center about four hours after the peaceful takeover by the members of the Cornell Afro-American Society.

Three of the white students reportedly suffered minor injuries in the scuffle, which was broken up by campus police. The white students were ejected from the building.

The black students broadcast briefly over the student radio station, housed in the building, and charged Cornell with having "racist attitudes" and failing to provide a relevant black studies program.

In Atlanta, Ga., the students at the predominantly Negro, six-college complex were demanding that white trustees resign and that the university be renamed for the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a graduate of Morehouse, one of the six colleges. The trustees were locked in the room yesterday morning.

Coffee and food was brought by campus guards to the trustees.

Students allowed the guards into the third floor conference room where the trustees were held.

Other than campus security police, there was no sign of city police on the Atlanta campus.

Week's end saw at least a temporary halt to student protests on four campuses, including a week-long strike at Harvard and a nine-day Stanford University sit-in.

Several hundred Stanford University students cleaned up after themselves and left the school's Applied Electronics laboratory, yesterday ending a nine-day occupation.

Their decision to leave was apparently influenced by hints by President Kenneth S. Pitzer and the student-faculty judicial council that federal troops might be used to protect secret government files in the building. Pitzer also agreed to keep the lab closed to all but maintenance personnel for a week, and the protestors felt the promise was as good as a continuation of the occupation.

Pitzer had vowed not to use force to end the peaceful sit-in, but the council warned there was "imminent danger that external forces, beyond university control, in particular federal troops, may enter the campus to deal with various aspects of the situation."

The students said they would hold a mass meeting next Friday to consider further action, including possible "reoccupation of a university building."

At Columbia University in New York, 20 students voted to leave because they felt they did not have enough support to continue in violation of the court ban.

Demonstrators at Queensboro Community College in New York ended a sit-down late yesterday after their members dwindled from an original 650 to about 50. Some 300 police entered the campus, told about 50 holdouts they would be arrested if they stayed, and watched them leave.

A three-day sit-in ended yesterday at La Salle College in Philadelphia as university officials agreed to make ROTC voluntary. La Salle had been one of a handful of schools in the country requiring students to take the program.

Pleads Guilty To Lesser Charge

Gary Sheppard Stevens, 19, of San Anselmo, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a reduced charge of being in a place where narcotics were used.

Thus ended almost a year of charges and dismissals stemming from a raid May 28, 1968, on a residence in San Rafael, where the youth was living at the time.

He had variously been charged with possessing LSD, cultivating marijuana and offering mescaline for sale and selling another substance. The latter charge was dismissed yesterday by Judge Peter Allen Smith.

Stevens was ordered to appear for sentencing May 27.

Senators Launch Save-The-Bay Try

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A strong public campaign is needed now to protect San Francisco Bay from unplanned and unnecessary filling, six state senators from the Bay Area warned yesterday.

They urged help in the fight against lobbyists of powerful interests that seek to end the ban on the filling of San Francisco Bay. Persons were asked to write to the Senate Committee on Governmental Efficiency.

This committee, the senators said, has the power to kill pending bills that would "emasculate present controls on filling."

The senators are George Moscone, D-San Francisco; Lewis Sherman, R-Oakland; Nicholas C. Petris, D-Oakland; Alfred Alquist, D-San Jose; John Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, and Clark Bradley, R-San Jose.

Italian Civil Servants Strike

ROME (AP) — More than a million civil servants went on strike across Italy today, halting the state-run railroad, closing schools, holding up mail deliveries and delaying the weekly lottery draw.

Nearly all train runs stopped this morning for the 24-hour work boycott called by unions to demand wage hikes and job classification improvements for civil servants.

Except for travelers, most Italians appeared unaffected by the strike because it came on a weekend. But the disruption in the national lottery draw disappointed many.

BART Link To Airport Is Urged

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Planning and Urban Development Association (SPUR) has strongly endorsed extending the Bay Area Rapid Transit system to the airport.

SPUR said San Francisco should form a non-profit corporation to issue revenue bonds to finance the extension.

The BART system, now under construction, is to end at Daly City. The system will not, under present plans, serve any portion of San Mateo County, where the airport is located.

The private planning group rejected the concept of a privately owned monorail from downtown San Francisco to the airport.

"If a monorail system could be self-supporting, there is no reason why a BART system would not also pay its own way," SPUR said, adding that "whichever system is constructed first will preclude construction of the other."

The report said jumbo jets will carry up to 500 passengers in the early 1970's.

"We must have a solution by then or else," SPUR said.

Teen Spot Shuts Door In Fairfax

The Purple Perculator, popular teen coffee house in Fairfax, will close after tonight — the victim of disinterest, drugs and alcohol.

Rev. Richard N. Wilmington, pastor of Fairfax Community Church where the coffee house is located, reported interest has begun to subside after 15 months of operation.

He said teen-agers have been coming in after using drugs and alcohol and adult advisors are "past the point of coping with it." He said drugs and alcohol are not brought in — "supervision is close inside."

Wilmington added that the improper use has been "enough to spoil it for the rest" and said he suspects it is one reason for the lack of interest among the high school age group served by the coffee house.

Mrs. Glen Gasaway of Fairfax, who with her husband has been on hand to operate the coffee house each Saturday night, explained that the facility has not been drawing enough young people to pay the bands which perform each week.

When the coffee house opened, Mrs. Gasaway said, she thought it would be successful for about six months, what she considered an average interest span in a new activity.

"A lot of kids are going to be terribly disappointed. They were my great concern in making the decision," she said.

However, Mrs. Gasaway said, she and her husband could not be effective with the young people who were using drugs and alcohol. She added that the coffee house had been a way of reaching young people with problems.

Both Wilmington and Mrs. Gasaway hope the coffee house can be reopened, possibly, Wilmington said, with a different focus — a quieter kind of entertainment.

senate were barricaded for three and one-half hours before being released unharmed.

In addition yesterday, a student branded as a "white reactionary" by blacks was beaten up when he refused to leave the campus cafeteria. Two photographers reportedly were roughed up and film was taken from several cameramen.

Dr. Smith, 44, who last June was the first black to be named president of a junior college, tried to reason with the students outside the bookstore, but his pleas went unheeded.

The campus was ordered closed at 1 p.m. because of what administrators called "great tension." But order soon was restored without police being called on campus.

Zucker Keeps His Job In Marathon Hearing

ning director's attitude has remained unchanged.

Zucker said he considered the 3 to 2 vote enough of a vote of confidence that he could continue with his present county planning programs.

During the heat of yesterday's arguments, hints of a recall came from several speakers. One woman, Mrs. Dorothy Melen of Corte Madera, declared flatly: "Personally I'd like to see Bud Baar recalled for this."

Both friends and foes of Zucker spoke with intensity, but the overflow audience was treated to brief moments of humor.

Anne L. Ellinwood of Tiburon, referring to complaints that Zucker doesn't smile readily, quipped: "Whether or not he smiles a lot should not be our concern. Maybe he was born with stiff facial muscles."

But the statement that had the crowd laughing for almost a full minute came from Strawberry developer Stanley W. Taylor. "Mr. Zucker is a master politician," said Taylor. "Otherwise we wouldn't have this big group here." This brought a few snickers. Taylor then added that during a hearing on one of his developments in Strawberry, "Mr. Zucker aroused up all the nuns from the Sister of Mercy. . . ." The rest of his statement was drowned in a roar of laughter, and Taylor himself managed a smile.

But the bulk of the meeting was conducted purposefully, with McInnis rapping the gavel to silence speakers who went over their allotted three minutes. Even with this strict limitation, the hearing went from 9:30 a.m. to 4:50 p.m. without recess or lunch.

Among those who spoke for organizations, 25 favored Zucker and 10 were opposed. These were followed by about 60 individuals who paraded up to the microphone to demonstrate what the supervisors themselves acknowledged as "an overwhelming show of support for Mr. Zucker."

County officials agreed that the crowd was the biggest in the history of Marin County government, even exceeding the overflow meeting in the old San Rafael courthouse when county supervisors halted construction of the Civic Center in 1961.

Zucker admitted he was "outspoken on issues," but did not intend to be disrespectful or discourteous.

County Administrator Alan Bruce declared he found nothing that would justify Zucker's dismissal. He pointed out that the supervisors, when they hired Zucker in 1955, were aware of his strong personality. "He (Zucker) said he was abrasive and he came on strong," said Bruce. "Today, he is accused of being the same."

Then followed the parade of speakers, totalling almost 100.

Among organizations supporting Zucker were the Gallinas Village Homeowners Association, Kent Woodlands Property Owners, California chapter of American Institute of Planners, Meadowsweet Improvement Club, Marin Council for Civic Affairs, Muir Woods Park Improvement Association, Northern California Chapter of American Institute of Architects, Black Point Improvement Club, Lucas Valley Homeowners, Sleepy Hollow Homes Association, Ecumenical Association for Housing;

Inverness Improvement Association, Mill Valley City Council, Marin Transportation Action Committee, San Francisco Planning and Urban Renewal Association, Fairfax Taxpayers for Planned Progress, Civic Council of Tiburon and Tiburon councilmen, Belvedere Planning Commission and Council, North Marin Federation of Homeowners and Improvement Associations, Lynwood Park Improvement Association, Sierra Club, Homestead Valley Community Association, San Anselmo Homes Association, San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, Academic Senate of the College of Marin and San Anselmo City Council.

Organizations opposing Zucker were the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau, Tiburon Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, Marin Coast Chamber of Commerce, Associated Home Builders of Marin, San Francisco-Marin chapter of Civil Engineers and Land Surveyors, Irate Taxpayers of Marin, Sonoma-Marin Dairyman's Association, Marin Builders Exchange, Marin Property Owners Association and Marin Soil Conservation League.

Those who opposed Zucker argued that he was overly restrictive, uncooperative toward developers, and chased industry and commerce out of the county.

His supporters replied that a man who can stand up and say "no" to developers is needed if Marin is not to become another San Francisco Peninsula.

WHALE

ment scientists in the Bay Area also said they had been told not to discuss results of various tests.

The lung tests, done by scientists at the federal water pollution control administration field station in Alameda, revealed no evidence of oil in the lungs, it was learned. Similarly, scientists on the West Coast indicated tests on other organs from the carcasses of the whales showed no traces of oil.

The department spokesman in the nation's capital said of the biopsies done on the whales' lungs: "That means only one thing; they (the whales) didn't die of oil in the lungs."

He said a report on the lung biopsies and other tests and the government's conclusions on the cause of death of the whales would be announced in Washington, D.C., "early next week." He would not reveal the government's conclusions so far, saying, "all the results are not in."

Scientists in the field, meanwhile, were extremely doubtful that oil caused any of the deaths.

One government marine scientist in the Bay Area said it was "extremely unlikely" oil caused the deaths. "At least one of them was killed by a whaler," he said, adding that, in his opinion, the tests on lungs and other organs "meant damned little because whales wouldn't have breathed in oil any more than they would have breathed in water."

He said the oil conceivably could have caused a reaction on the whales' hides that caused them to die, "but I doubt it."

Scientists said the whale carcasses were in such badly decomposed states when they washed ashore that thorough and conclusive tests on the exact causes of death were virtually impossible.

The scientists in the Bay Area and in Seattle also maintained that the number of whales washed up this year was not unusual. Willkie said the number was not "terribly unusual or extraordinary according to the figures furnished us," adding that in both 1961 and 1964, a similar number of dead whales were found on California beaches.

"They can die from a variety of causes," one scientist said, "including disease, old age and negligence on the part of whalers."

Mountain Fair Dates Selected

The annual Muir Woods Mountain Fair will be held Sept. 27 and 28, members of the Muir Woods Park Improvement Association, sponsors of the fair, agreed last night.

The theme this year will be "Moon Madness," a club spokesman reported.

The association also discussed the continuing burglaries in the area and agreed to write Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos and Judge Samuel W. Gardiner about enforcement and disposition of the cases.

The association's annual kite day was scheduled for May 11 at the clubhouse.

Suspect Shot In Episode On Coast

A 34-year-old unemployed man was shot in the left leg by a sheriff's deputy at Muir Beach yesterday after the man reportedly stole a car, escaped from two deputies and then threatened to throw hand-sized rocks at the officers.

The man, Robert Charles Cohen, was taken to Marin General Hospital, where his condition was reported as good today.

Cohen, officers said, will be booked on suspicion of assaulting an officer, assault with a deadly weapon and vehicle theft.

Deputies James Spears and Michael Aitken were sent at 3:30 p.m. to the Muir Beach area to look for a man in a reportedly stolen vehicle.

They spotted the car on Shoreline Highway about one-half mile south of Green Gulch Ranch and signaled for the driver to stop. The driver, Cohen, headed east, swung around in the middle of the road and raced back to Muir Beach, deputies in pursuit.

Cohen was stopped at Lagoon Drive in Muir Beach. While spreadeagled against the car, Spears went to the sheriff's car to radio that added help was not needed, and Cohen escaped into the creek with Aitken after him.

Cohen came out of the creek with rocks in each hand, threatening to throw them, Spears reported. At this point both deputies began firing and one of the shots hit Cohen's left leg. It was not determined from which gun that shot was fired, Spears said.

Spears said the car, the second reportedly stolen yesterday by Cohen, is owned by Barbara Bowman of Muir Beach. Ownership of the first car was not immediately known.

Military authorities said he had broken away from his captors 18 days before he was spotted.

"I've escaped from the enemy. Give me something to eat," Van Putten told his rescuers as he jumped aboard the helicopter. Reduced to 121 pounds from 185 when he was captured, Van Putten gobbled down chicken with noodles, fruit cocktail and warm root beer the crew prepared. He called it the finest food "in all my life."

Van Putten probably would fly back to the United States tomorrow for a reunion with his parents, military spokesmen said. They refused to let him discuss his ordeal until he had been debriefed.

Floods Damage $30-Plus Million

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials estimated flood waters have caused $31 million damage so far in three Midwestern states, and one official said he felt people in an area downstream were treating the coming flood crests too lightly.

Civil defense and state officials made these preliminary flood damage estimates:

At least $5 million in Minnesota, where 700 families were still homeless.

About $19 million in South Dakota, where 5,000 families were evacuated and 1,000 remain homeless.

At least $7 million in North Dakota.

And the Civil Defense coordinator for northwestern Illinois says residents in his area, where the Mississippi is due to crest April 28, are taking the situation lightly.

"There's been so much publicity given protective works," said Donald E. Lemme," that people believe all they have to do is sweat this thing out.

The problem, Lemme said is a shortage of volunteers to patrol the dikes to watch for washouts.

Rolling Stone Still Has Its Usefulness

ST. JOSPEH, Mich. (AP) — Man's most productive tool — the stone — still has a place in modern industry.

In a factory here, triangular sandstones and automotive disc brake housings are dumped together into a rubber-lined chute vibrating 1,500 times a minute. The ensuing shakeup is violent enough to both effectively smooth out the 22 machined surfaces on each housing and wear out stones at the rate of 27 pounds an hour.

Teen-Agers Cited On Curfew Law

Two San Rafael juveniles — a boy, 16, and a girl, 14 — were cited to the sheriff's juvenile inspector for curfew violation after they were found at about 4 a.m. today sitting on a hill behind Merrydale Apartments in Santa Venetia.

Sheriff's deputies said that eight cartons of cigarettes and two bottles of bourbon, reportedly stolen in a burglary of the Dandy Market at 100 Merrydale Road between 1 and 4 a.m., were found in the bushes where the pair was hiding.

The market had been entered by breaking glass in the front door.

PLANE

dents and citizens staged rallies in the provincial cities of Chongju and Hoengsung to protest the shooting down of the American plane.

In Tokyo, a spokesman for Prime Minister Eisaku Sato said Nixon was justified in ordering fighter cover for U.S. reconnaissance flights over the Sea of Japan. Japanese opposition parties expressed fear, however, that such escort flights might provoke trouble.

U.S. airmen who took part in the search for remnants of the reconnaissance plane said that crewmen aboard two Soviet destroyers in the area had been "cordial" and cooperative, in radio exchanges.

On Thursday, a Soviet destroyer radioed "condolences on the loss of your aircraft" and arranged for a rendezvous to hand over debris it had picked up.

Potent U.S. naval forces, including the battleship New Jersey and possibly a pair of aircraft carriers, were reported steaming to new positions today to provide protection for American intelligence missions off North Korea.

The Pentagon announced redeployment of extensive forces Friday shortly after President Nixon ordered resumption of reconnaissance flights with the promise they will cease to be "fair game" for North Korean jets.

The New Jersey, which had been scheduled to arrive in Long Beach, Calif., today after duty off Vietnam, was ordered to turn around and return to the Western Pacific. The 16-inch guns on the world's only active battleship had been used to shell targets up to 20 miles inland in Vietnam.

While no announcement was made of the strategy to be used in providing protection for the reconnaissance planes, indications were fighters would be stationed where they could come to the swift rescue of any threatened U.S. aircraft. Fighters would be kept in the air during intelligence missions, but not flying wing-to-wing with the reconnaissance aircraft.

One carrier believed on the way to the Sea of Japan is the USS Kittyhawk which carries 90 warplanes. The Kittyhawk left Hong Kong with two destroyers earlier this week without any announcement of its destination.

There was no identification of a possible second carrier.

Another destroyer, the USS Tucker, was ordered back to Sasebo, Japan, with items of aircraft debris which had been found by search vessels.

Nixon revealed for the first time yesterday that the United States is capable of "reading" radar pictures of another country from miles away.

"We know what their radar showed," Nixon said. "We, incidentally, know what the Russian radar showed."

He said both showed that the EC121 was 90 miles offshore—well outside North Korean territory—when shot down. It has not been revealed whether the plane was shot down by cannon or missile fire.

Nixon said the plane had received orders to cut off its mission just before it was shot down. Pentagon sources indicated U.S. units had monitored North Korean radio messages ordering the pair of MIG jet fighters to attack the four engine, propeller driven American plane.

Resident Flees Blaze In Attic

A San Rafael man was driven from his home at 10 Clark Street last night when fire broke out in the attic of the two-story structure.

The occupant, Archie Varnesi, at first thought the sound of the fire was rain, but later saw the roof ablaze and called the fire department, according to a neighbor.

The fire, at 9:03 p.m., never got to the living quarters of the two-story wooden house, firemen said, although it was necessary to chop up much of the roof and attic to reach the blaze. The attic ceiling apparently caught fire from a fireplace flue.

Damage to the structure was estimated at $11,500.

DAVID L. ROGERS

Word has been received in Marin of the death April 2 in Las Vegas of David Lee Rogers, founder of the Baywood Press, now the Point Reyes Light.

Born in New Orleans in 1902, Rogers started his career in the newspaper business at the age of 12 as a printer's devil.

He and his wife, Wilma, by whom he is survived, founded the Bayside Press in West Marin in 1949 and published it for five years before selling it to Alvin Bartlett. The newspaper is now owned and published by Clara Mae and Don DeWolfe.

After leaving West Marin, Rogers sold printing equipment and published a paper at Auburn before retiring to Las Vegas.

U.S. Ambassador Flees Canadian Antiwar Group

VICTORIA, B.C. (AP) — The United States ambassador to Canada took refuge in a government office here yesterday after being pursued by a group of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators.

Harold W. Linder, who paid a 15-minute courtesy call on Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia during a visit to the province, found himself unwillingly leading the group of about 25 placard-toting protestors as he walked toward the province's museum after meeting the premier.

At one point, he turned to the leading demonstrator and said, "Get away from here."

The ambassador, in the company of Milton C. Rewinkel, U.S. consul-general in Vancouver, then ducked into the door of a nearby government building.

There was a brief scuffle as Rewinkel tried to slam the double doors and the pickets tried to force their way in.

Inside, civil servants unlocked a series of inter-office doors and the party finally emerged well down the hall from the demonstrators and made their way from the building.

Third Burglar Gets Sentence

He and Raymond Edward Lockhart, 21, of Corte Madera, and Thomas Joseph Smith, 21, of San Rafael, were arrested Jan. 16 in connection with the burglary of Synergistic Industries.

All three were ordered to make restitution to the firm.

Unwed Wife Left With Baby, No Husband And Bleak Future

DEAR HELEN:

Tod was good looking and all the girls wanted him. I wasn't anything much, but somehow he chose me—at least he said he was in love with me.

At 16, I was pregnant. My folks wanted us to marry, but Tod's parents wouldn't sign for him. To save my baby's name, and mine, my father insisted that Tod move in with us and tell everyone we were legally married.

I loved him even more after our little boy was born, but he started running around with another girl. We had a big fight and he left. I keep hoping he'll come back to me.

But meanwhile, what am I to do with my life? I'm supposed to be married, so I can't go out. Yet when I'm honest, I know Tod will never really marry me. I'm being true to a lie, and how do I get back to the truth, without ruining my reputation?

UNWED WIFE

DEAR U.W.:

You put across the marriage idea with surprising ease. So why not let the word get around that Tod has filed for divorce and you aren't contesting? Someday the truth will come out, but by that time you'll be more able to face it.—H.

DEAR HELEN:

These campus riots make me sick. There is no reason for violence. If the students don't like the way the college is run, why don't they go to a university that offers what they want?

PROUD STUDENT

DEAR HELEN:

What people don't realize about these college riots is that almost every change is accomplished by violence. The 13 colonies would never have separated from England nor would we have had the democratic system had it not been for violent rebellion. And how about our taking the good old U.S.A. away from the Indians? We never would have gained or maintained our supremacy as a world power if we hadn't used violence.

—STEPHEN

DEAR HELEN:

The best line on a recent television drama was, "A society that fears its children is very, very sick!"

We students have no respect for adults who are afraid of us. But we admire — and will listen to — those who will hear us out and are willing to work at compromise. We can learn a lot from them, and they can learn a great deal from us, too.

World's Most Creative Man Is Subject Of A.M.

With creativity stressed in modern pre-school education and learned seminars devoted to the subject, Dr. Richard McClanathan's talk yesterday on the world's most creative man — Leonardo Da Vinci — had special relevance to his Marin audience.

Speaking at the final program of the Family Service League's A.M. series at the Tamalpais Theater in San Anselmo, the doctor of arts stressed the great Renaissance man's belief in the power of man to understand life and his environment.

Dr. McLanathan, with the aid of his own slides, detailed the artist - inventor - scientist - philosopher's pioneer work in a dozen fields. Leonardo, he said, was the first to know functional anatomy and what the human brain was like; he engineered a canal system whose lock gates are the type still in use, designed a flying wing, a steam canon, diving suit, parachute, worked out the idea for a helicopter, invented the conical screw, designed advanced weapons, armor and the prototype to the tank, made musical instruments and devised the method for saturation bombing.

And Leonardo created some of the greatest paintings in history.

"Leonardo was the epitome of what creative man ought to be, as much an explorer as Columbus but he explored the area of the mind," explained the art historian, who is author of the book, "Leonardo Da Vinci."

Dr. McClanathan described the effect of the Florentine world on the teen-age apprentice there and the impact his lifetime of search for man's truth has had upon the world.

"He who does not value life does not deserve to have it," he quoted the man who constantly sought to reveal the inner life, the special psychology, of each individual in his painting and to understand his natural environment as well.

Leonardo, he said in summary, was the great precuser to the modern world.

Communication's Influence Reaches Entire Families

The television medium, its strengths and limitations, and the evolution of communication in "quantum jumps" — a phenomenon that has brought mankind to its present, highly sophisticated level of communication via television was discussed by Thomas Mullahey, public affairs director of KRON-TV at the Novato Branch of the American Association of University Women Thursday.

He discussed the development of communications, beginning with primitive man's utterances of sounds and expressive gestures. The Chinese used the pictograph to communicate. As an example, he said, picture two radicals together such as two married women under the same roof and you automatically receive a vivid communication.

WITHIN THE SEQUENCE of "quantum jumps" evolved the alphabet and phonetics. When Gutenberg developed movable print, a revolution in the dissemination of knowledge began. Books became accessible to the common people, but this form of communication became suspect by the intelligentsia who feared books in the hands of the masses might stir them to revolutions, related Mullahey.

Next the wireless linked nations and continents together and from the wireless the telegram became an important means of communication. The radio soon followed the wireless and was responsible for changing much of America's social and economic life, he said.

People looked forward to radio programs such as "Amos and Andy" and then the next day they enjoyed discussing the dialogue and characters with friends. This kind of program would be considered absurd in today's world, Mullahey said.

Television was transmitted as early as 1923, he said, but with the outbreak of World War II television suffered a setback and it was following the war when television began establishing itself in society and the responsibility for licensing had to be met through a commission. It was handled similarly to that of radio.

"PUBLIC INTEREST, convenience, and necessity" is the key phrase for licensing, he said. The licensee must be morally reliable, financially responsible and must have experience in communication, such as the newspaper business or publishing. Also the licensee must submit a sample of the month's programming and the segment of population he hopes to gain with each of these programs.

ACCEPTABILITY of program content is determined by the Federal Communications Commission, Better Business Bureau and the television cod Mullahey told AAUW mem bers.

The National Association Broadcasters has its ow house rules and in some are of programming such as com mercials there is often difficu ty in deciding what might questionable good taste. Wh offends, some may not offe others, he said.

Mullahey said that childre discriminate very well b tween what is fantasy an reality — that death viewed real life has meaning and im pact and children respond wi awe and respect. Howeve when children view death an violence in cartoons or wes erns they realize the situation are fantasy.

There are two kinds of pr gramming for children, h said. Those recommended b educators, which are good fo children, and those which chi dren want to watch. "It is ou job to find out what childre do like," he said.

PARENTS are still cons dered the best judges of wha is good for their children s public opinion is very impo tant. Even one well argue position stated in a lette directed to the station could e fect a change in programming Mullahey commented. Ther are only about 400 pieces o mail received monthly an over half of these are favora ble.

Time For Sewing Formals Brings Mother's Questions

BY EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

We are trying to decide about what fabric to use for my daughter's formal for her high school prom. What fabrics are appropriate and is chiffon a good choice?

MRS. G. F.

DEAR MRS. G. F.

First, I would suggest you look at the ready-made formals to check for fabrics that are being used. I personally wouldn't suggest chiffon, first because of the difficulty in handling and secondly, because it is too old for a high school girl.

With the return of the truly feminine look, may I suggest embroidered organdy, pique, or voile? There are also lovely satin striped voiles, embroidered organzas, etc. One of the loveliest dresses I have ever seen was made with a soft, full skirt in voile. There were 6 vertical strips of 6-inch wide decorative ribbon stitched to the fabric before it was gathered at the waist. The bodice was solid colored linen to match the skirt and a contrasting color was used for the sash at the waist.

MRS. MARGARET E. VARDAMAN, San Diego, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her suggestion:

"If threading a sewing machine needle is difficult for you, break the thread that is already on your machine as it comes off the spool, tie the new thread on and gently pull it through. You'll find that it will even go through the eye of the needle and save lots of time and tempers."

DEAR EUNICE:

No matter what deodorant I use, I ruin everything I wear because of perspiration marks. I am forced to wear dresses with sleeves so that I may wear dress shields. Is there a solution?

MRS. M. M. S.

DEAR MRS. M. M. S.:

I can only offer a suggestion that has worked for some friends of mine. Before wearing a new dress, literally saturate it with the new water-repellent spray that is made especially for clothing. It won't spot or leave a ring on your fabric. After the spray has completely dried, carefully spray it again for the second time. After your garment has been cleaned, you must repeat this process. I would suggest you try the spray on a scrap of fabric before you take a chance with your new garment.

Crowd Commemorates Date Of Original 'Happening'

By MOLLY MARIN

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon F. Parr of San Rafael report that yesterday's earthquake happening at San Francisco's Civic Center was great fun and well worth getting up in the wee hours of the morning to attend.

"I got into the bread line by mistake once," said Margie Parr," and was almost trampled to death."

A crowd of at least 5000 persons gathered to commemorate the 63rd anniversary of the 1906 earthquake and put down rumors that California will be split in two by another big quake — soon.

BEING FETED at bridal showers is Anne de Fremery, who will become the bride of Daniel Muller on May 17 at the Church of Our Saviour in Mill Valley.

Hostess last evening at a shower at her home in Mill Valley was Kimberly Russell, who will be maid of honor.

On April 30 Mrs. Paul Kydd of Mill Valley will give a tea and shower for her granddaughter.

A GOLDEN wedding celebration will be held tomorrow from 4 to 7 p.m. at Hamilton Air Force Base to honor Mr. and Mrs. Walter Earl Matney of Petaluma. Hosts for the reception are the Matneys' children: Robert Earl Matney of Vallejo, Mrs. Morgan Stoltz of Sacramento and Mrs. Wyndham Bammer of Martinez.

The Matneys were married in New York City and settled in Topeka, Kan., a few years later. They moved to Petaluma in 1939.

MMES. JOHN Laurie of Mill Valley and Ralph Bender and Russell Spatz, both of San Anselmo are among Marin people who have returned from a University of California extension department sponsored tour of art galleries in Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York City.

Highlights of the trip for Mrs. Laurie, who is associated with the gallery in San Francisco, were the David Smith sculpture exhibit at the Guggenheim Museum in New York, the Wertzburger Collection of modern sculpture at an estate outside Baltimore and visiting the conservation galleries, where paintings are preserved and authenticated at the Smithsonian Institute and at the New York Institute, where these processes are taught.

CAPT. AND Mrs. Anders Hiorth of Novato are entertaining Mrs. Hiorth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest O. Shumaker of Washington.

Silverthorne Faces New Banking Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Don Carlos Silverthorne will go on trial again May 19, facing additional charges of milking his San Francisco National Bank of up to half a million dollars before it collapsed in 1965.

Silverthorne, 69, of Tiburon, was convicted Feb. 18, 1966, on 12 counts of embezzling a total of $190,000 from the bank.

This conviction was overturned by a three-judge federal appellate panel on Aug. 27, 1968, on grounds publicity during his seven-week trial prevented his getting a fair trial "free from prejudice . . . or free from the probability of prejudice."

In setting the date for the second trial yesterday, U.S. District Court Judge William T. Sweigert denied a defense motion to dismiss the charges. He also allowed the government to include a new 40-count indictment charging fraud leading to the bank's collapse and accusing him of embezzling a total of $500,000 from the bank he helped found.

Silverthorne, who was sentenced to 60 years in prison and assessed a fine of $60,000 after his conviction, has been free on bail pending disposition of his appeal.

Guilty Plea To Morals Charge

Ronald Wayne Custis, 20, of Fairfax, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of indecent exposure in Fairfax municipal park Sunday.

Two counts of glue sniffing against him were dismissed.

Judge Hadden W. Roth ordered a probation report and told Curtis to appear for sentencing Friday.

Jury Convicts Weed Suspect

A jury in Marin Superior Court yesterday took less than an hour to find Henry Lee Quiroz, 24, of Fairfax, guilty of selling and possession marijuana.

Judge Thomas J. Keating set sentencing for May 19.

Quiroz, according to testimony during the three-day trial, was a hitchhiker who took a ride with a narcotics agent and then later sold him two ounces of marijuana.

Bruce Lauritzen Now Says More, Better

By LAURA DEVENDORF

SAN FRANCISCO — The two years since Bruce Lauritzen's last one-man show have been meaningful ones. The Marin artist's collages, exhibited through May 2 at the Pomeroy Galleries, 449 Pacific Avenue, are marked by a new consistency and growth.

The new Lauritzen isn't any less organized. His strong sense of order plays importantly in all his canvases, which are still primarily overlays of active geometric shapes. But Lauritzen's statement is now more current. He makes it with a more modern vernacular and a more concrete imagery.

MULTIPLE SERVICES

Now, from behind multileveled surfaces of wallpaper, Christmas wrap, cardboard and corrugated paper appear portions of ornately curled and flower-decked female figures — the sort associated with century-old advertisements and romantic illustrations.

Their flowery intent and their blown-up, black printing dots and lines create a visually stimulating dialogue with the geometry Lauritzen simply rested with in the past. And while his pure abstract canvases still have a mechanistic boldness, the ones containing figurative images have more personalized importance.

STRONG DESIGNS

Paintings such as "Cocktail," and "Purgatory" add these broken portions of the figure to Lauritzen's innate strength of design. They enhance it even more when glazed with overlays of paint or acetate and glow invitingly from behind raised foreground shapes, through holes or other starkly contrasted patterns.

These partially figurative pieces are the best visual summation of what has happened to this artist in two years. Translated into words it simply means his paintings are more interesting to see. They have more to say. And while still not free from others' styles and influences, the best of the new Lauritzen canvases have a quality that attracts the mind.

Sausalitan Made 'Copter Landing

The helicopter which made an emergency landing in a busy San Francisco intersection yesterday was piloted by a 34-year-old Sausalito man, Robert Hallbeck of 346 Pine Hill Road.

Hallbeck, who was piloting the helicopter for KGO radio and television stations covering the earthquake party sponsored by San Francisco officials was not injured

Dominican's Singers Conquer Difficulties

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Poulenc's "Dialogues des Carmelites," based on the martyrdom of 16 nuns during the French Revolution, was an eminently suitable opera for Dominican College, and the school's opera theatre gave it a fine performance — within necessary limitations — last night in Angelico Hall.

In three acts and 12 scenes, the opera was difficult musically and a challenge in staging. Vocally and dramatically it was well done by the young singers. Arthur Conrad solved the staging problems with starkly simple sets, few props and use of lighting and the cyclorama.

No movement was unmotivated, and snce the opera is rather static, the effect was often that of a series of tableaux. Authentic costuming added much to the visual impact.

UNDERSTANDING PROBLEM

The main difficulty was understanding the words, even though the text was in English. Fortunately the audience was large enough to dampen the echo in Angelico, but some diction was blurred. Because some of the singers, expecially the men, were more successful than others in this respect, it was not entirely a matter of acoustics. An English text with the program helped.

Soprano Darlene Brock, in the leading role of the fear-obsessed Sister Blanche, sang in a clear, strong voice with rather understated acting. A thin-edged quality in her voice was suitable to the character, but at full volume in the higest register it was piercing.

Near top professional level was mezzo Marjorie Broughton's portrayal of the death scene of the old prioress. It was by far the best work she has done. Joan Smith's light lyric voice and vivacious personality were ideal for the young Sister Constance. Especially pleasing in rich vocal quality and convincing in character were soprano Lorie Kutsko as the new prioress and alto Margaret Lee as the assistant prioress Mother Marie.

Powerful voices of fine quality were those of bass-baritone David Johnson — whose make-up was not old enough for Blanche's father, the Marquis de la Force — and of Melvyn Poll as his son. He occasionally put too much force into his singing and in two instances sang too much to the audience.

These two young men baritone Fred Lewis as the father confessor could almost always be understood. Edward Sherry and Douglas Thompson as officers of the revolutionary tribunal sang their parts well.

NEW INSTRUCTOR

There were many moments of musical beauty, especially a nuns' chorus in Act 2, Scene 2, thanks to the musical direction of a new dominican faculty member, Dr. Ted Blair, who provided the only accompaniment on ths piano in a strong, leading manner.

Not attempting to show any devastation of the chapel in Act 3, Scene 1, detracted from the terror preceding the executions but was probably unavoidable for practical reasons.

MUSICAL THRILL

Very moving and thrilling musically was the final scene in which the nuns' voices singing the "Salve Regine" stop one by one as each falls under the guillotine, until in a last minute, conquering her fear, Sister Blanche calmly walked to her death, the last martyr.

The opera will be performed again tonight at 8 o'clock.

Warrant Issued In Auto Case

A bench warrant for Darlene Bissell, 29, of San Francisco, charged with car theft, was issued yesterday by Judge Hadden W. Roth of Marin Municipal Court when Miss Bissell failed to appear in court.

Gene Paul Laden, of 1 Marin Road, Fairfax, told police on March 5 he gave Miss Bissell permission to take his car to get groceries on Feb. 14 and he had not seen the car, Miss Bissell or the groceries since.

Bail on the bench warrant was set at $2,500.

MISS MARIN FOR 1969

Miss Wisgerhof, who has been attending the University of Hawaii, won over nine other entrants in competition Thursday night at College of Marin. Radio station KTIM sponsored the Marin contest.

Charge Is Dropped In Marijuana Case

A marijuana possession charge against Geraldine Faulconbridge, 21, of Sausalito, was dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court at the request of the district attorney's office.

Miss Faulconbridge was arrested March 20 when she went to the Sausalito police station to ask for return of items she said police had taken from her apartment at the time of the arrest of a 21-year-old man who had been living with her.

Toll Plaza Nod Goes To BART Firm

The building and operating committee of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District yesterday approved a proposal by a San Francisco engineering firm to submit plans and cost estimates for a $3.3 million expansion of the toll plaza.

The firm, Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quake and Douglas, designers of the Bay Area Rapid Transit System, was among six which made proposals to the committee, reported Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring. The plans and estimates are to be provided at no cost to the district, he said.

The expansion is to include a new roadway behind the administration building for southbound traffic and improved toll registry equipment.

An ad hoc committee appointed last week by the bridge board endorsed Luehring's recommendation that the number of board committees be cut from 13 to six. The recommendation will go before the full board at 10 a.m. Friday in district offices at the toll plaza.

GRIM FATHER — Bishara Sirhan, father of convicted killer Sirhan B. Sirhan, grips a newspaper recounting the trial of his son for killing Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. In his home in the Israeli-occupied Jordanian village of Taiyebah, Sirhan yesterday vowed revenge if his son was executed. (AP Cablephoto)

Sirhan Jury Unaware Of Threat By Father

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The jurors who choose life or death for Sirhan B. Sirhan will make their decision ignorant of his father's boasts that the young Arab "did well" to kill Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Nor will they know that Bishara Sirhan yesterday threatened "revenge on American politicians" if his son is executed.

For the seven men and five women who found Sirhan guilty of first degree murder last week this weekend differs little from the others they have spent for the last three-and-one-half months.

Starting yesterday they began the ritual of family visits, bus excursions in the country, and screenings of first run movies.

They looked at newspapers carefully stripped of the minutest reference to the man who shot Kennedy and wounded five other persons last June 5 in the Ambassador Hotel.

They were not allowed within sight of a television set nor earshot of a radio at any time when a newscast was occurring.

Monday they will be taken back to the Hall of Justice for the death penalty hearing, a peculiarity in which California law differs from that of most states.

The "second trial" is expected to take only two days—just about everything that could be said for or against Sirhan already has been said. They may consist of little more than oral pleas from the prosecution and defense. Then the jurors retire to deliberate.

However, Sirhan's chief defense counsel, Grant Cooper, is free to call more witnesses if he wants to, and some death penalty hearings have consumed more time than the trials that preceded them.

If the jurors choose death for Sirhan, he is on the road to California's lethal gas chamber at San Quentin prison. Appeals might easily stretch that last journey out for months or years.

If they choose life, Sirhan technically would be eligible to apply for parole in seven years. The average "life" sentence for murder in California in the past meant about 12 years of confinement.

Stockade Sitdown Called An 'Irresistible Impulse'

FORT ORD (UPI) — The 14 San Francisco Presidio GI's on trial here for mutiny had an "irresistible impulse" to demonstrate at the stockade last Oct. 14, according to their attorney.

San Francisco lawyer Terence Hallinan told the court yesterday that the young soldiers had "on the weekend of Oct. 11-14, an anxiety level up to the point where there had to be some release."

They won that release, he said, by staging a sitdown demonstration on the stockade lawn and singing freedom songs.

"Others in the stockade talked about breaking windows, setting mattresses on fire, even killing guards—but these young men didn't."

Hallinan said he would call in a row of psychiatrists as defense witnesses to prove the defendants were all in a "temporary psychotic state...of mass shock."

Most of yesterday's proceedings were taken up in a tough cross-examination of Pvt. Michael P. Marino, a crew-cut stocky 21-year-old from Vacaville, Solano County.

Marino admitted under questioning by prosecutor Maj. John F. Novinger that he gained 20 pounds during the month that was climaxed by the protest despite his complaints that stockade guards did not give him enough to eat.

The testimony by Marino, whose father is an Air Force sergeant, ended the second week of the current mutiny trial.

Fairfax Woman Hurt In Crash

A 22-year-old Fairfax woman suffered multiple cuts and two broken ribs last night when her car turned over several times and flipped of Highway 101 north of the Marin City exit.

Elizabeth M. Jacobsen of 2501 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard was reported in fair condition at Marin General Hospital today.

The California Highway Patrol said her car skidded out of control, overturned and landed in an ice plant yard 25 feet off the highway.

The English language has changed considerably in the past three centuries. When King James II described St. Paul's Cathedral as "amusing," "awful" and "artificial" in the 17th Century, the architect, Sir Christopher Wren, was not offended. The king simply meant that the cathedral was pleasing, awe-inspiring and skillfully constructed.

The camellia is the Alabama state flower.

Logging, Pier House Hearings Scheduled

An interim ordinance against pier construction on Tomales Bay and a permanent ordinance to control logging in the Bolinas watershed will receive public hearings before the Marin County Planning Commission Monday.

The commission meeting will start at 9 a.m. on the third floor of the Civic Center.

Other items before the commission include a service station proposed at the corner of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Maple Avenue, Kentfield. Pierre Faure, owner of the property, seeks rezoning from the present apartment designation to commercial.

In the afternoon, the commission will consider large apartment projects planned on both sides of Seminary Drive in Strawberry. One is Villa Laguna, a 202-unit project on 11 acres north of Seminary Drive near Ricardo Road. The other is Strawberry Cove Marina, a 112-unit development planned on seven acres to the south of Seminary Drive. Developer L. B. Fleischman of Belvedere seeks rezoning of the property from single family to planned apartments.

Gallinas Village Improvement Association will protest a 56-unit apartment project planned by P. J. Tarrant on his property at North San Pedro Road and La Brea Way, the same site where Western Host Inc. tried unsuccessfully last December to gain approval of 55 apartment units. Tarrant proposes one and two-bedroom units, whereas Western Host had proposed three and four bedrooms.

Novato Teacher Submits His Resignation

James D. Kimmel, the Novato High School teacher who was fired after being arrested Nov. 15 by Novato police on suspicion of buying and possession of marijuana on the school campus, has offered his resignation to the school district.

Kimmel has sent a letter of resignation that would be effective Nov. 18, three days after his arrest, according to Deputy Supt. Ralph Giovanniello. The letter will come before the school board Monday night, Giovanniello said.

Meanwhile, a preliminary hearing for Kimmel on the marijuana charges is scheduled to resume at 9:30 a.m. Thursday in Marin Municipal Court after twice being continued. Kimmel seeks a change of venue in the proceedings.

After being fired, Kimmel taught children at Ranch Olompali, the hippie colony twice raided by narcotics agents and since razed by fire.

Marijuana Suspect Enters Guilty Plea

Harry T. Fendler, 20, of San Rafael, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to possessing marijuana on Feb. 23. A charge of petty theft involving the shoplifting of two tape cartridges worth $13 from the Emporium was dismissed.

Judge Peter Allen Smith told Fendler to appear in Superior Court April 28 for a date to be set for sentencing.

Probation Granted In Marijuana Case

Franklin R. Leyshon, 24, of Fairfax, yesterday pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to possessing marijuana Dec. 3 at his home at 125 Ridgeway Avenue.

Judge Harold J. Haley declared the offense a misdemeanor and placed the youth on one year probation. He also ordered him to pay a $187 fine.

Odd Beast In Las Gallinas Creek

By LARRY HATFIELD

Scientific circles here and in Scotland were all aquiver today at reports that a Loch Ness-type monster had been sighted in Santa Venetia's Las Gallinas Creek.

Scottish authorities, reached beside the Loch, said the Las Gallinas monster, described as eight feet long with a luminous tail, was definitely not related in any way to the fabled Loch Ness monster.

"Our monster has never gone out of Scotland as far as we know," they said.

California border guards agreed, saying, "Our strict rules and regulations regarding what can come into California would never have permitted such a creature across the state line."

The National Geographic Society, meanwhile, reportedly was considering importing some topless natives for local color so a special edition could be published on the creature.

The Las Gallinas monster was first sighted about two weeks ago by Fred Ullner, who spotted the creature from his dock at 59 Vendola Drive.

The latest sighting came just two weeks ago by Ullner and his neighbor, Mrs. William Thompson of 57 Vendola Drive.

"I saw this head sticking out of the water," said Mrs. Thompson, who was out watering her plants at the time. "I'd never seen anything quite like the wake it was leaving."

A while later, she said, she and Ullner saw the creature leave the water and slink into some bullrushes. "I couldn't have told you whether it had eight legs or none," she said.

Mrs. Thompson and Ullner agreed that the creature had a four or five-inch thick head, was about four inches thick in the body with a two-foot luminous tail.

A monster watch was conducted yesterday by Ullner, Fish and Game Warden Russell G. Ild, Lloyd Smalley, animal curator of the Louise A. Boyd Natural Science Museum and I-J photographer Bob Hax. It was not successful. The watchers theorized that the water was too rough for the monsters that day.

Ild was reluctant to guess what the creature was. "I am working on the assumption that it's somebody's loose pet," he said. A boa constrictor, for example, would come close to answering the description of the creature.

There are, he said, no native California snakes that reach that size. Furthermore, eels never get that big either and besides, it's the wrong time of the year for eels in Santa Venetia.

"I certainly hope it's a water animal," said another neighbor, Mrs. Donald Kinderman of 61 Vendola Drive, obviously hoping the creature would stay in the water.

She had not seen it, she said, "But I'll certainly be looking for it."

Two 8-year-old neighbor girls were asked what they would do it they spotted the creature. "Scream," they said unhesitatingly.

Until now at least, the creek has been a swimming hole for neighborhood children.

Most Vendola Drive residents were not at home during the monster watch. One who was, shut the door in a reporter's face after saying, "What are you, some kind of nut?"

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Disuse, Abuse Rust The Body; More Care Can Delay Aging

VAN DELLEN

Heart transplants and immuno suppressive drugs seem to generate more interest than learning how to delay hardening of the arteries via diet, exercise, not smoking, and maintaining normal blood cholesterol levels.

Few of us will fall heir to a new heart, yet every year almost a million of us die or are disabled by circulatory disorders. Hardened arteries are forerunners of a heart attack, our number one killer.

MANY PEOPLE accelerate the aging process and encourage early senescence by leading a sedentary existence, and by eating, drinking, and smoking too much. Anyone who lives long enough cannot escape senescence, but why hurry the process?

Gluttonous eating adds weight and encourages atherosclerosis via the cholesterol route. Limit animal fats and supplement the diet with vegetable oils and spreads. There also are many good cholesterol-lowering products, such as clofibrate, thyroid extract, and nicotinic acid.

EXERCISE IS IN the limelight today as a popular cardiovascular conditioner. It is becoming extremely important in the treatment and prevention of cardiac disease because it improves the blood flow and the efficiency of the heart.

Walking, jogging, tennis, swimming, and golf are advisable because they enable the heart to perform the same amount of work much more economically than the unconditioned organ.

Cigarette smoking is considered our greatest health hazard and an important cause of premature aging. It has been said that the reason tobacco does not hasten the aging process is that smoking often causes an early death.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

NO PILL ROLLING

T. G. writes: Could a person have Parkinson's disease without hand tremors and the pillrolling movement of the fingers? All my body muscles are stiff. When walking along, I get to running in short steps and can't control this maneuver unless I stand still.

REPLY

Parkinsonism can be present without the manifestations mentioned. However, with symptoms such as yours, other neurological disorders must be considered. This is important, because a new remedy for the disease is available. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on parkinsonism.

THICKENED TOENAILS

A reader writes: My father had horny toenails and now I am getting them. Are these an inherited trait?

REPLY

The only horns that are inherited are those that develop on deer, goats, gnus, and allied animals. Thickened and horny toenails usually come with age, and more so when circulation to the lower extremities is curtailed. The condition can be controlled.

PINNING BROKEN HIP

R. M. writes: I've heard of a new technique for repairing a broken hip in which pins are shot into the hip. Is this method better than the old one?

REPLY

The pins are hammered, not shot, into the hip. When this is done the broken bone usually is exposed or the procedure is done under the X-ray.

LIQUID INTAKE AND OUTGO

A reader writes: Does a person pass as much fluid as he drinks?

REPLY

Yes. The intake is approximately the same as the output via the kidneys. Water consumed in solid foods is roughly proportional to the amount lost via perspiration and exhaled air.

SONS PERPLEX MOTHER

Mrs. Y. writes: My 2-year-old son pounds his head against the crib at night before he falls asleep. As if this isn't enough, my six-year-old picks his nose until it bleeds. What's wrong with these children?

REPLY

Nothing, and if they never acquire any worse habits than these, consider yourself lucky. The head banging will stop soon and a little guidance will go a long way toward making a little gentleman of your six-year-old.

Ambulance Delay Reported After Cycle-Car Crash

Two San Rafael youths were treated for minor injuries at Marin General Hospital Thursday afternoon after waiting 25 minutes for an ambulance to remove them from an accident scene, it was reported yesterday.

William Randall Tobener, 17, of 26 Beach Drive, was treated for a scraped forehead and sprained right foot and Thomas Marion Woods, 16, of 75 Briarwood Drive, for a broken bone in his right hand, a hospital spokesman reported.

The two were injured in a collision between Tobener's motorcycle and a car driven by Beatrice Hamilton Bong, 59, of 208 Knight Drive, San Rafael, police said. The accident occurred at 3:10 p.m. on South San Pedro Road east of Loch Lomond.

The Marin County Communications Center reported it took a Bay Cities Ambulance Co. (formerly Doctors Ambulance Service) ambulance 25 minutes to reach the scene because the vehicle went from San Rafael to the accident by way of North San Pedro Road.

The communications center noted the call was not an emergency, but reported the ambulance firm had been told the accident was on South San Pedro Road and had been given identifying landmarks nearby.

Burglary Results In Jail Sentence

Thomas Chassereau, 19, of 180-B Cherry Street, Petaluma, yesterday was sentenced in Sonoma County Superior Court to four months in the county jail for burglary.

Chassereau had pleaded guilty before Judge Lincoln F. Mahan to the Feb. 9 burglary of the Bernard E. Eldredge school, Petaluma, in which a tape recorder and record player were stolen.

STRANGE ACCIDENTS

A Pie Bites Back; Snail Takes Swim

LONDON (London Express) — A meat pie that's been sitting around too long in the heat may be dangerous, for food poisoning germs may lurk inside. But you would hardly imagine a fresh meat pie provoking an accident.

But it did happen to a woman in Fort Worth, Tex., with a court awarding her nearly $5,000 in damages after the pie had put her out for the count. She said that when she bit into the pie, her false teeth shattered on a piece of metal. Fragments of the teeth stuck in her throat, she fainted and fell heavily to the floor, injuring her back.

Then there was the Scot's housewife awarded substantial damages some years ago after a nervous collapse brought on by seeing a snail crawl out of a mineral water bottle.

These freak accidents are happening just when they are least expected. For instance, a woman was sitting in her second floor Boston apartment. A car in the street below suddenly hit a pedestrian, knocked off one of his shoes and hurled it through her open window. It struck her sharply on the head and she had to have hospital treatment for scalp wounds.

In Boston, too, Mrs. Helen Easton had a still more unpleasant accident. She decided to switch on her TV set as she began to clean her flat. As she cleaned, she caught her hand in the back of an enormous old settee — and could not free it. The more she tugged the more her hand swelled — and the more it was trapped.

The blaring TV drowned her screams—and she was trapped for two days before a postman rescued her. During this time she had neither food nor water. There was a bowl of fruit on the table—but, like the telephone, it was just out of reach.

It was a French huntsman near Amiens who suffered injury at the hands —or rather feet — of a rabbit. He had put down his gun to pick up the rabbit after wounding it. It made a leap and landed on the gun which went off, hitting the hunter in the leg.

A similar accident happened to a sportsman in Jutland, Denmark. He was driving home from a rabbit shoot with only a single dead hare to show. Suddenly his gun went off from the back seat and pellets pierced his back. He thought the hare he had "killed" was dead, but it was only stunned. When it regained consciousness, it kicked its hind legs against the trigger of his sporting weapon. He was several weeks in the hospital.

Here is a happier animal accident. One day at the Brenner Pass, Leopold Stovcek, an animal trainer with an Italian circus, had to explain at the Austrian frontier post that two days earlier his elephant had seized his passport from the table with its trunk and had chewed it up. Officials let the trainer and his elephant enter Austria.

A fantastic accident proved fatal to a South African farmer, his wife and son in 1956 on their land in Natal. Shooting at a bird sitting on the overhead power lines supplying their farm, the bullet severed two wires which short-circuited and set fire to the grass. His wife threw a bucket of water over the exposed wires and was electrocuted. His son tried to beat out the flames with a branch, stumbled across one of the wires and was killed instantly.

It was near Pretoria the following year that a tortoise caused a serious traffic pile-up. Ambling along on to a main road, it caused a woman motorist to brake sharply. A car behind her slammed into her and another into that one. Eventually seven cars were piled up, plus two trucks, and a gas tanker which ran off the road. Meanwhile, the tortoise slowly wandered into the pasture on the other side of the road.

Six thousand miles away in Kalamazoo, Mich., at that time there was another strange multiple accident. Sneezing violently, a car driver lost control and crashed into another car. The cigarette he was smoking fell from his lips and he forgot it.

A tow truck was called to remove his car and while on tow flames broke out from the cushion where the cigarette had fallen. Stopping at a fire station, the driver got the flames extinguished. The tow was resumed and the wrecked car was parked in the garage yard. Three hours later flames again broke out and the vehicle was completely gutted.

Among the unique flying accidents where a flier's life has been saved by a miraculous coincidence, one of the most remarkable happened to Capt. J. H. Hedley, an observer in a Royal Flying Corps plane on the Western Front in France in January 1918. As the plane was attacked in a running fight, Hedley was dislodged while the machine was making a sudden vertical dive.

He fell several hundred feet in a direct line with the aircraft, alighted on the tail and was brought safely to earth from a height of some 10,000 feet.

Another incredible accident happened in February, 1891, when the crew of the American whaler "Star of the East" attacked a large sperm whale from two rowing boats. The whale overturned one of the boats and two sailors vanished.

When the whale was captured and cut up, one of the missing men, Jim Bartley, was found in the stomach—alive.

He said, "The whale threw me into the air. I found myself in a slippery channel, then a sort of large sack. Then I lost consciousness."

So . . . the Bible story of Jonah's accident with the whale could have happened.

Church To Welcome New Senior Minister Tomorrow

Rev. John O. Najarian of Salem, Ore., will officially assume the role of senior minister of the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo at tomorrow's 10 a.m. service.

The church, one of Marin's largest Presbyterian congregations, has been without a senior pastor since the resignation last summer of Dr. Henry Kuzenga, who left for duties as chief pastor of the Beverly Hills Community Presbyterian Church.

On March 2 the congregation voted to call Reverend Najarian who has been senior pastor of Salem's Westminster Presbyterian Church for nine years.

For the new pastor it is a homecoming to Marin. In 1957 he received his bachelor of divinity degree from the San Francisco Theological Seminary.

A native of Fresno, Reverend Najarian received his bachelor of arts degree from Fresno State College in journalism in 1954. He then entered the San Anselmo seminary.

Following his seminary graduation he served rural congregations in Oregon before being called to the urban Salem church late in 1959.

For his first sermon tomorrow, he has selected as his topic, "When Is the Church?"

Commenting on the issues facing the church today, he said one of the greatest challenges was to "provide some sort of stability in regard to the changing world and yet still be able to be alive to the issues of today and to minister to them as a church."

"In other words, one foot in the past and one in the present without rocking each boat."

Active in both church and civic affairs in Oregon he is past moderator of the Willamette Presbytery as well as serving in leadership positions within the area's synod; past vice chairman of the Salem Human Relations Committee plus key roles in the city's family life education committee and family council service.

His wife, Daisy, and three children, Susan, 12; Beth, 6, and John, 5, will join him in May. They will reside at 115 Oak Springs Drive in San Anselmo.

POPE MAKES DAILY BIBLE READING PLEA

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI has urged Roman Catholics to read the Bible daily.

"It is not only priests, religious brothers and sisters who should have the Scriptures, read them, meditate on them, and meet Christ our Lord daily in this way," he said.

Speaking to delegates this week of the conference of Catholic Biblical Associations, the Pope stressed "the fundamental importance of God's revealed word in all that we do and say."

Youth Set Dialogue Atop Mount

Youth of Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church of Tiburon will hold a two-day "dialogue on the mountain" tomorrow afternoon atop Mount Tamalpais.

Special guest and dialogue leader will be Father John Pruett, assistant pastor of St. Luke's Catholic Church of Stockton, an uncle of Mike Pruett, president of the church's Luther League.

Accordint to Rev. Calvin G. Frisch, church pastor, the outing will offer exchange of ideas on the current "generation gap" between the youth and adult members of the congregation. As well as to explore ecumenical aspects with Father Pruett.

The hike will begin at 1:30 p.m. Participants, hikers and non-hikers, are asked to bring a picnic lunch. The meeting is open to all interested persons.

Library Is Presented Late Bishop's Books

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A portion of the library of Bishop Benedict Joseph Flaget, first Roman Catholic Archbishop of Louisville, has been presented to the Catherine Spalding Library here.

The 2,000-volume collection includes Bibles with woodcuts dating from 16th Century, handwritten histories and leatherbound classics.

CAPITOL LOBBYIST

Pastor Admits His Title 'Has Bad Taste To It'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Rev. Glen A. Holman has a title that he admits "has a bad taste to it." He's a lobbyist.

As director of the California Church Council's office for state affairs, Holman is the legislative advocate for 20 Protestant denominations in Northern California and 16 in Southern California.

The former executive director of the Sacramento Area Council of Churches, Holman has handled lobbying activities for the statewide organization for a couple of years, but only on a part-time basis.

Now he spends full-time working from a small office in Westminster Presbyterian Church a couple of blocks from the Capitol.

"In the past," he said, "the state council's lobby activities have been limited to putting out a newsletter."

He still puts out the newsletter, but adds, "We're taking a more active role."

Besides meeting personally with the legislators in their offices, the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) minister corresponds with them and arranges witnesses for committee hearings.

"We don't try to go over there and say, 'We've got the solution and you guys better listen,' " Holman said. Instead, he uses the soft sell and points to the statement of legislative principles adopted by the church council.

Formulating the 17-point statement, he said, is one way for church people to be involved in the legislative process. The statement covers nearly every area of social concern, from labor relations to sex education.

"During the social revolution so far the church has been pretty uninvolved," he said.

"But part of the role of an active church is trying to bring about change. I believe that was Jesus' intention—not to create a big institution but to be out where the people are."

Holman has to live with the title of "lobbyist" which he admits "sort of has a bad taste to it."

Historically, he said, the lobbyist has been the source of much information which a legislator uses to make his decisions.

"We need to educate the people away from the idea that a lobbyist represents a special interest group with an economic gain involved in legislation," he said.

Holman operates the council's Sacramento office on a budget of "less than $20,000 a year." He doesn't believe in doing his lobbying over dinner and cocktails.

"I seldon even take anybody out to lunch," he said. "They are all available in their offices, and they really don't expect that of us."

Methodist Actors To Present Drama

The Methodist Actors Serving the Church will present a drama, "Even the Hater" at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at the church, Camino Alto and Sycamore Avenue.

The drama by Albert Johnson concerns the effect of love as understood in the New Testament by means of a Cain and Able-type conflict between two brothers.

Membership On Increase Again

NEW YORK (UPI) — The number of church members in the United States increased during 1968 but they comprised a smaller percentage of the total population than in 1967, according to the 1969 Yearbook of the American Churches, published by the National Council of Churches.

Religious affiliation increased 666,454 in 1968 to a total of 126,445,110.

This was 63.2 per cent of the total population, compared with 64.4 per cent in 1967.

Most of the increase—603,423 by Roman Catholics, whose current total the yearbook places at 47,468,333.

Church Slates Annual Session

The Mill Valley Methodist Church will hold its annual church conference next Sunday from 2 to 6 p.m.

Presiding at the session will be Dr. Joyce Farr, Redwood Empire District superintendent.

The agenda will include election of officers, annual reports and a critical review of the past year's work.

WANT A BIBLE PAGE?—Stanley B. Slotkin of Los Angeles shows Louise Gorzynski a Bible page that he has mounted for display in various institutions. His collection is valued at $4 million. He gives the pages to churches, hospitals and organizations that ask to display them. (AP Wirephoto)

TO LECTURE — Jane O. Robbins, a Christian Science lecturer, will discuss today's "identity crisis" in a talk at 8 p.m. Thursday at the First Church of Christ Scientist, 1 Magnolia Avenue in Larkspur. She is a member of the Mother Church's board of lectureship.

Church Parish Honors Rector

Rev. Tod W. Ewald, rector of Holy Innocents' Episcopal Paris of Corte Madera, was honored last Sunday on his 20th anniversary of his ordination into the Episcopal priesthood.

The event, organized by Mrs. Robert C. McGowan, was held in the church's parish hall. Reverend Ewald has served the church for all of his 20 years as a priest.

Mrs. Ewald was also honored for her work in the parish.

Program Of Music

The brass sextet of the Western Baptist Bible College will present a program os sacred instrumental music at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at the Calvary Baptist Church of Larkspur, Baltimore and Holcomb avenues.

FOR THE ASKING

Bibles Are Given Away--Page By Page

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A businessman is giving away some $4 million worth of antique Bibles—page by page.

"I donate 12 mounted pages to any church, hospital or organization that will display them," said Stanley S. Slotkin, 60, founder and president of Abbey Rents Co. of Los Angeles.

"I started giving them to churches years ago," he said. "But they locked the Bibles up and only showed them one day a year."

The collector said he wanted people to be able to appreciate the various types of printing, parchment and design of the Bibles.

"So I decided to disassemble the books," he said.

"I have each page mounted on a reproduction of the title page," Slotkin explained. "At the bottom of each title page I type a short history of the Bible—the date and place it was printed, where I found it and the reason it was printed."

The values of the Bibles have been rising at about 10 per cent a year since Slotkin started collecting them in 1945.

Slotkin's interest in Bible collecting came by chance when he was a serviceman in Germany at the end of World War II.

"Right after World War II, people in Germany were selling all kinds of antiques," he recalled. "One woman took me to her home and showed me a 1524 Martin Luther Bible. I bought it for $50."

Slotkin left Germany with about a dozen Bibles that cost him about $700. "Now they're worth over $175,000," he added.

After that, he continued his Bible collecting and now has 250,000 Bibles stored in boxes in the basement of his home office in Los Angeles.

The famous Gutenberg Bible is a favorite subject of the Bible expert. He said just 42 of the original 250 Gutenbergs are remaining all over the world.

"The last one was sold to the United States Senate Library for $5 million," Slotkin said, "and I own the page with the 23rd Psalm from one of those Gutenbergs."

Slotkin also collects ancient medical books. He was in Pittsburgh this week to donate Bible and medical pages to Allegheny General Hospital and the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary.

He also gave Duquesne University a 24 by 36 inch sheepskin of a Gregorian chant, handprinted in 1140.

Indian Dances To Be Performed

A group of Kiowa Indians from Oklahoma, led by Frank Ahkeabeo, will present full-costumed tribal dancing, at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians, 240 Channing Way in San Rafael.

Ahkeabeo will describe use of ceremonial expressions used by the dances as well as tell of the special problems facing today's Indian population.

The service will be held on the church grounds.

THE UNITARIANS CARRY NO LABELS

1961 Merger Does Away With Belief That Jesus Is The Divine Son Of God

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The Unitarian Universalist Association, formed in 1961 by the merger of two older denominations, has the distinction of being the only church in America which includes in its membership a substantial percentage of avowed atheists.

There are, of course, practical atheists—people who live as if God did not exist—in virtually all churches. But only in the Unitarian Universalist fellowship is one likely to hear atheism frankly and freely professed by clergy as well as laymen.

You can imagine the shock a Lutheran congregation would sustain if its pastor announced from the pulpit one Sunday that he had decided to dispense with prayer because he no longer believed in a personal God. But there was hardly a ripple when Rev. Duncan Howlett, pastor of the largest Unitarian Universalist church in Washington, D.C., made that announcement to his congregation not long ago.

NO OFFICIAL CREED

Since the association has no official creed and no creedal test for membership, there are no statistics on how many of its clergy and lay members share Dr. Howlett's theological posture. One estimate, which is probably as good as any available, is that about two-thirds of the 167,000 members are atheists—that is, they hold some concept of a personal God.

Since the early 19th Century, when the two movements were separately launched in New England, Unitarians and Universalists have rejected the belief that Jesus is the divine Son of God. But they continued until comparatively recently to regard Jesus as the supreme human teacher of God's will.

Since their merger in 1961, however, they have abandoned the Christian label and no longer claim for Jesus any particular preeminence over other great religious teachers such as Moses, Buddha and Confucius. The present constitution of the Association states that its aim is:

"To cherish and spread the universal truths taught by the great prophets and teachers of humanity in every age and tradition, immorially summarized in the Judeo-Christian heritage as love to God and love to man."

LIBERAL ELEMENT

The Unitarian movement flowered in New England after 1819 under the leadership of William Ellery Channing and Ralph Waldo Emerson. It began as a liberal wing of Congregationalism, but soon became a separate denomination.

For a time it threatened to engulf the long-established Congregational churches. Within a few years, 125 of New England's leading Congregational churches, including 20 dating back to the days of the Pilgrims, turned Unitarian. Thomas Jefferson, who was greatly attracted to Unitarian ideas, predicted that within a generation every American would be a Unitarin.

This forecast proved to be quite wide of the mark. The movement never grew larger than 200,000 members, but it enjoyed a prestige far exceeding its size because among its memembers were such notable leaders of early America as John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, John Marshall, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Henry David Thoreau, and John Greenleaf Whittier.

The theology of these early American Unitarians was rather conservative compared to the views which prevail in the Association today. Dr. Channing habitually spoke of Jesus as "our Savior," and the first constitution of the Unitarian General Conference said that "these churches accept the religion of Jesus."

To be sure, the salvation which Dr. Channing ascribed to Jesus was not a matter of being saved from eternal punishment—in which he did not believe—but of being liberated by Christ's teaching and example from the enslaving power of sin in his life.

CONCEPT OF HEAVEN

But there was room in early Unitarianism for the concept of heaven (as a "state" rather than a place) and for the belief that the Bible, while not infallible, was a trustworthy vehicle of God's self-revelation.

From the start, however, the Unitarian movement placed its primary emphasis on "practical religion" exhibited in compassionate service of mankind, rather than on defining dogmas and enforcing orthodoxies. And that emphasis is still the predominant characteristic of the merged Association.

The first Universalist church in America was organized at Gloucester, Mass., in 1779.

Under the leadership of Hosea Ballou, Universalist churches evolved a theology which emphasized faith in God's "all-conquering love" and acknowledged Jesus as the supreme human revealer of God's will and purpose of mankind.

HIGHER EDUCATION

For a small denomination, which never had more than 75,000 members, the Universalist churches were remarkably productive in the field of higher education. Among the famous American colleges and universities founded by Universalists are Tufts, St. Lawrence, Goddard, California Institute of Technology, and Lombard (now part of the University of Chicago).

Although they take a laissez-faire attitude toward theological doctrine, Unitarians and Universalists are passionate believers in social justice. No religious group in America has worked longer, harder or more courageously to eliminate war, poverty and racial discrimination. In any liberal organization working for social progress, you are likely to find a dedicated cadre of Unitarians and Universalists.

There are about 1,050 Unitarian Universalist congregations in the nation at present. Although they can be found in all areas, their heaviest concentration is on the East Coast, from New England to Northern Virginia. National headquarters are in Boston.

It is said there is a painting of a chess game called "The Last Move." The devil is shown grinning at a young man. The youth had gambled with the devil for the "joys" of the world, and the next move would lose the game and his life.
The last move!
A famous chess champion studied the picture. Then he said: "I will make the young man's move for him."
A chess board was set up exactly as it was in the picture. He made the move which the artist had not seen as possible. The devil lost the game!
If such a champion had come to save the young man, not just in a picture, but in life, would he ever forget the one who saved him?
An even greater Savior has won the victory for you! And it cost Him His life!
He calls us to Himself.

POLICE PROBLEM

What To Do With A 27-foot Boat?

By JERRY MEGAHAN

One of the less publicized functions of any local police department is to maintain a repository for lost items which are turned in by finders almost every day.

Most of the items found in the average police department's property room are banal but some stations in Marin County have received some highly unusual items.

The biggest lost property in recent months around the county was reported to the Corte Madera Police Department on April 4 by Burl Salsman of 187 Golden Hind Passage.

Salsman found a 27-foot cabin cruiser adrift and engineless in San Clemente Creek and moored the cruiser on the mudflats near his house. The Corte Madera police couldn't quite fit the cruiser into their property room, but they kept an eye on it for 10 days until the owner showed up.

In Southern Sonoma county, Petaluma policemen like to play around with a walking cane with a sword concealed inside it. The item, which would be difficult to forget, has never been claimed.

In Sausalito, someone turned up at the station last year with a strayed tombstone. Sausalito police traced it via county death records and phone calls to local funeral homes and found out the stone was missing from Olema Cemetery. A sheriff's deputy picked the stone up and took it to its proper resting place.

Mendacity has become a popular pasttime of late but there are still some honest people around, according to the Tiburon Police Department. They found that out when a newspaper delivery boy came into their office sometime around Christmas and left a diamond ring he'd found.

The ring was later claimed by a woman who had recently moved to the United States, police recalled. She told police the ring was an heirloom, some 70 or 80 years old.

Police sometimes find themselves wondering just how some items manage to get lost in the first place. Mill Valley police recently went through a siege of false teeth being found around the city streets. The best explanation anyone in the department could come up with on that was that partying people had a bad habit of walking around with their mouths open on their ways home from the pub.

In the Petaluma Police Department vault, lost license plates far outnumber any other items. "Most of the plates fall off cars and people have them replaced by the State Department of Motor Vehicles and never think of asking us," said Lt. Henry Eslick.

However, most police departments usually find themselves swamped with such prosaic items as keys, sweaters, sunglasses and bicycles.

Smaller departments don't have so much trouble. "This is such a small place I can usually find out to whom the found items belong," said Cotati's police chief.

However, police stations in larger cities sometimes have a problem. "We have quite an accumulation now," said Officer Patricia Harper of San Rafael. "We auction the bikes off when we have too many but the rest just stays. A lot of it is worthless but you never know when someone is going to come in, looking for something they treasure."

Most larger police departments unload accumulated found items by auction once a year or whenever the property room gets too full. And you never know when you might need a swordcane or a 27 foot cabin cruiser.

Sheriff's Deputies List Seven Home, Store Thefts

Seven burglaries were reported yesterday by the sheriff's department.

Burglars who removed the panes of a louvered window at the home of Robert C. Miller at 87 LaVerne Avenue, Homestead Valley, on Wednesday took $35 in coins, officers said.

Dorothy M. Rota of 240 Highland Road, San Rafael, reported that someone had entered an outside storage cabinet at her home Wednesday and taken a case of champagne and several tools.

Raymond Hill of 1995 Indian Valley Road, Novato, told officers that when he returned to his car in the parking lot at College of Marin Wednesday evening, he found that a police radio monitor, 50 rounds of ammunition, an electric razor and about $5 had been stolen.

A house trailer belonging to Burnell Van Dalsem of 4 Garden Avenue, Santa Venetia, was broken into yesterday while it was parked at a service station on North San Pedro Road and stereo tapes and an overnight bag stolen, officers said.

The owner of the Terra Linda Laundromat told deputies Wednesday that when he arrived for work he found that six coin boxes and a coin changer had been broken into and about $200 stolen.

A burglar who used a crowbar to force open a sliding glass door at the Church of the Nativity in Marinwood Wednesday took $20, two pipes and a gold watch belonging to the vicar, Rev. David C. Barnett, according to deputies.

On the same day Joseph Theodore Poiesz of 90 Bayview Drive, San Rafael, reported that his home had been ransacked and a German automatic pistol, two radios and $200 in cash taken.

Burglars Open School's Safe

Burglars pried their way into San Clemente School sometime during the night and succeeded in opening the school's safe, Corte Madera police reported.

The safe was overturned and the bottom pried off, according to school officials who estimated the loss at $40.

The coke machine in the teachers' lounge was also entered and about $10 gone, school officials said. Other rooms, too, were entered but it was believed nothing else was missing.

Young San Diego Pitcher Gets Sweet Revenge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The third time proved a charm for San Diego Padres' rookie righthander Al Santorini, a young man who has pitched exclusively against the San Francisco Giants in his brief major league career.

Santorini worked the first seven innings last night and held the Giants to one run and five hits, as the Padres went on to a 3-1 victory—their first over San Francisco after four losses.

The win was Santorini's first in the major leagues, coming in only his second start. Last year, while with the Atlanta Braves, he made his debut against the Giants and was a loser after being belted for three unearned runs.

"I worked three innings," Santorini recalled, "and got myself in trouble in the third by dropping Ron Hunt's pop for an error. Willie McCovey then hit a 420-foot three-run homer and that was it."

Santorini gained some revenge on McCovey, holding the slugging first baseman hitless in three trips. McCovey, who went 0-for-4, was held hitless and without an RBI for the first time this season.

"I had an operation (bone chips in right elbow) in 1967," the pitcher disclosed, "so it's taken a while for my curve to come around. I didn't have it in Atlanta—and you have to have a curve when you face the Giants."

In a relief appearance against San Francisco Sunday, Santorini yielded two runs.

Last night, he was staked to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on singles by Roberto Pena and Ollie Brown, a pair of passed balls and Clarence Gaston's two-run double.

The two-base hit was the first extra base smash for San Diego in 35 innings. Ex-Giant Ollie Brown's 410-foot triple and Gaston's sacrifice fly made it 3-0 in the fifth off loser Ray Sadecki, 1-1.

Jim Hart's walk, Jim Davenport's single, a wild pitch and Hal Lanier's run-scoring grounder ruined the shutout bid in the seventh.

"Santorini was getting tired," explained manager Preston Gomez. "But anytime a 20-year-old kid can hold San Francisco to one run, he's done a helluva job."

With two away in the ninth, Padre reliever Frank Reberger walked pinch-batter Don Mason, then struck out Willie Mays to end the game. "I got Mays on a fastball inside," said Reberger.

Novato Rips Tam, 21-1, Tops League

Redwood Also Romps By 19-1 Landslide

The muddled Marin County Athletic League baseball race unraveled like a first-grader's picture puzzle yesterday as four teams went into action tied for the lead and only one came out still sitting on top.

That happens to be Novato High School, the preseason favorite to win it all anyway. The rest of the erstwhile pretenders all got sidetracked, ambushed and mauled in a day of surprises, balloon-sized scores and good pitching.

Novato, now 4-1 in the won-lost standings mauled Tamalpais, 21-1 and that's no misprint. Neither is the 19-1 licking Redwood handed Sam Marin. And Terra Linda got a distinct shock at the hands of Drake, 6-3 while San Rafael nicked Marin Catholic, 3-1.

Novato, San Marin, Tamalpais and Terra Linda had all shared the league lead earlier in the week.

QUICK LEAD

Novato jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the first inning as Russ Dillon tripled, Barry Berrington doubled, Stexe Majka singled, Bob Helbing doubled and Mike Jobson singled. And the worst was yet to come as the Hornets scored 16 runs in two innings, eight each in the fourth and fifth.

Tom Zechlin, Berringer, and Helbing each drove in three runs and Berringer had a perfect four-for-four day in breaking out of a slump.

BACK IN FORM

Steve McNally showed he was back in form by twirling a neat two-hitter to get the Novato victory.

For San Marin, winner of three straight at one time, the Cinderella shoe continued to hurt as light-hitting Redwood went at three Mustang hurlers with glee, getting 21 hits, including three home runs.

Jim Peters led the barrage with four hits. Ken Roby, Pete Cooney, Frank Pamilia each

Athletics To Try Again

KANSAS CITY (AP) — With Reggie Jackson on the bench and Charles O. Finley out of town, the Oakland Athletics try again today to play their first game here since they unceremoniously moved west.

The one-time Kansas City Athletics and the brand-new Kansas City Royals were rained out last night, forestalling for a day the boos the Athletics are almost certain to hear from those who were their fans until last year.

Jackson, who led the A's with 29 homers last year, was benched Wednesday in favor of young Tommy Reynolds and the rookie came through with two hits. Manager Hank Bauer said he will start Reynolds against Royal left-hander Steve Jones today.

NO PLATOONING

Jackson, who has been striking out frequently, will be used against right-hand pitchers, but he is not thrilled about being platooned.

"I don't like it," he says. "I want to play every day. I'll tell you one thing, I won't be platooned. I mean I'll be back in there."

John "Blue Moon" Odom, 1-1.

Finley, the man who moved the A's out of Kansas City, is not expected to be around for the series, which winds up with a doubleheader tomorrow.

Busy, Impressive Kuhn Commands A Second Look

Bowie Kuhn is the kind of name that commands a second look. The man who answers to it also commands a second look. He is baseball's new commissioner and he is physically impressive at 6-5, 222.

When Kuhn was first contacted about the commissioner's job during the Christmas holidays by the Yankee's Mike Burke he wasn't interested. As a member of the New York law firm of Wilkie, Farr and Gallagher, Kuhn already was making better than $100,000 which the commissioner's job offered.

"I told Mike I didn't want the job," says Kuhn. "I preferred they give it to Burke or Chub Feeney."

But American and National League owners couldn't choose between Burke and Feeney and Kuhn became the unanimous choice of the owners. Kuhn's lifelong interest in baseball prevented him from turning down the job.

A Long Line Of Ancestors

Kuhn comes from a line of ancestors that include two former governors of Maryland. One branch of the family gave its name to the tract of ground where Bowie Race Track now stands.

Kuhn, now 43, grew up in Washington, D.C., where he was scoreboard boy at Washington Senator games. ("A dollar a game, two dollars for double headers," he recalls).

He tried to be a baseball pitcher but never made it at the varsity level in the Ivy League where he attended Princeton. After Princeton, he got a law degree at University of Virginia and at 23 joined the New York firm founded by the late Wendell Willkie.

He Knows Jargon Of Baseball

"Lou Carroll, attorney for the National League, is a member of the firm and I told him I'd like to assist him on baseball cases," Kuhn said.

Carroll still is the National League attorney but it was Kuhn who argued many cases, including a successful defense against Milwaukee's antitrust suit resulting from the league's shifting of the Braves' franchise from Milwaukee to Atlanta.

Kuhn, unlike his predecessor Gen. William D. Eckert, speaks the jargon of baseball and he doesn't need cue cards or a program to identify the players. He visited virtually every major league clubhouse this spring in Florida and Arizona. He since has visted the ones he missed in opening day ceremonies.

Kuhn's participation in Candlestick Park's opening day ceremonies marked his ninth ceremonial inaugural in the past 10 days.

On April 7 he was in Washington for the opening in the national capitol. Tuesday April 8 was a doubleheader for the commissioner — Detroit in the afternoon, St. Louis in the evening. Wednesday April 9 he participated in Cincinnati's observance of baseball's 100th anniversary.

A Busy Slate Of Opening Days

It was San Diego April 10, Seattle April 11, Montreal last weekend, New York, April 15 for the Yankee Stadium opener and finally the Candlestick opener Thursday.

When Kuhn took the commissioner's job he weighed 235. He really doesn't mind the 13 pounds he's lost but he smiles when he says: "I don't have much time for those good meals I used to enjoy so much."

COKES BATTERED IN 13

New Welterweight King

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cuban refugee Jose Napoles waited five years for his title shot and when he got it, the fight proved no contest as he hammered Curtis Cokes into submission after 13 rounds for the welterweight crown.

With his eyes swollen shut, Cokes simply couldn't see to continue fighting and although the boxer wanted to go on, manager Doug Lord asked the bout at The Forum last night be halted.

"I knew about the 10th round when he didn't like those left hooks to the body that I was winning," Napoles declared through an interpreter. "I followed our plan of keeping Cokes in the center of the ring and not let him fight off the ropes."

Napoles, who now calls Mexico City his home, weighed 143 to 145½ for the champion, and stood an inch shorter. Cokes had two inches in reach but that didn't help. Napoles kept boring in with his relentless attack.

"I just couldn't get off," the ex-champion said through swollen lips. I just couldn't get started. Yes, I'd like a rematch."

Lord said, "You'll see a different Curtis Cokes in a rematch. If you don't, I'll retire him."

Cuco Conde, the new champion's manager, said they had agreed to give Cokes a chance to get the 147 pound title back but it remained undecided if the fight would be in the United States or Mexico City.

A crowd of 15,878 at the Forum paid a gross gate of $195,480, a new California indoor record surpassing the $193,000 drawn by bantams Lionel Rose of Australia and Chucho Castillo of Mexico last winter.

Cokes collected $80,000 and Napoles $20,000.

A top lightweight contender before he grew into a welter, Napoles now has a record of 53-4 including 38 knockouts. For Cokes, trying to defend the title a sixth time, it was his 10th loss against 55 victories.

"He was strong and intelligent and I knew he wanted to fight me coming off the ropes, but I wouldn't let him," explained the 29-year-old champion, two years younger than Cokes.

The Texan got over right hands that shook Napoles a couple of times, once in the tenth, but never could follow up the punches. The Mexico battler put his foe on the ropes repeatedly during the latter stages, but never could put him down.

At the end, referee George Latka had scored the bout 11-1 as did judge Joey Olmos. Judge John Thomas had it 10-2 under the California system of awarding from one to five points to the winner of a round.

In a five-round middleweight preliminary, middleweight Mike Quarry, brother of heavyweight contender Jerry, made his pro debut by outpointing James Dick of Los Angeles.

In supporting 10-rounders, Halimi Gutierrez, 114½, Mexico City, outpointed Shigeru Tarumizu, 114, Tokyo, and Richie Sue, 127½, Portland, Ore., outpointed Franke Crawford, 128, Los Angeles.

Archer Picks Trevino In Tournament Of Champs; They're Tied For Lead

RANCHO LA COSTA (AP) — U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino and Masters titleholder George Archer, tied for the second round lead in golf's $150,000 tournament of champions, pick the same man to win it—Lee Trevino.

"You have to pick Trevino," said the gangling, 6-foot-6, Archer. "He's the best driver on the tour. He says he only leaves the fairway to go to the phone. That's about right.

"And that's what you have to do to win on this course, stay in the fairway. The rough is really rough."

"If my driver stays like it was today," Trevino said yesterday after shooting a second-round 68, four under par. "I'd say I like my chances very much.

"You've got to keep it in the fairway to win and I can hit it as straight as anyone else."

Trevino, seven shots back going into the second round, and Archer, who has a pair of 71s, are tied at 142 going into today's third round on the 7,114 yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course.

Just one shot back at 143 are Gene Littler, who had a second round 68, South African Gary Player, 49-year-old Julius Boros, the PGA champion, and dynamic Arnold Palmer.

Player, Boros and Palmer all had second round 74s.

Dave Stockton is alone at 144 after a second round 75.

First round leader Dick Lotz, a 26-year-old Californian, dropped back with a 78 for 145, while bulky Jack Nicklaus shot himself out of contention with a whopping 80, one of the poorest rounds in years for the golden bear. He has a 36-hole score of 153, 11 shots off the pace.

Trevino, who missed only one fairway, opened with a bogey when he was in a trap, then rallied with four birdies, rapping in putts of 8 and 15 feet, chipping to within four inches at No. 2, and reaching the par five 12th in two and two-putting.

Archer had five birdies and four bogeys, all of the latter coming when he got into the deep rough. His birdie putts were from 20, 20, 20 and 18 feet, and he reached one par five in two.

Littler had a surprising round, going eight under par on the first 12 holes, then collecting two bogeys and a double bogey on the last six.

He included two eagles on his out-going nine when he matched the course record of 30, six under par. One was a 135 yard eight iron shot, the other a 75-yard wedge shot.

Marin Track Team Beaten

College of Marin's thin and outmanned track squad performed creditably in its "home" meet against Santa Rosa Junior College at Tamalpais High School yesterday, but still lost, 84-51.

The Tars did the most with what they had. Distance ace George Stewart ran a torrid 4:14.8 mile, third-best in Northern California and won the two-mile in 9:37.2.

Paul Vanderbilt pole vaulted 12-feet 10-inches, the top mark in the Camino Norte Conference to date. Paul Leete turned in two victories, winning the long jump in 20-4 and the triple jump in 42-0 and John Rowe took the shot with a 46-9¾ toss. The Tars also won the mile relay in 3:35.0.

Tired, Old Celts Back On Top Again

(UPI telephoto)

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, written off as tired old men just a short time ago, are back in familiar surroundings—the title round of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Acting like the old pros they are, the Celtics won the Eastern Division playoff for the 12th time in 13 years by hanging on for a 106-105 victory over the New York Knicks last night in steamy Boston Garden.

The Celtics, who have won the NBA championship 10 times since player-coach Bill Russell entered the league and became a defensive genius 13 years ago, managed only one victory in seven starts against New York during the regular season.

Boston finished fourth in the East and the cry went up: "The Celtics are dead." But the Celtics were playing possum in their own way, aiming for the playoffs.

After finishing off Philadelphia in the Eastern semifinals, the Celtics whipped the mighty Knicks 4-2 in the best-of-seven finals. Now Boston will mark time while Los Angeles battles Atlanta in the Western Division.

Los Angeles can wrap up the series in the fifth game tomorrow.

"I'm glad that's over," Russell said wearily after playing his usual 48 minutes in the finale against New York. "The Knicks were tough, a real good team. We had to go all out."

Russell scored 12 points, grabbed 21 rebounds, blocked a half dozen shots and set up teammates for baskets although he had to play cautiously after picking up his fifth foul at the three-minute mark of the fourth period.

"I had to let Mike Riordan drive as I couldn't take a chance on getting a sixth foul," Russell said. "It makes it a tougher game. If I had just three or four fouls, I could try to stop him. And if I stopped him once, he wouldn't come back."

Riordan, an unheralded reserve, helped bring the Knicks back from a nine-point deficit midway through the finale and finished with 15 points.

Sam Jones, humiliated by being held to just 12 points by New York in two previous games, was the key man in nailing down the victory. The 36-year-old veteran, retiring after this season, scored 29 points, the last a crucial free throw with three seconds left.

"Anytime you end a series with a win you feel great," Jones said as he took the victory in stride wtih the rest of the Celtics. "Does this give me any extra pleasure at the end of my career? I stopped getting pleasure out of playing basketball when I joined the Celtics. It's been a lot of hard work."

New York Coach Red Holzman congratulated Russell and shook each Boston player's hand in a visit to the Celtics' dressing room.

"You guys were the greatest," Holzman told Russell. "It was good basketball the whole series."

Before looking ahead, Russell commented:

"We can take a little rest now. We won't play again until Wednesday night at the earliest."

drove in three runs while Cooney, Tom Wickert and Ross Gondak blasted homers.

Roger Smith hurled a three-hitter for the win.

MASTERFUL JOB

Stan Liljenquist turned in a masterful no-walk, three-hit job against Terra Linda while Dave Alvarado and Al Tyler had two-run singles for Drake, with Alvarado getting his off reliever Mike Timmel, who had taken over for starter Jerry Goodrick.

Terra Linda had gone ahead on a three-run fifth inning, with help from three Drake errors, but the Pirates came right back with four runs in their half of the inning.

San Rafael's Chris Rowland, who hurled a no-hitter against Marin Catholic last year, got a two-hitter this time. Steve Henriksen's two-run homer in the fifth inning, his first league hit of the season, was the margin of victory for San Rafael.

SAN RAFAEL'S BRAVES OPEN 1969 SEASON

Semi-pro baseball makes its 1969 Marin County debut tomorrow when Manager Joe Anselmo sends his San Rafael Braves against the perennially-strong Hatzell Radio team of Oakland at Albert Park, San Rafael, 1 p.m.

Anselmo announced he will use three pitchers for the opener, starting with Bill Wakefield to be followed by Ben Burch and Steve Miller.

Other well-known Marin baseball veterans on the starting San Rafael unit will be Dick Spackman at first base, Tom Corder at shortstop, Bill Connolly at third base, outfielders Paul Lee and Doug Wilson and catcher Gary Coronado.

No-Hit Pitcher Receives Bonus

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal Expo pitcher Bill Stoneman got a $2,000 bonus in his contract yesterday for pitching the major league first no-hitter.

Stoneman hurled the no-hit, no-run game against the Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night.

MARIN LEAGUE

Three-Way Tie For Swim Title

The 1969 Marin County Athletic League swim races are over, but there's been no clear-cut decision.

Redwood High School handed Tamalpais' varsity and Class B teams their first losses yesterday to throw both races into a three-way tie at season's end.

The Giants of Larkspur topped the Tam Indians of Mill Valley in the varsity meet, 56-39, with Ken James and Bill Roark winning two events as James did a fantastic 4:07.9 in the 400 yard free style.

The Tamalpais Class B team fell, 60-35.

That left Tamalpais, Redwood and Novato tied for the varsity title with 5-1 won-lost records and Tamalpais, Redwood and Terra Linda tied for the Class B title.

In other action yesterday, Novato gained its first place tie with a 68-27 thumping of Terra Linda, while Drake nicked San Rafael, 48-44.

Marin Softball Star Honored

Rightfielder Gary Swarm of the Sohner Tree Service softball team of San Anselmo was named "player of the week" in the Golden Gate Travel League for his play against San Leandro in last weekend's league-opening action.

Swarm turned in several outstanding defensive plays in addition to going four for seven at the plate and driving in three runs to pace Sohner to a pair of triumphs.

The San Anselmo team won its seventh and eighth games without a loss this year by sweeping a doubleheader Thursday night in the Petaluma "A" League.

The Treemen dumped the Sebastopol Merchants, 5-2, in the opener and nipped the Rose Bowl of Santa Rosa, 2-1, in the second game.

Morey Swarm hurled the first game victory and helped his cause with a triple and a two-run homer.

Padres Release Catcher Gonder

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Diego Padres released catcher Jess Gonder last night to reach the 25-player limit.

Gonder's release was necessitated by the acquisition of infielder Tommy Dean and pitcher Leon Everitt from the Los Angeles Dodgers in exchange for pitcher Al McBean.

Oaks Host Bucs Tonight In Playoff

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Oaks meet the New Orleans Bucs tonight in the first game of their second-round American Basketball Association playoff series at Oakland Coliseum Arena, 8 o'clock.

A dispute over when the second game would be played was settled with a compromise yesterday. The Bucs had wanted Sunday with the Oaks preferring to wait until Tuesday. They agreed on Monday.

Both clubs were extended to the full seven games in their opening-round series and now are meeting for the Western Division title and the right to play the Eastern Division winner for the league championship.

'BEST SHOOTERS'

The Bucs finished 14 games behind the division-winning Oaks during the regular season but Oakland Coach Alex Hannum calls them "possibly the best shooters in pro basketball."

The Bucs are led by Jimmy Jones, fourth leading scorer in the ABA during the regular season with a 26.6 average, and center Red Robbins, the league's third leading rebounder.

Oakland's Warren Armstrong was the leading scorer during the Oaks's first playoff series against Denver, scoring an even 200 points in the seven games.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, April 19, the 109th day of 1969 with 256 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. The morning stars are Venus, Saturn, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Mercury.

On this day in history:

In 1775 the American Revolutionary War began.

In 1933 the United States went off the gold standard.

In 1951 Gen. Douglas MacArthur, fired from his command in Korea by President Harry S Truman, told Congress, in part, that "Old soldiers never die, they just fade away."

In 1967 former West German chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, died in Bonn at the age of 91.

A thought for the day: American author George William Curtis said, "While we read history, we make history."

Schools Prowled In Santa Venetia

Employees at two schools in Santa Venetia have reported that they found burglars had broken into the schools when they arrived for work Thursday morning, according to sheriff's officers.

At Gallinas School a window had been cut and a door pried open. It was not known if anything had been taken.

A janitor at McPhail School found that a door had been pried open and several offices entered. He thought that possibly a typewriter was missing.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Deliberate Trump Of Ace In Dummy Leads To Five Hearts

In recent years the American Contract Bridge League has prepared hands to be played in all sections of North America during national tournaments, like the big 10-day tournament recently held in Cleveland. One of the most startling of these hands is shown today.

No. 3846 ..... April 19, 1969

Opening lead — ♠ 4

When West leads a spade, South doesn't know what to discard from dummy. If East has Q-x-x of diamonds, declarer can win a finesse with the jack of diamonds, cash the top diamonds and eventually discard a club on dummy's last diamond (which will then be good).

If East has the ten of clubs and either two other clubs or perhaps 10-x-x-x-x of clubs, declarer might lead a low club from dummy to force out a top club with the nine. By careful play he might win two club tricks, discarding a diamond from his hand on dummy's extra club.

To avoid throwing away a potential trick on the opening lead, South must discard a trump from dummy. In other words, South deliberately trumps his own ace in the dummy.

CHOOSES MINOR SUIT

After drawing trumps with the ace and nine, South must guess which minor suit to develop. He has an extra chance if he starts with clubs rather than diamonds.

Declarer leads a low club from dummy and tries a finesse with the nine since this will work not only if East has the ten but also if West has the doubleton A-10 or K-10. West can take two clubs, but cannot get the third club trick.

FREE FINESSE

If West then switches to diamonds, South gets a free finesse and can use dummy's last diamond to discard his losing club. If West leads another spade (instead of a diamond), dummy ruffs while South discards a diamond. South cashes the top diamonds, ruffs a diamond and returns to dummy with the queen of trumps to discard the losing club on dummy's last diamond.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1-no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ K 10 7 4 3 2
♦ Q 10 4
♣ A 10

ANSWER: Bid four spades. Since you have nine points in high cards you know that the combined count is 25 to 27 points, which should be enough for game. You should be safer in your six-card major suit than at game in no-trump.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

Supervisors Take Sensible Approach To Logging

From time to time, we have castigated the Marin County Board of Supervisors for being dilatory. However, we think the board is to be commended for deciding to take 90 days to come up with some sensible regulations regarding logging.

The supervisors on Tuesday were besieged by about 100 conservationists who were upset because logging operations have begun on the Ethel Righetti property in West Marin. The protesters, had immediate visions of the cut extending to Bolinas Ridge, removing trees that not only provide beauty but also help prevent erosion and flooding.

The conservationists' approach was, as usual, highly emotional and simplistic. They wanted the supervisors to pass a law: no logging in Marin.

THE SUPERVISORS are aware they are in no position to pass any such law. If a man owns property that is covered with timber, he pays taxes on that timber. If he can harvest none of it, he is being taxed for a benefit he cannot reap. This is certainly injustice.

In such case, the property owner would be denied his constitutional rights through seizure of his property without compensation — for if he were not allowed to cut the trees, they would have no dollar value to him. He could then rightly demand that all the taxes he had paid on that timber over the years be refunded.

THE COUNTY CAN, however, adopt strict regulations on logging. And it can, if it wishes, set aside certain areas where timber may not be cut, even though on privately owned land. This can be done on the same principle that enables the county or city to require that houses be set back from the street line, that landscaping be provided on commercial or industrial property, etc. The owner of the land is placed under such restrictions to its use as are deemed necessary for the public benefit — but without preventing his use of his own property for his own benefit.

With some such approach in mind, the supervisors clamped a 90-day "freeze" on new logging operations. During the 90 days, the county planning department is to draft an ordinance setting up a natural resources protective district on Bolinas Ridge. This will contain controls over logging, as well as quarrying, mining, and drilling.

THIS IS A SENSIBLE approach. Three months is a short time to deal with such an important matter. And a 90-day "freeze" can work no real hardship on owners of property in which the value is in trees.

How well the proposed ordinance will satisfy the property owners and the conservationists remains to be seen, of course. It is probably a foregone conclusion that neither will be completely satisfied. But neither should expect to be.

LOGGING OPERATIONS call up a lot of rather thoughtless resistance. The sight of big, beautiful trees falling to the chain saw starts the adrenalin flowing, and the viewer is likely to overlook a few things.

For one thing, anybody whose property has its value in trees cannot afford to have that value destroyed. It is in his interest to assure future crops — just as the farmer must look ahead to next year's crop while he harvests this year's.

Since trees do not grow in a single year, the approach is to harvest only part of the crop at one time, and to plant seedlings which will grow in the shade of those trees left while they start becoming the crops of future years.

This has been worked out quite scientifically, and the whole Northwest, with its great forests, is evidence that timber lands may be made to yield almost continuously. The day of utter destruction of forests to provide the lumber needs of the moment is far in the past.

For another thing, the forests themselves can be made both more beautiful and more beneficial by some cutting. Unkept forests, like unkept back yards, are likely to become jungles of uncontrolled undergrowth, with the desirable plants stunted or even killed by them. When a timber crew moves into a grove, it perforce clears away the "snags" of fallen limbs and undergrowth to get at the trees. The jungle then becomes a more open grove. The saplings grow more rapidly. It is possible to wander among the trees where formerly the way was blocked. The fire hazard is greatly decreased. And so on.

Measures to control timber cutting so that it can be beneficial to all — including the conservationists — are well established. It should not be too difficult to incorporate requirements for them into a county ordinance.

ONE THING BOTHERS us about the current logging outcry — apart from the unreasonable "pass a law to ban all logging" demand. That is that the supervisors have asked only for an ordinance applying to Bolinas Ridge. This is the emergency, stop-gap response so common at all levels of government.

An ordinance to control logging throughout the county has long been needed. Such an ordinance should be put in the works now — although it need have no 90-day time limit for preparation.

This would be planning. It is for such things, we should think, that we have a county planning department.

The Instinct For Trees

Much thoughtless destruction of trees goes on in Marin, but probably a bit less than in most of the world because, being tree rich, we are tree/conscious. When a tree is thoughtlessly cut down, all of us are losers of an intangible something which cannot be measured in monetary terms.

Perhaps man has a natural feeling for trees which is part of his heritage from the time he was an arboreal creature. Just as birds build nests and spiders make webs without being taught, might not man have a portion of a gene which urges him to love trees?

But man has strayed far from the forests. Some urban kids seldom see a tree. In Marin, at least, the tree-loving instinct (if such be) is fulfilled.

A group of literature profs and graduate students at a Pacific Coast university became embroiled in a heated argument some years ago over the exact meaning of one of William Faulkner's most famous stories, "The Bear." Finally one prof suggested they pool their resources and phone Faulkner himself way down at his home in Oxford, Miss. They got him, too. "Mr. Faulkner," began the professor breathlessly, "we're calling to ask you to tell us the real meaning of your great story, 'The Bear.'"

Faulkner paused a moment, and answered, "It's a huntin' story" — and hung up.

Why Gym, Field Took Precedence

In talking with citizens of Marin regarding the tax election which was held April 15, I found many of the people of the community particularly questioning two of the past decisions of the Marin Junior College District.

These are, first, why was the physical education complex built before other important learning centers?

The answer is that the old gymnasium was destroyed by fire in the afternoon of Dec. 16, 1963. A physical education facility was needed more than any other structure.

The second question which has been asked is, why was a new football field built when we had one already?

The answer to that is that the district badly needed space for the new science building in an area that would tie it in with other learning centers, including the library, and bring the campus community closer together. Also, the new football field location would ultimately make it easier to accommodate automobiles of spectators of the sports events to be held on the campus.

LINES ON LIVING

If You'd Be Accepted, First Accept Yourself

By Rabbi
HAIM KEMELMAN

The bitter cry of the generations for self-acceptance is the wailing trauma of our age also.

The need to get along with one's self is not satisfied by the comfort, convenience and luxury of modern sophistication. And easy access to a good time is not necessarily the gate of promise to the good life. Moreover, the many choices and possibilities of our free society and the rapid changes in our culture make of our conscience a crippled culprit.

IS SELF-ACCEPTANCE still possible for us moderns? It is, if we learn to meet ourselves on our own personal terms, knowing our limits and surrendering to our limitations. We must leave the world of goods and gods that are worshipped by the faceless and nameless masses as we cling to the personal choice of our conscience as our supreme guide and light.

The non-self conformity, whether it be new or old, must not corrupt our individual taste and choice. Neither must we compete against anyone but ourselves in setting up attainable goals and practical standards of self-fulfillment.

If we demand too much of ourselves, we will be cruel and inconsiderate of the limits of our individual nature and capabilities. And if we expect too little of ourselves, we will fall short of our potential gift for development and growth and remain unfulfilled. In either case, the torment of the soul will prove unbearable and unpardonable.

THE WISDOM of ages, as the necessity of our time, whispers to us in edifying refrain: Be yourself, trust yourself by allowing your personality to unfold totally into the man you want to be. Be gentle with yourself. Don't tear yourself apart by doing what is not in your nature to be doing. Don't permit grudges, petty frustrations and past wrongs to consume your vital powers with guilt, to envenom the healthy circulation of your relationships with others.

Forgive yourself, for you are only human; and if you can't put up with yourself, how can you expect others to befriend and tolerate you. Be good to yourself; for if you have the right attitude toward yourself, you will know it and the whole world will not fail to recognize it, as you will reflect a right attitude toward others as well. It will be imprinted in the large writ of your conntenance and dispositiona nd dipped in the clear conscience of your soul.

You are a personality in your own right, in your unique God-given grace. You must not have an image personality borrowed from others.

SAY WITH Noel Coward and believe what you're saying: "My importance to the world is relatively small. On the other hand, my importance to myself is tremendous. I am all I have to work with, to play with, to suffer and to enjoy. It is not the eyes of others that I an wary of, but my own. I do not intend to let myself down more than I can possibly help, and I find that the fewer illusions I have found myself or the world around me, the better company I am for myself."

You may not set the world on fire, but you can save it from becoming a cosmic torture chamber by saving your soul and by becoming what you are destined to be — yourself. If you like in yourself what you have, you may someday have in yourself what you like in others.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Old Game Of Divide, Conquer Working For Campus Anarchists

WASHINGTON — As the uproar on the campuses grows with each pasing day, the threat to the whole structure of higher education is an ominous cloud on the academic horizon. A little band of extremists in one university after another sets the pace with some form of violent confrontation. All too often bumbling, entrenched authority responds with arbitrary action that enlists the moderates on the side of the extremists.

So what to do? If the erosion continues there will be more conflict, more violence, with the end result resembling what has happened in Japan. The University of Tokyo, which is rated as Harvard, Yale and Princeton rolled into one, was closed for nine months. In a highly competitive society this was a blow to thousands of young people.

REP. EDITH GREEN of Oregon, chairman of the special House subcommittee on education, is putting in a bill to create a federal office that would offer campus mediation resembling the labor mediation service. A mediator could enter a dispute on the request of any of the three parties of interest — students, faculty or administrators.

A student group could be represented once it had obtained signatures of 20 per cent of the student body on a petition.

The initial reaction to Mrs. Green's proposal among educators and members of Congress has ranged from polite hope to frank skepticism. Students on the far left would make every effort to obstruct such mediation. The activists in Students for a Democratic Society hold that government has lost its legitimacy. They carry their fierce opposition to every facet of the establishment. They mean to bring it down. So, say the doubters, such a measure would be futile.

AT THE OTHER END of the political spectrum doubts are grounded in a conviction that students have no right to demand a part in administration. As a prominent trustee on the board of a distinguished New England college put it in response to student demand for a definition of the trustees' duties and responsibilities:

"Let 'em read the charter. They can find out there what we do and the rights we exercise."

So it appears unlikely that the mediation measure will have much of a chance between these two poles of opposition.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Green deserves marks for trying to find a way to avoid the confrontation that the extremists are playing for in every situation. On the survace, at least, hers is a reasonable proposal.

ANGER at the anarchic behavior of the students is bound to take a political form. The shape of that is increasingly clear. As in California, following the series of blowups at Berkeley, both faculty and students are to be disciplined. Gov. Ronald Reagan is riding high on the crest of the reaction. Liberal Democrats say despairingly that, with the middle mass of the voters enraged at the obstructionism of the small minority of extremists on the Berkeley campus, Reagan is a shoo-in for reelection next year.

This, of course, is exactly what the activists on the left want — a showdown between the two extremes. The moderate middle, confused and disorganized, will not come down on the side of reaction. Something like this appears to have happened at Harvard, with Students for a Democratic Society celebrating a triumph.

Divide and conquer! It is an ancient tactic with modern attachments. In a society increasingly polarized between extremes this is no threat to be laughed away as though it were a panty raid.

ART BUCHWALD

Maybe It Would Work Better If Secretaries Went To Meetings

WASHINGTON — The idea of having cabinet wives attend President Nixon's cabinet meetings may have several virtues, but it also has its drawbacks. Even if nothing happened at the meetings, I would still hate to be a cabinet officer when I got home that night.

"Well," the cabinet officer's wife says, "you hardly opened your trap during the entire meeting."

"But, dear, the President didn't call on me."

"And why, may I ask, didn't the President call on you? Your department is as important as anybody else's. I was so embarrassed with you just sitting there having nothing to say."

"IT SO HAPPENS that some days I do all the talking. Unfortunately, you were there on the wrong day."

"A likely story! I'm not sure the President even knows what you do. The least he could have done is let you read a report or something. If you don't have any pride, I do."

"You're overreacting. Several of the cabinet officers didn't have anything to say either. There's only so much time in a cabinet meeting, and we have to discuss what the President is interested in."

"DID YOU SEE the smug look on Mrs. Laird's face when her husband was explaining the Soviets' first-strike potential? And did you see Mrs. Rogers react when her husband said he didn't believe the Soviets would use it? I just had to sit there like a dummy."

"I think you've got the idea of these cabinet meetings all wrong. The President invited the wives so they will get more interested in their husbands' jobs. I should have thought you would be intrigued with that."

"I would have, if I had found out what you did. As far as I could tell, the only contribution you made to the cabinet meeting was to spill a pitcher of water when the secretary of the treasury gave his report."

"DEAREST, it was an accident. Bob Finch spilled his water and you didn't see Mrs. Finch get mad."

"I only got mad when I realized that no one had even noticed you did it. That's how much attention they were paying to you."

"You're oversensitive. Everyone in that room knows the job I'm doing."

"Then why was Mrs. Nixon staring at me as if she didn't know who I was?"

"She knew who you were. You were sitting next to me, weren't you?"

"But maybe she didn't know who you were."

"GOOD GRAVY! I didn't realize you took everything to heart. The whole point of the exercise wasn't to show each other how bright we were. We were conducting the nation's business."

"You could have said something about inflation."

"I could have said something about the ABM or the Middle East or the Poverty program. But what good would it have done?"

"It would at least have let Mrs. Agnew know who you were?

"I frankly thought the meeting went pretty well."

"Well, you can say what you want to, but I'm not going to attend another one of those 'bring-your-wife-to-the-cabinet-you will ask for the flor."

"To do what?"

"To ask the President for a fresh pitcher of water, if nothing else."

While the history of the world reveals social orders, both good and bad, created through violent uprisings, no one can point to a single constructive society maintained by force.

Who Truly Holds Vietnam Countryside?

One Province Looks Loyal By Day, But Red At Night

By PETER ARNETT

VINH LONG, Vietnam (AP) — A political map of the Mekong Delta province of Vinh Long looks like a face with a severe attack of the hives.

The clear skin is controlled by the Saigon government.

The communist Viet Cong either control the rest of the face or are actively trying to take it over.

The whole of Vietnam is similarly blemished.

A close look at the countenance of the typical Delta province of Vinh Long points up one major problem hovering over any future political settlement of the Vietnam war: The splotchy control that both sides have in the countryside.

There are claims and counterclaims, with neither side being able to offer any real substantiation. The Viet Cong can go almost anywhere at night; the government almost anywhere in day.

A large part of the population admits to paying taxes to both sides. The issues that sway the allegiance of a village are not international or national, only local.

The difficulties of establishing control in the countryside led to the mounting of the Vietnam war in the first place.

The Saigon government attempted to spread its influence from the heavily-barricaded province capitals and district capitals.

The Communists established themselves in base areas located in jungle swamps or in remote provincial border areas where the government administration was the weakest, and attempted to fan out from there.

The peasant was caught in the middle.

In Vinh Long, the government is centered in seven districts. The Viet Cong have a similar number of base areas.

Of Vinh Long's half-million population, 200,000 of them are considered by the government to be either under Communist con-

Captured documents indicate that the Viet Cong claim a far greater number, and by their reasoning this is probably true. The Viet Cong technique in the Vietnam war has been to gain the secret allegiance of peasants inside government spheres of influence, using them only occasionally, and letting them go about their innocent jobs most of the time.

The people in Vinh Long live in 65 villages divided into 285 hamlets located in patches of fertile ground bordering the Mekong River that splits to go around the province, or along canals. By blowing up roads and bridges years ago, the Communists managed to isolate whole populations from government influence.

In some districts the government has held only the district town and precious little else. It is from these areas that the Viet Cong have recruited and launched forays against government installations elsewhere.

The pendulum of control swung badly for the government in the 1968 Tet offensive when nearly all the Vinh Long countryside was lost to the Viet Cong, along with 65 per cent of the population.

The government has been painfully winning the lost terrain and population back. By the beginning of March this year, American officials in Vinh Long were figuring they were back to where they were before the Tet offensive began, and were hopefully in a better position. But this still gives the Viet Cong a strong hold on the province. The peasant who makes up most of the population watches the ebb and flow of the war, suspicious of the city folk and the government, identifying only with his fellow peasants.

Both sides sensed a political settlement of the war in the wind late last year. They geared up for the battle.

The Viet Cong began holding elections throughout Vietnam in their areas of control, publicizing the results around the world in an attempt to gain international political standing, local analysts reasoned.

The Saigon government, with American prodding, moved in to grab as much territory as possible in the "accelerated pacification program" that in Vinh Long Province totalled 59 hamlets.

The Saigon government has now launched an ambitious program to pacify 90 per cent of Vinh Long by the end of this year. The Viet Cong, on the other hand, with the spring offensive, are apparently attempting to regain some of the territory they won at Tet only to lose again.

What this means to Vinh Long is that both sides are pushing hard against the middle.

The government has amassed 10,000 troops of various categories in Vinh Long, most of them regional and popular forces. There are no American ground troops in the province, but a U.S. armored unit is operating and the province has full use of allied fighter bombers.

The Viet Cong have at least 4,000 armed men, broken up into three main force battalions of about 300 men each, and seven province companies of about 100 men. The remainder are guerrillas.

Americans believe they are slowly breaking down enemy strength, but they have said that before.

They admit that if Communist main forces now operating across the Mekong River were to switch their activities to Vinh Long, the province might well revert into the Red.

Any political settlement in Vietnam could easily come to grief in the treacherous shoals of Vinh Long and the other provinces. The Saigon government believes that by flying flags in as many hamlets as possible this will give them the authority to govern in the event of a cease-fire.

But what if a Viet Cong sympathizer pulled out the flag of his choice and flew it over his house? How should he be handled?

And there is the matter of determining who really owns what. The Saigon government moved into 50 hamlets between November and February in Vinh Long as part of the "accelerated pacification program." This merely meant the positioning of a platoon of government troops in a hamlet, with no attempt to sway the population to the government cause, or even to rout out the Viet Cong infrastructure.

There is little question that the Viet Cong still regard those hamlets as their own, and may well be targeting the government troops inside them in the spring offensive.

But on the other hand, the Viet Cong have no visible government apparatus in the areas they hold sway over in Vinh Long. Their rule is clandestine. However, the Communists claim control over some hamlet simply because the government has never been there before.

There is no evidence in Vinh Long of any mutual understanding that might make a political settlement work. The Vietnamese and U.S. authorities are working towards what they hope will be a military and political victory.

The Viet Cong are exhorting their followers to fight harder.

The Saigon government privately talks of some kind of political settlement that will eventually end the Vietnam war. And the Communists, in their captured documents, mention the same thing.

But in Vinh Long today it looks like permanent war, with neither side seemingly interested in ending it.

U.S. Raps Korea For Plane Attack

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The North Korean shootdown of an unarmed U. S. Navy plane over the Sea of Japan caused a new flareup in the Far East this week, but it appeared unlikely that the United States would retaliate.

At a meeting in Panmunjom early yesterday, Air Force Maj. Gen. James B. Knapp assailed the attack as "a calculated act of aggression" and demanded "appropriate measures to prevent similar incidents in the future."

North Korean Maj. Gen. Yi Choon Sun charged that the United States had illegally dispatched the plane for spying. Knapp ignored the charge, and the meeting adjourned after 46 minutes.

The EC121 radar reconnaissance plane which was shot down carried a crew of 31, all of whom are believed to have been killed in the attack. At week's end, search destroyers had already recovered some bodies and bits of wreckage from the sea.

The North Koreans charged that the four-engined propeller plane — a modified Constellation — had violated its airspace, extending 12 miles out to sea, but Knapp said the EC121 was at least 90 miles offshore when it was attacked.

The plane apparently was shot down by MIG fighters of Soviet design. The Russian Navy was cooperating in the search for the downed plane.

U.S. Youth Intently Watching Nixon

Politically Alive Students Disagree In Evaluations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most politically vocal young ggeneration in America's history is watching intently to see how the Nixon administration will shape up.

Some are optimistic. Many are cynical. The majority seem to be keeping their fingers crossed, hoping that President Nixon will find ways to unite America, relieve ghetto misery — and above all — start listening to what young people have to say.

UPI interviews with young Americans across the country disclosed that they feel President Nixon, so far, has proved more liberal than they had expected. This is causing second thoughts among many who were prepared to dislike him, and has led to a widespread suspension of judgment.

"I haven't made an evaluation," said Alan Taliuaga, 21, student, body president at St. John's University, Brooklyn, N.Y.

"I think it's too soon to tell what kind of a President he'll make."

"I'll wait and see," another New York student said. He added, however, that "if Nixon remains cautious and uncommitted, he'll be the most hated president in history."

LACKS CHARISMA

Ralph Crum, a graduate student at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., forecast another kind of difficulty for the President. "Nixon doesn't have the great image of all the Kennedys," he said. "So Nixon can't go on charisma, he has to come up with solutions."

Crum, whose father works at the Pentagon, thought Nixon already had made a few mistakes. "Some of his appointments seem to indicate he is merely a spokesman for the defense establishment. It looks like Nixon is more interested in keeping the old order from collapsing than in setting up a new order."

Andrew Loewi, a sophomore at Iowa's Grinnell College, said Nixon "has not done anything particularly outstanding" since he took office, but added: "Fortunately, he is not as reactionary as I feared he would be."

Criticizing the President for being "short on action," Joe Spollen, 20, of Arlington, Va., said: "So far he has only plugged a leaky oil well."

Another Grinnell student, senior Fredericka Nelson, who worked for Sen. Eugene McCarthy in the Democratic presidential nomination battle, said she has been favorably impressed with "the way Nixon presents himself to the public" She qualified her praise with the comment that "his public relations man probably deserved more credit than Nixon for that."

But Nixon's "new Image" isn't going over well with everyone.

"I thought Nixon was the more conservative and the more responsible candidate in terms of experience," Harvey Hukari said. He is president of Stanford University's Young Americans for Freedom. "But I'm concerned that he's not appointing as many conservatives as I might have hoped."

Some of those interviewed were totally pessimistic.

"Nixon is proving that he, like Johnson, is enslaved by events and trends but offers no leadership in shaping policy," said Matt Andrea, a Georgetown University, Washington, D.C. graduate student.

Some students predicted Nixon would rather alienate people who were dissatisfied with present conditions, rather than unite America.

"Nixon will use repressive measures to put down protest movements," a Columbia University student warned, "and those tactics will come back to haunt him."

PROGRESSIVE CABINET

Other students felt Nixon would leave the situation on the campuses to the states, but Dennis Liff, a young Republican chairman at New York's Queens College, said approvingly, "I think he'll adopt a tough line of not tolerating rioting and he'll probably favor cutting off aid to rioters."

Among the optimists was Iowa senior Lance Levi. "The fact that Nixon is a Republican might mean that he'll be slow in initiating improvements. But I believe he has selected a progressive cabinet and will do something soon to alleviate the problems."

Another student at Queens College predicted that Nixon would operate with "less flash than the Democrats did" but with greater effectiveness. "He'll improve the programs that are working and eliminate those that are not," he said.

Ralph Paladino, a college senior from Flushing, N.Y., had high praise for Nixon's performance during his first months in office.

"I think he's handled things magnificently," Paladino said. "I like his pragmatism. He's a problem solver. He'll make a list of priorities and not be subject to pressure groups."

High school seniors, in Washington, D.C. for a "presidential classroom" program, were generally more sympathetic than college students to the new administration.

"Kids are much too ready to criticize but not ready to accept good points," Margaret Roberts of Michigan said.

Michael Marohn, from Indiana, praised Nixon for his honesty. "He's saying, 'I don't know what to do. I'm studying.' We need good at drawing people emotionally but making them stop and think, too."

Emilio Jaksetic, a New Jersey high schooler, disagreed, saying: "There are times when a person's silence is just as much of the problem. It's natural for a new President to wait awhile. But I don't want to end up after all this eases with a catastrophe."

Nixon's campaign pledge to end the draft is a definite plus mark with most students, even those who doubt it can be done or who think a lottery system is more feasible.

"At this point I favor the lottery proposal because I have doubts as to the number of people who would join a volunteer army," Joe Armin, president of the Young Republicans in San Francisco, said.

Jim Nabors, a black militant leader of the Third World Liberation Front at the University of California at Berkeley, strongly disagreed. "A volunteer army should be the only kind of army. If you want to go, you go. If you don't want to go, you just say 'hell no' and stay home."

"I don't think the Army could pay people enough to enlist, even in peace time," one junior from Ohio said. He suggested instead compulsory national service, not necessarily military, which would involve young people after the age of 18.

The idea of service projects here and abroad was raised by youths all over the country, usually as an alternative to the draft.

TEACHERS CORPS

"There's a gap between vocation and education," said Andy Mayer, a graduate student in New York City. He favored the teacher corps but said the Peace Corps and VISTA were other possibilities in which he was interested.

President Nixon is interested, too. In a news conference following his European tour the President expressed hope of finding "a new purpose and idealism" for youth. Nixon said his administration is "searching for an answer" to student unrest.

John L. Campbell, a 24-year-old White House aide, is helping in that search as one of two special youth liaisons for the President. He said in an interview that many possible service projects for youth are being studied and that final proposals might be answered "around the commencement period."

A dominant theme in all of the interviews was the fervent hope of young Americans that Nixon will "do something soon" to move forward on domestic and foreign problems.

Struggling to find some meaning in a complex and confusing world, young people are impatient for solutions. And they are looking to Nixon to come up with some ideas — even if some don't think they'll like his solutions.

Campbell said Nixon is aware of this mood and wants "to involve more people in the problems the government is concerned about." But, he adds, it will take awhile.

He pointed to a pile of tape recordings made by students during Nixon's campaign and said he was using them for ideas on youth programs.

"No one listened to them then," he said, "but we're listening now."

Will Reagan Sign Gas Tax Boost?

By CAPITAL NEWS SERVICE

Months of controversy and debate have ended with the approval of the conference committee compromise to AB-76, by Assemblywoman Pauline Davis, D-Portola, which will increase the state gasoline tax by 1 cent to provide funds for repair of roads, streets, highways and bridges which were damaged by recent storms and floods.

Both the Senate and the Assembly have given the measure their approval and it has been sent to Gov. Ronald Reagan for his signature.

Some debate still rages as to whether the governor will be breaking his pledge, made earlier this year, of no new taxes during 1969.

The bill, if signed by Reagan, is expected to produce between $7.5 and $8 million a month for use on the roads and highways. Reagan can call a halt to the tax after only one month, but under the bill, it will not extend longer than six months, or during the tourist season.

Also included in the bill is an appropriation of $25 million from the general fund to help pay for damages to public buildings. Assemblyman Frank Lanterman, R-Pasadena, and one of the conferees, said that the group exhausted all other means of providing the needed funds before approving the compromise.

Secret probation reports, urged by Assemblyman John J. Miller, D-Oakland, in AB-179, has been rejected by the assembly by a vote of 24-40. Miller was handling the bill for the State Bar Association. It proposed to make all probation reports "secret" but the objections to the proposal by Assemblymen W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, and William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, that the public "has the right to know" resulted in its defeat. Joining Miller in proposing the measure were Assemblymen Willie Brown, Jr., D-San Francisco; Robert Crown, D-Oakland; and John L. Burton, D-San Francisco. The final vote was almost along party lines.

Pay increases for state legislators, proposed in a bill by Sen. James Q. Wedworth, D-Inglewood, has passed the senate by a 28-9 vote. It would grant an increase from the present $16,000 annually to $19,200 and would cost the state taxpayers an additional $384,000 annually. The measure now goes to the assembly, where much opposition is expected.

Cigarette advertising is the subject of SB-341, by Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Los Angeles, who seeks to ban such advertising. The Senate Governmental Efficiency Committee has taken the proposal "under submission" which is tantamount to killing the proposal for this session of the Legislature.

Called an "infringement on the rights of business to advertise a legal product," the measure contained no restrictions on smoking, but only put a ban on all types of advertising of the product.

Reagan has indicated he plans to push for a presumptive limits statute to curtail the drunk drivers in the state. The Governor, in a message to the Legislature, urged passage of the proposal which will set .1 per cent as the blood alcohol concentration level at which a driver's ability is presumed to be imparied. Gordon C. Luce, secretary of business and transportation, said that more than half of the 4,850 motor vehicle deaths in the state last year included some form of alcohol problem.

Romania Takes Tough Stand With Kremlin

BUCHAREST (London Express) — Nicolae Ceausewcu, the shoemaker turned president of Romania, is stepping up the pace of his dangerous juggling act with Moscow.

The odd-man-out in Russia's Warsaw Pact alliance is again at work needling the Kremlin powers more blatantly than at any time since he publicly condemned the Russian intervention in Czechoslovakia last summer.

Romanian government leaders are now making it plain that in no circumstances will any support — military or moral — be given to Russia over the armed clashes with Red China on the eastern borders of Siberia.

They are doing it cannily by underlining the Clauses Three and Four of the Warsaw Treaty which defines the alliance as a defensive one to counter armed attack in Europe.

Legally they appear on unshakeable ground. But this cool initiative to limit the responsibilities of the Warsaw Pact powers must be infuriating Moscow.

Romania is continuing to stress her good relations with China. Two curious telegrams were recently sent to Peking — one deploring the death of an almost unknown Chinese dignitary, the other sending warmest good wishes to the Chinese Communist Party Congress.

In a vigorous follow-through, Romania's state council now produces a resolution urging "That all states refrain from demonstrations and acts of force, inclusive of military maneuvers, on foreign territories or at the frontiers of some states . . ."

This is an undisguised reference to the Czech crisis and to the new Russian military maneuvers reported from the Czech borders.

Rarely has Moscow had to put up with such a wigging from a junior league partner.

But Ecausescu seems confident that although he is on dangerously thin ice there will be no immediate Russian riposte. He gambles on the belief that Russia is too involved with China to the east, and with the obviously unresolved Czech issue, to want any fresh adventures in Eastern Europe.

And if the gamble does not come off? A senior government official assured me: "Everyone knows Romania is ready to defend her frontiers against no matter what attacker."

The Cause Of Regional Government

Women Voters Say Time For Action Has Arrived

By DON KEOWN

"Regional planning is fundamental to the orderly development of the Bay Area."

With that precept as a guiding principle, the Leagues of Women Voters of the Bay Area was established in 1961 with the two Marin leagues among the member units.

But the interest of the Central Marin and Southern Marin leagues in regional approaches to Bay Area problems had preceded the formation of that organization by a number of years.

It was the mushrooming metropolitan growth of the San Francisco Bay Area after World War II that underscored the need for cooperative study, the women say. For the population surge brought with it such regional problems as pollution of the air and water, inadequate area-wide public transportation, insufficient open space for public recreation, the uncontrolled development of prime lands and indiscriminate filling of the bay.

IN 1959 THE two Marin leagues began contacting city and county officials, technicians and other authorities, seeking the opinions of these decision-makers on the new regional problems and asking for ideas for governmental approaches that munities to engage in cooperative effort to preserve the high quality of the environment that has made living in and around San Francisco so attractive.

The example set in these Marin-originated questions and contacts plus a growing awareness that the local governments lacked the authority to deal with problems that extended beyond their jurisdiction resulted in the organization by the women voters of the Bay Area federation for a study of these common concerns.

Transportation and air pollution were selected as the two most pressing problem areas of the region and became the primary points of interests with the leagues.

WHILE COOPERATING with the some 20 other leagues of the Bay Area, the two Marin units have also been extremely active within their own county in the two fields.

In 1962, the two leagues urged Marin County's supervisors to refrain from withdrawing from the Bay Area Rapid Transit District until a study could be conducted to determine whether the Golden Gate Bridge could be used for high-speed rail transport.

Then, in 1967, the leagues opposed a decision of the Golden Gate and Highway District Board to build a second deck on that span without first looking into the practicality of possible alternatives such as improved bus service and the use of ferryboats.

A JUST completed and detailed study by the Central Marin League of Women Voters of transportation along the San Francisco-Marin corridor, with Mrs. Allen Jensen and Mrs. Vincent MacKenzie as co-chairman, gave special attention to the conflicts between commuter convenience and community interests.

The league has extended its support to a balanced transportation system between public and personal automobile transit, and has backed a plan by Arthur C. Jenkins, former engineer with the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, for a fleet of 150 modern buses to be operated between San Francisco and its neighboring counties to the north by the district, with the costs partially subsidized by bridge tolls.

A more recent development has been the introduction in Sacramento by Assemblyman John F. Foran of a bill establishing a metropolitan transportation agency to operate most of the transportation facilities in the Bay Area. The Golden Gate Bridge is excepted, but would be required by a second Foran bill to develop "a total transportation facilities plan" defining the district's future before its bonds are repaid in 1971.

AMONG THE responsibilities Foran would assign the new metropolitan agency would be the operation of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District system, once it is completed.

Foran's proposals conform generally with those made by a Bay Area Transportation Study Commission.

The Marin leagues, in practicing their broad regional view of Bay Area problems, have also supported such controversial proposals as the recently enacted ban on backyard burning as an air quality control measure. The women have pledged their continued backing of efforts by the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District to prevent air pollution and of endeavors by the state to curb motor vehicle emissions.

LAST YEAR the Southern Marin League directed attention toward Marin's serious and growing sewage disposal problems with an evaluation led by Mrs. Roger J. Fleischmann of a report by consulting engineers Brown and Caldwell that took a 50-year look ahead at the county's needs.

The report, endorsed by the league, outlined a countywide sewerage plan that would assure that discharges of sewage in the county did not violate the requirements of the North Coastal and Regional Water Quality Control Boards set to protect the recreational and esthetic qualities of the bay and its shoreline.

The leagues strongly supported legislation for planning the use and control of the bay waters and shore.

"IT WOULD be hard to count the number of letters written to the governor and the legislators, and the number of trips made to Sacramento to appear before committee hearings on this subject," the officers of the two leagues say. Ultimately all this effort paid off handsomely with the enactment in 1965 of the McAteer-Petris Bill establishing the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

Mrs. Ernest Hoppe and Mrs. Allen Lovejoy, the women who represent the two Marin units with the Leagues of Women Voters of the Bay Area, say that it would be difficult to overstate the importance of that commission "when one realizes that a section of Paradise Cove, except for Angel Island, is the only significant piece of bay shoreline in Marin that is open for recreational use by the public at this time."

They note that the situation elsewhere in the Bay Area is little more heartening.

ONE OF THE commission's most important responsibilities is its authorization to act on bay-filling.

With active support from the Marin leagues, a bill extending the functioning of the commission until 90 days after the close of the 1969 legislative session was enacted last year, thus clearing the way for possible action on more permanent legislation regulating the development of the bay and prohibiting indiscriminate filling in the interim.

The Bay Conservation and Development Commission is currently locked in battle in Sacramento on behalf of its master plan for the bay that was three years in its development.

BEFORE THE legislature are bills that would extend the life of the commission, or establish a new permanent agency to carry on its work. But long range proposals developed by the commission for halting or slowing the shrinkage of the bay are missing from most of the measures before the legislators.

The Marin leagues have been represented before the Bay Conservation and Development Commission in opposition to fill projects at the mouth of Corte Madera Creek and in Richardson Bay.

"One shudders to think that if all the proposed and contemplated plans for filling were permitted, the bay might be reduced to little more than a river," says Mrs. Hoppe.

THE BEST solution lies, she says, not in piecemeal opposition to specific objectionable projects, but in the League of Women Voters supported idea for overall regional planning and control.

Which, adds Mrs. Hoppe, leads in turn to the most basic issue of the regionalization movement and one of the most hotly debated — the question of the kind of governing body best suited to managing regional affairs.

This presents, she notes, such questions as:

Should the members of the official body be elected directly from existing or especially constructed districts, or should there be a combination of directly elected and appointed officials who might be more responsive to local interests?

THOSE WHO favor the plan for new districts feel that it would preserve the "one-man-

one-vote" principle and foster direct responsiveness to the wishes of the people, and would best coordinate the functions and authorities of the many, sometimes overlapping agencies already in existence.

Those who urge a combination of elected and appointed officials believe that system would best protect Marin County from domination by the three larger, more populated metropolitan centers of the Bay region. The appointive officials, they say, would serve as a liaison between regional government and local interests.

Marin County Supervisor John McInnis has spoken for a bicameral legislative arrangement with one house of appointed and one house of elected members that might later be changed to an all-elected unicameral body once the concept of regional government were better established and more generally accepted.

BEFORE THE California State Legislature is Assembly Bill 711, co-authored by Assemblyman John Knox and Sen. Lewis F. Sherman, chairman and vice chairman of the Joint Committee on Bay Area Regional Organization, which, if passed, would establish a regional government following its authorization by a majority of the voters of the Bay Area in an election on June 2, 1970.

The Knox-Sherman plan incorporates a system of a board whose members would be elected directly from small districts.

"Perhaps the most cogent aspect of the bill is that of sending it to the people for ratification," says Mrs. Hoppe.

MORE RECENTLY the legislative situation became more complicated with the introduction by Assemblyman William T Bagley of a bill that would transform the existing Association of Bay Area Governments, now a study and advisory body, into a more formidable instrument of regional government.

By the Bagley bill, existing regional agencies regulating water and air pollution would be merged into the strengthened ABAG which would be given broad planning powers and the authority to implement those regional plans. The bill also includes another one-year extension for the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

Mrs. Hoppe says that the Marin leagues followed closely the development of ABAG and encouraged local supervisors and councilmen to participate, regarding it as "a first small step in the right direction." But, she adds, in its present form, "it is not effective regional government."

"A REGIONAL government strong enough to be effective," she points out, must have delegated to it such powers as the planning, developing and "in some cases" the construction of facilities for bay preservation. These powers, she adds, would need to include the right of eminent domain, the issuance of permits for bay filling, the planning of transportation corridors, the control of solid waste disposal, the planning of open space, etc.

"The Leagues of Women Voters feel that it is time to give regional government teeth," she says, adding that the leagues have discussed and argued extensively the merits of the proposals for so doing.

Along with the questions of selecting representatives for a regional governing body and with defining its powers is the further issue of financing.

"IT IS THOUGHT that any added tax burden should be submitted to a vote of the people of the region that will bear the taxes," the Marin women voters say.

The Knox-Sherman plan favors a personal income surtax and a business privilege tax, supplemented by various fees for the use of the bay, to support the regional government's operating costs. The bill would also grant the new government the authority to issue general obligation revenue bonds for land acquisition purposes in order to carry out a master plan for the bay.

The members of the Leagues of Women Voters admit that in a time when Marinites and Bay Area residents, like other Americans, are much preoccupied with campus unrest, urban crime and turmoil, poverty, racial controversy, rising taxes and the war in Vietnam, regional government often seems like an intangible issue that could well be postponed and dealt with sometime in the distant future.

"BUT THE time will not wait," they say.

They point to a conference on "Regional Government: Ready or Not?," sponsored jointly in 1967 by the Central and Southern Marin leagues, in which Marin officials and experts participated in panel discussions that underscored the interdependence of all the various sections of the Greater Bay Area and the need for an effective regional government.

At that conference, Fred Enemark, executive vice president of the Marin County Savings and Loan Association and active in the Bay Area Council, representing business and industry on the regional level, stressed the importance of a movement toward regional government without procrastination if the bay and its environment are to be saved.

"THE LEAGUES of Women Voters share Mr. Enemark's sentiments," say Mrs. Edward Boessenecker and Mrs. Farrel Schell, presidents of the Southern and Central Marin leagues respectively.

They point out that Assemblyman Knox in a television interview, while expressing concern over a general lack of knowledge on the part of Bay Area residents of the problems and issues involved in the regionalization movement, paid special tribute to the Leagues of Women Voters for their work to counteract that situation and urged them to continue to use their energies and resources for public education prior to the projected 1970 referendum.

Marin's leagues fully intend to accept that challenge, Mrs. Boessenecker and Mrs. Schell say.

IN THE NEXT year, they say, the two units will be more deeply involved than ever not only in educating the public to an awareness of growing regional problems and possible solutions, but also in testifying on behalf of regional government.

The league watchword reads: "Study without action is futile; action without study is fatal."

The two Marin leagues have been deeply committed to study of the complicated subject of Bay Area regional problems and government, largely through their resource committees on regional government, as well as other committees delving into specific problem areas.

IN THE SOUTHERN Marin League, Mrs. Hoppe heads a five-member resource committee on regional government. With the Central Marin League, Mrs. Lovejoy is chairman of a seven-member committee.

Personnel on those key committees have varied since they were first set up a decade ago. But throughout those 10 years the women have been busy observing regional meetings, studying pertinent legislation, comparing the problems and achievements of the various Bay Area communities and political entities, compiling information on regional programs in other sections of the United States and in other lands, soliciting the opinions of experts, conducting surveys, interviews and conferences, educating themselves as well as others.

With that firm foundation now available to them, the Marin leagues feel that the time has arrived for final action — for positive steps to make the

TRANSPORTATION is one of the fields of particular concern to the Marin Leagues of Women Voters for which they feel a regional approach is required. The Central Marin League, after a study, has endorsed a balanced system between public transit and private automobiles as the best solution.

Leagues Urge A Regional View—

dream of effective regional government a reality in the Bay Area.

THEY ACKNOWLEDGE that it will likely prove a difficult undertaking that will see them bucking the traditional reluctance of Americans to abandon any of their local governmental prerogatives as well as encountering the certain-to-exist distrust of an additional bureaucracy with its costs. There will be disagreements, too, even within the ranks of those favoring regional government as to how the system should be set up.

But the women voters are confident that the kind of reasoning they have arrived at after long and careful study will prevail, that ultimately the doubts and fears of many of the opponents of regional government can be quieted, that differences among the supporters can be compromised, and that a new era of badly needed cooperative action lies ahead for the cities and the counties of the Bay Area.

There is a definite movement in that direction, they say, pointing out that in 1959 there were six agencies in the Bay Area with jurisdictions covering more than one county (although but one, the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board established in 1949, had responsibilities over the entire area), while 10 years later there are nine separate governmental agencies dealing with all or large segments of the Bay Area.

THEY POINT, too, to the exhaustive surveys they have conducted among public officials which they say showed strong support for the concept of regional government.

"The overwhelming majority of those interviewed were in favor of directly elected representatives by districts, on a non-partisan basis for four-year terms, with compensation adequate to attract qualified people," they say.

The majority also favored "a consolidated organization," they report, "and gave priority to regional planning, bay conservation and development, environmental pollution controls, solid waste disposal, parks and open space, and transportation."

Minority officials also urged social planning in such fields as manpower utilization, jobs, housing, transportation and education.

INCOME TAX was the favored financing method, followed by sales tax.

A majority of those contacted approved granting the new government the power of eminent domain, but often with restrictions such as the concurrence of local officials.

The widest split, the women say, was whether the new system should be established by legislative action or by a referendum of the people.

Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum, for instance, favoring a strong regional organization of directly elected representatives, told the women that the state legislators should accept their responsibility and pass the necessary measures.

STATE SEN. John F. McCarthy, according to the women, also favoring the directly elected representatives system for a regional government limited to regional problems that would take no authority away from local governments, has spoken for a referendum by the voters and has predicted that such a plan would be approved by the people of the Bay Area.

Assemblyman Bagley has urged that regional government begin with its functions limited, perhaps to environmental planning at the outset. He has suggested an organization composed of both directly - elected representatives of the people and appointed representatives of the elected officials of the cities and counties. Bay Area legislators will support such a limited type of regional government, he has said, and that other members of the Legislature are likely to also go along with it.

Bagley has suggested in his discussions with the league women a property tax limited to a two-cent levy or in lieu vehicle funds as possible sources of financing.

WHILE THERE are differences in the details and varying degrees of enthusiasm, the Marin Leagues of Women Voters note there is near unanimous realization that some kind of concerted and coordinated action must be taken by the Bay Area counties and cities to confront their mutual problems and to solve them.

In the year ahead the two Marin leagues will be attempting to crystalize that feeling into effective action. They take heart from the fast that in so doing, they will have the support of some 20 other leagues of civic-minded women in the Bay Area, as well as the backing of many other farsighted persons in and out of government, in Marin, and in its neighboring counties.

PAYING AN INSPECTION visit to the marshlands at the mouth of Corte Madera Creek are, left to right, Mrs. Allen Lovejoy, Mrs. John Becker and Mrs. Walter Olson. Mrs. Lovejoy is the Central Marin League of Women Voters representative to the Leagues of Women Voters of the Bay Area, while Mrs. Becker and Mrs. Olson both formerly served in that capacity. The Marin leagues have opposed successfully fill proposals for the area.

THE LEAGUE TURNS 50 THIS YEAR

The League of Women Voters of the United States this year is observing its 50th anniversary as an effective instrument for good government in America.

The league dates its birth from the proposal of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt in an address before the National American Women Suffrage Association in 1919 for the formation of such an organization "to finish the fight (struggle for suffrage) and aid in the reconstruction (democracy's postwar needs)."

Formal organization took place the following year.

On May 28, 1936, in Mill Valley the first Marin league was formed.

Marin Collegians Take A Trip

By PAUL MILLER

There must be many citizens who are convinced that all that most college students do is get stoned, sit shirtless on lawns, swear, play bongo drums, and, when stirred up a bit, demonstrate.

But a trip with College of Marin students of instructor Al Molina's field biology class south to Death Valley discloses another side of the collegians — a deeper and better one.

To be sure, the students traveling in the old yellow school bus enjoyed themselves.

AND THEY GOT stoned — stoned over the magnificence of the Panamint Range at sunrise as seen from the coldness of Dante's View some 4,000 feet above the east side of Death Valley's baked floor.

The boys sat shirtless, in the hot sun on the edge of salt pools, and as they did so examined with curiosity the exquisite white and transparent fans of crystalization, and peered into the cool, bitter waters in search for signs of life.

And some of them swore just a bit — as they crawled with painstaking care along a patch of green near Furnace Creek Springs, and yet, with their nets, just missed one of the prized specimens among the 100 desert insects they were required to collect and identify.

WITH NO BONGO drums available, the students beat out the rhythm instead on their canteens as they sang every verse of "Ninety-Nine Bottles of Beer on the Wall" and argued and discussed every subject from ecology to theology while on board the packed bus which zoology instructor Noel Nelson, the driver, piloted over more than 1,100 miles of asphalt and dirt.

And they demonstrated — enthusiasm for everything they saw and experienced.

The first time the 22 students got out of their bus was at dawn at a marsh beside San Pablo Bay. Thereafter they hopped in and out of their yellow "Gila Monster" from six to 10 times a day at any point where there was something Molina wanted them to see, hear, touch or smell — plants, animals or rocks — or to enjoy a cold bottle of soda pop.

MOLINA'S WIFE, Bev, drove him in their family car while he lectured over a two-way radio to the bus and four other vehicles in the college caravan, sometimes humorously, sometimes groggily, but always informatively.

Some of the stopping places were in the snow at Mono Lake, in the wind at Petroglyph Loop, at Ownes Valley, and at Morro Bay State Natural History Museum after a rain.

Where horned toads were supposed to be, in the sand under the gray sage brush of a stopping point between Shosane and Baker in San Bernardino County, the collegians and the children of some of the faculty members making the trip made the surprising find of Easter eggs bearing the initials "COM."

WHILE MOLINA and his biology students traveled, so did instructor Stephen Bruff, originator of Easter recess field trip courses at the college, with his geology students, and instructor Gordon Chan with his biology class.

Molina first joined Bruff in a team trip in 1962, and he credits much of the success of his travel-and-teach techniques to Bruff and to the late Dr. Paul T. Wilson, whose widow, in a fitting tribute to her husband and his untiring work as a naturalist and teacher at the college and in Marin County, joined this year's tour. Dr. Wilson had died the preceding week, after a long illness.

Molina says he would like to call his course "Adventure in Observational Ecology."

BEFORE THEY leave, he tells his students: "You will see that in spite of the fantastic growth of California's technical industries, the economic roots of the state are still firmly anchored in the rich fertile soil of the Central Valley.

"You will better understand the problems that confront the state in controlling wisely the management of this soil and the water vital to its productivity."

Molina predicts that "each turn of the road will bring you something new to see and to think about."

AND, HE continues, "some of what you see will be fairly unimpressive . . . while some of it will . . . bombard your senses by its magnitude, delicacy or sheer beauty."

By the end of the second day of their trip, the students were in full concurrence with their teacher's prediction. Except that the unimpressive was rare.

For the students, the eight-day field trip in Biology 4-B plus one-hour-per-week lectures throughout the semester, plus reading and studying a formal syllabus compiled by Molina to a thickness approximating a Los Angeles telephone book, is worth two units credit. To take the course, the student must first have completed or be enrolled in an introductory biology class.

BESIDES MAKING the trip, attending the lectures, studying the syllabus, participating in the discussions, the students must compile a diary of the trip and complete other written assignments — and pass the inevitable final examination.

REGULARLY THE College of Marin biology students climbed from their sleeping bags at 6 a.m. to begin their day's adventures. But for the optional trek to Dante's View to watch a Death Valley sunrise, instructor Al Molina awakened his charges at 4:30 a.m.

On the trip, they collected, keyed, listened, discussed. Following the evening review lectures by Molina or his teaching assistant, Al Blair, they played volleyball to work out the kinks.

When the collegians arrived back at their home base in Kentfield, they were a weary lot.

But they, and Molina, had the satisfaction of realizing that their "knowing where it's at, baby" had taken on a new dimension. Within them had grown an awareness that man is but one link in nature's grand scheme. And that all other forms of life are entitled to his respect and his understanding.

AT MORRO BAY, one of the traveling College of Marin biology students uses a lunch break stop to work on some field assignments. A visit to the natural history museum there was a highlight of the trip.

Marin Odd Fellows Mark An Anniversary

Fraternal Organization Looks Back On 150 Years Of Service In U.S.

(Editor's Note: William T. Ortman, pioneer San Rafael resident now living in Oakland, is believed to be the oldest living member of Marin Lodge No. 200, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He joined that lodge on June 26, 1916. He has written the following history of the fraternal order in Marin County in conjunction with the Odd Fellows' observance next week of the 150th anniversary of their organization in the United States.)

By WILLIAM T. ORTMAN

On the evening of Feb. 24, 1872, in the Masonic Hall on rutted Olema Road in the southeast portion of the Mission San Rafael Arcangel's abandoned pear orchard, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows instituted its Marin Lodge No. 200.

It had been a rainy day, but one of excitement for the usually sleepy little village that had looked forward with anticipation to the public ceremony and the dancing and feasting that were to follow.

Rev. William H. Hill, the lodge's grand master for the state, had left San Francisco at 3 p.m. aboard the SS Contra Costa, accompanied by Past Grands Henry C. Squire, Henry J. Hyland, James Davis and E. B. Spencer, to cross the bay to San Quentin Point. They arrived at the B Street station in San Rafael at 6 o'clock on the small, one-coach, narrow gauge train that covered the three miles between the point and B Street in seven minutes.

A CONSIDERABLE crowd had gathered at the depot to greet the visiting dignitaries. San Rafael was an unincorporated community without city officials, but Judge A. I. Barney acted as the official welcomer, assisted by Oliver Irwin, banker, and Tom Hansen, a young attorney.

With the welcoming speeches over, Frederick H. Pratt, the San Rafael postmaster, organized some 300 townsmen into a column of marchers that proceeded down B Street. Flickering pine-oil torches were held aloft by the men marching behind a brass band, and with the Reverend Hill and his four fellow Odd Fellows from the grand lodge accorded places of honor.

"The Old Gray Mare Ain't What She Used To Be," blared the band. And at Fourth and B a great bonfire blazed and roared.

THE PARADE broke up at the Marin Hotel where the grand lodge members were escorted inside for their dinner before going on to the lodge room in the Masonic Hall.

The rains had ceased and the gala affair that followed was one of the highlights in the annals of what was still a frontier community. The hall was packed with listeners who heard the Reverend Hill stress the principles of the fraternal organization — friendship, love and truth — and then trace its history.

Odd Fellowship was very ancient, Hill told his audience.

He gave mention to a piece of yellowing parchment confined to a bottle in a museum at Hardwick, Scotland, upon which was inscribed a charter granted to the "Society of Odd Fellows." It was dated May 6, 1557.

HE TOLD of other records of Odd Fellowship in England another 200 years later.

The tenets of Odd Fellowship —those principles of friendship, love and truth —had come, he said, from somewhere in the Near East, perhaps from the land of the pharaohs or the rocky Galilean countryside. Because of the organization's monotheistic doctrine and ritualistic adherence to the Old Testament, many Odd Fellows had taken the stand that the order's creed was born in a theology that ages ago had pulled itself out of the Godless materialism of Egypt.

Reverend Hill told of Sir Francis Drake's contacts in the Near East "with a strange cult, the like of which he had never before known." Upon his return to England's shores, the speaker said, Drake introduced the rudimentary principles of "what we know today as Odd Fellowship."

HILL TOLD, too, of how the novelist Daniel DeFoe had reported that Odd Fellowship had established its roots deeply in England in the 18th Century. Later, he said, it took on a deeper, more charitable character and devoted itself to providing care and humanitarianism not only for its members but for all fellow men.

Those early lodges were supported, Reverend Hill went on, by the payment of a penny by each member or visitor as he entered the lodge room, and by the voting of special funds for a brother in need. An Odd Fellow out of work was supplied with a card and a sum of money sufficient to take him to the next lodge; then he went from lodge to lodge until he found employment.

These lodges, Reverend Hill said, gradually developed a common ritual and became confederated under the name Patroitic Order of Odd Fellows. Toward the end of the 18th Century, however, the confederation was broken up by prosecutions by the state that claimed its purpose was "seditious."

LATER, THE lodges came together again as the United Order of Odd Fellows. And in 1813, at a convention in Manchester, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Manchester Unity, was formed, and it grew to overshadow all other such societies in England.

Odd Fellowship, Hill related, first came to the United States in 1819. It was brought by Thomas Wildey, born in London Jan. 15, 1782, and an active Odd Fellow from 1805. He came to the United States in 1817, settling in Baltimore.

He recruited four other men who had been members of the parent organization in England — John Welch, John Duncan, John Cheatham and Richard Rushworth — and together, on April 26, 1819, they organized Washington Lodge No. 1.

ON FEB. 21, 1821, the Grand Lodge of Maryland and the United States was formed. The Grand Lodge of the United States has since become the Sovereign Grand Lodge. Thomas Wildey was elected grand sire, a position he held until 1833. For some years he traveled widely, organizing many state grand lodges. He attended every session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge until his death on Oct. 19, 1861.

Reverend Hill also told his listeners in the San Rafael hall of the history of the fraternal organization in California, of how San Francisco Lodge No. 1 was instituted in 1849 by pioneers of that city and was followed quickly by other lodges throughout the state, particularly in the gold-mining country.

Lodges were formed in such towns and camps as Marysville, Rough and Ready, Grass Valley, Whiskey Flat, Hangtown,

Comptonville, San Juan, Downieville, as well as many other settlements.

WHEN THE gravel beds of the ancient river channels and creek bottoms were mined out, the gold-seekers drifted to other parts of California, particularly to the agricultural sections and small towns, taking Odd Fellowship with them.

Thus Petaluma Lodge No. 30 was created in 1854 at a time when that community was a settlement of log cabins and duck-hunter shacks clustered in a small clearing hewed out of a dense forest of redwoods on the west bank of the salt water Petaluma slough off San Pablo Bay.

Then, continued Reverend Hill, there came to the west a man who was to play a key role in the growth of Odd Fellowship in California — Samuel H. Parker. He was born in New Hampshire on July 23, 1818, and became an Odd Fellow on Nov. 4, 1842. He became grand master of that jurisdiction.

HE HAD BEEN commissioned deputy grand sire of the Sovereign Grand Lodge prior to his second trip West in 1853, when he found six Odd Fellow lodges functioning in the state. He called together their past grands and organized the Grand Lodge of California, being elected the state's first grand master. In May, 1856, he was also chosen grand representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the United States.

Ever devoted to the order and its principles, Parker gave of his time and money in the building of the Odd Fellows' Library in San Francisco that was for many years the leading library of that city.

He died March 14, 1866, and it was said: "His work in behalf of Odd Fellowship has passed into history, and his memory will be cherished with veneration and long abide in the affections of his brethren."

FOLLOWING HIS resume of the history of the order, Reverend Hill next read to the hushed audience assembled in the lodge room of the San Rafael Masonic Hall the charter that granted Marin Lodge No. 200 of San Rafael formal membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of North America.

The charter founders listed on that document, as read by the instituting officer, were Oliver Irwin, John Dixheimer, William H. McGraw, Johannes Petersen, Thomas Hansen and Julius Goedge.

Following that reading, a new district was pronounced created by the grand master, and Henry J. Hyland of San Francisco was appointed its district deputy grand master.

Reverend Hill then initiated the first candidates into Marin Lodge No. 200.

THEY WERE 13 in number and they were G. W. Bond, John Dixheimer, Julius Goedge, Thomas Hansen, Oliver Irwin, O. M. Irwin, William H. H. McGrew, Johannes Petersen, McAllister, A. McLeod, Johannes Petersen, John Regnalds and John Sims.

The organization of the Marin Lodge was completed with an election of officers. Oliver Irwin was chosen noble grand, John Dixheimer vice grand, William H. McGrew secretary and Johannes Petersen treasurer.

The business meeting was terminated and both the public and the Odd Fellows then enjoyed dancing in the ballroom until 2 a.m.

THE YEAR 1872 was a time when there were few buildings along Fourth Street between Looten Place and B. The present courthouse, soon to be vacated, was only a dream in the minds of civic-spirited citizens. The old mission ruins had vanished and in their place stood the new Catholic church.

For some unknown reason, Marin Lodge No. 200 functioned under the borrowed by-laws of a San Francisco lodge for a time. Then the first constitution and by-laws of Marin Lodge No. 200 were adopted June 25, 1877. Their approval by the committee on laws of subordinates on June 30 of that year made them effective July 1, 1877.

This approval was recorded by Henry C. Lund, as recording secretary of the lodge. He was also one of the hardest workers among San Rafael's early Odd Fellows.

HE WAS A business man engaged in the lumber trade with partner Thomas Hansen. After my initiation into the Odd Fellows on June 26, 1916, I came to know him well as a gentle soul with a sincere love of his fellow man. By then he was in his late 60s, had served through all the chairs and in every station of the lodge, worked on innumerable committees, and stood ever ready to fill ably the chair of any absent brother.

He served, too, for many years as treasurer and maintained a keen interest in the financial affairs of the lodge.

I know of only one other Marin pioneer with a similar dedication to Odd Fellowship. He was Henry Jefsen, who was initiated in 1888, making him 14 years Lund's junior in the organization. Jefsen was a carpenter and, like Lund, totally consecrated to Odd Fellowship and its precepts.

OFFICERS and chevaliers made an impressive display in Canton uniforms as they posed for this photograph at the Independent Order of Odd Fellows Grand Encampment, held in Eureka in October of 1925. The large photograph taken in front of the Eureka Inn is the property of Mrs. Pauline Walker, whose late husband, Alexander Walker, was a San Rafael Canton leader, and who is herself an active member of the Canton Auxiliary.

AFTER THE incorporation of the Marin Lodge in 1872, Louis J. Peters Sr., Thomas Hansen, Johannes Petersen, A. C. McAllister and Julius Goedge set about building the Odd Fellows' Hall on the northeast corner of D and Fourth streets.

The building grew in size until it was San Rafael's largest

"Should The United States Flag Ever Be Destroyed?"

Our flag is our most important fabric and there is a time when it should be destroyed. According to the Flag Code, Public Law 829 passed by the 77th Congress, when the flag of the United States of America is ". . . in such a condition that it no longer is a fitting emblem for display (it) should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning."

There are other regulations of respect in the Flag Code, i.e., the flag ". . . should never be used as a drapery of any sort whatsoever, never festooned, drawn back, nor up in folds, but always allowed to fall free. Bunting of blue, white and red, always arranged with the blue above, the white in the middle and the red below, should be used for covering a speaker's desk, draping in front of a platform and for decoration in general."

Copies of the Flag Code may be obtained through the American Legion. The Fabric Doctor suggests you obtain a copy and make certain that the code of conduct toward the most important fabric we can ever own, is observed.

structure west of the three-story San Rafael (later Commercial and Central) Hotel. The venerable Odd Fellows' Hall was known to four generations of San Rafael residents as the scene of festive occasions and solemn rituals, until it was destroyed by fire in 1957, causing the lodge to build its present edifice at 1522 Fifth Avenue.

One such special occasion I have good cause to remember personally.

WHEN I returned home from the war in Europe in 1919 Marin Lodge No. 200 made plans for a banquet honoring another doughboy, Charles Brown Jr., and myself in the large upstairs hall.

I was advised to prepare something to say. But I had expected only a small gathering of lodge brothers, and so had rehearsed only briefly a short talk. When I arrived at the entrance to the building, Lee Duncan met me and escorted me upstairs. To my consternation, the hall was packed with Odd Fellows, including many important out-of-town guests. Rows of long tables decked with food stretched the length of the room. The standing-room-only turnout crowded the anteroom as well.

Seated beside Charlie Brown at the table of honor, I was suddenly numb with stagefright. Charlie sensed my terror, leaned over and whispered: "The war wasn't so bad, was it?"

WHEN MY turn came to speak, I stood up and looked about the room. Never had I seen such a sea of faces. Not even the kindly, encouraging smile of Capt. V. S. Cheda, banker, former commander of Company D, Fifth Infantry Regiment, California National Guard, and long-time Odd Fellow, could put me completely at my ease. And when I noticed M. F. Cochrane, publisher of the San Rafael Independent, with notebook before him and pencil poised, ready to record my speech, words failed me completely.

I had lost all recollection of what I planned to say. Desperately I reviewed the history of the closing months of the war. But those present had already read this in their newspapers. So my speech fell flat.

Nevertheless, it was a tremendous welcome home and a heartwarming honor accorded me by my brother Odd Fellows of Marin Lodge 200 that I have never forgotten.

LOOKING BACK over my more than 50 years of Odd Fellowship, I would like to mention a few of the elder statesmen of the Marin Lodge — Walter Helwig, a splendid Odd Fellow who for many years was building inspector for the city of San Rafael; Harry B. Hawk, former mailman; R. L. Duncan, known to all San Rafael as Lee; John Ault, for many years an electrician for the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Co.; Alexander Walker, a dedicated Odd Fellow who was initiated in 1915; Frank Reid, former mayor of San Rafael; Louis J. Peters Sr. and Louis J. Peters Jr., father and son, both engaged in the drygoods business.

These personalities and many others gave much of their time and money to advance the early cause of Odd Fellowship in Marin.

In 1886, the 36th annual session of the Grand Lodge of California, attended by Louis J. Peters Sr. and Johannes Petersen as representatives of District No. 11 and Lodge No. 200 respectively, began considering establishing a boys' home.

IN 1887, MARIN'S Golden Star Rebekah Unit No. 112 was instituted in San Rafael as a unit of Odd Fellowship with an enrollment of 33 members.

And that year, at the 37th session of the grand lodge, the Golden Star Rebekahs joined with the Rebekahs of Gilroy's Lodge No. 24 in pressing for the passage of a resolution authorizing an orphanage. The resolution was adopted in the Assembly of Rebekahs in the closing hours of the session.

Nine years later, in May of 1896, Mrs. Caroline A. Hoxett, past noble grand of Rebekah Unit No. 24, provided five acres of land in Gilroy for an Odd Fellows Orphanage Home. The cost of the building was met by Rebekahs and Odd Fellow lodges throughout the state. The cornerstone was laid on May 8, 1897, and the home was completed Sept. 1, 1897.

MARIN LODGE and Golden Star Rebekah members also worked closely with the elderly people of the Odd Fellows' Home at Saratoga to help meet the special needs of that institution.

During the 1880s and the 1890s there was a general surge of Odd Fellow philanthropic effort. Changes were occurring in the human social structure. It was a challenge. And Marin's Odd Fellows and Rebekahs accepted that challenge, under the dynamic leadership of such noble grands as F. M. Angelotti, Charles H. Dubois, Robert L. Duncan, W. F. Jones, Henry Jepson and Henry Knittel.

Another noble grand worthy of special mention was C. F. Mockler, in private life a general messenger for the business interests of San Rafael, traveling daily to San Francisco on special business errands for the merchants of Fourth Street. His keen judgment was invaluable to the Marin Lodge.

WHEN EARTHQUAKE and fire devastated San Francisco on April 18, 1906, the Marin Lodge moved quickly into high gear, providing relief for the victims and continuing that work until the people of San Francisco were again in a position to care for themselves.

On Aug. 3, 1906, a group of 35 Odd Fellows of Marin Lodge formed the Mount Horeb Encampment 106, a brotherhood branch of Marin Lodge 200. Their first meeting was called to order by President G. P. Jessen who was installed along with High Priest H. O. Bower, Senior Warden L. W. Bowen and Scribe G. E. Davis. Twenty-seven applicants were approved and elected.

In the early years after the turn of the century and following the completion of the electric third rail system into Mill Valley, Southern Marin County had begun to grow rapidly. Thus it became imperative that there be established an Odd Fellows Lodge in Mill Valley.

ON SEPT. 28, 1907, Mount Tamalpais Lodge No. 399, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, was instituted in the Keystone Building in Mill Valley. Forty candidates were initiated and took all three degrees. The candidates were business men of Mill Valley and railroad employees from Mill Valley and Tuburon.

The district deputy grand master presided, assisted by degree teams from various San Francisco lodges. And the proceedings lasted well into the early morning hours.

Mount Tamalpais Lodge No. 399 was to become exceptionally active in Heart Fund and Blood Bank work and to be a contributor to the World Eye Laboratory, a research foundation established by a grant from the IOOF's Sovereign Grand Lodge. It was to support, too, youth camps at Long Barn, the Veterans' Home at Yountville, a Tamalpais High School scholarship program, and many other worthwhile projects.

BLYTHEDALE Rebekah Lodge No. 112 became its sister unit and participated wholeheartedly in the work.

For a time, from 1926 to 1952, a San Anselmo IOOF lodge also functioned in the county. When Ayoda Lodge No. 478 ceased its operations, San Anselmo's Tamal Rebekah Lodge No. 393, was not ready to "close shop." It became a second Rebekah lodge to use the hall of Marin Odd Fellow Lodge No. 200, and it has continued to be an active participant in organizational and humanitarian work.

In still earlier years Marshall, too, had its IOOF lodge.

IN THE SPRING of 1923 members of Marin Lodge No. 200 began organizing an advanced Canton No. 39. It was instituted on June 2, 1923, by Maj. Gen. C. H. Krenbeck, department commander, with a charter membership of 20 Odd Fellows. W. G. Coogin was installed as captain.

A youth movement within Odd Fellowship was exemplified in Marin by the aims and activities of the Marin Star Theta Rho Girls' No. 121 unit, made up of young people 10 to 18 dedicated to the Odd Fellow aspirations of "friendship, love and truth."

Largely responsible for bringing this youth movement to Marin was Wanda Willey of Novato, a member of Golden Star Rebekah Lodge No. 112 of San Rafael. She investigated the IOOF and Rebekah youth programs and determined to bring a Theta Rho Girls' Club to Marin County. Her idea was approved by the Golden Star Rebekahs, and Marin Star Theta Rho Girls No. 121 was instituted on April 14, 1967, with ceremonies conducted by Suzie Jones, president of the California Theta Rho Assembly for 1967-68.

CHARTER MEMBERS and first officers of Marin Star No. 121 were Jean Snyder, president; Melissa Johnson, first vice president; Cynthia Russo, secretary; Rhonda Bordgren, treasurer; Rise Russo, financial secretary; Jacquie Willey, warden; Nancy Irwin, conductor; Janice Hoffman, marshal; Claudia Walters, chaplain, and Stacy Adams, guardian. Wanda Willey was installed as advisor.

Marin Star Theta Rho No. 121 was organized, says Mrs. Willey, to give Marin County youth a constructive service outlet.

Shut-in Odd Fellows and Rebekahs are visited particularly at Christmas time. Holiday baskets are delivered to the needy. Rest homes are visited regularly, and the residents entertained. Present membership of the club is 23 girls and six Rebekahs with five more members soon to be added to the rolls.

THE ODD FELLOW movement also authorized in 1923 a Junior Odd Fellow Lodge program for boys as part of its emphasis upon and appeal to youth. Formation of a Marin County unit is now under way.

Next week the Independent Order of Odd Fellows will be observing its 150th anniversary in the United States with appropriate rites and ceremonies. In San Rafael, for instance, Marin Lodge No. 200 will hold a special "family pot-luck" affair Monday night at which the guest dignitary and speaker will be an important Canadian government official, Newton Stacy, past grand master of the IOOF's District of Columbia, Canada.

It will mark a time when Odd Fellows will not only celebrate the past achievements of their order, but will rededicate themselves to a future in which they will continue to practice with vigor the axiom, "I am my brother's keeper."

A SPECTACULAR FIRE on July 29, 1957, burned to the ground the building of Marin Lodge No. 200, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and destroyed most of the society's possessions. On Aug. 25, 1958, the San Rafael Odd Fellows held their first meeting in the new building they had constructed at 1522 Fifth Avenue, with Elmer Kaysen presiding as noble grand.

The only medication that

Gets to a Major Cause of Hemorrhoids

Now! Most complete 3-way relief!

Important development: unlike every other hemorrhoid product, Counternoid™ works in 3 ways:
1. Lessens pain fast.
2. Coats, soothes and protects injured tissue.
3. Gets to a major cause of hemorrhoids: painful hard constipation.

In hospital X-ray tests, doctors have demonstrated that the exclusive Counternoid formulation with DSS₃₅™ penetrates in minutes to the top of the rectal area to soften the stool and ease the bowel movement, to make natural healing possible.

Remember: Counternoid. For temporary relief of minor hemorrhoid troubles. The most complete 3-way relief you can get without a prescription or without surgery. At all drug counters.

SOUND ON SOUND — SOUND WITH SOUND. What's the difference? Some confusion exists about sound on sound and sound with sound. Many times the instructions that accompany a tape recorder are not very clear with their explanations.

SOUND WITH SOUND is the simplest of the two. One way of accomplishing sound with sound is to record, say from a record, an orchestra onto channel A or left track of a recorder. While recording the music, record someone singing along with the music by using a microphone plugged into the B channel or right track of the recorder. When the tape is played back, the orchestra will be heard from the left speaker and vocalist will be heard on the right speaker; thus, sound with sound. Of course, any two combinations may be used such as an orchestra and a musical instrument. Another form of sound with sound is used for language instruction. The instructor track contains spoken phrases in a foreign language followed by a pause of about the same length as the spoken phrase. The student listens to the instructor track and records his version of the spoken phrase on track two immediately after hearing the instructor; thus, the student's phrase will accompany the pause on the instructor's track. When finished the student can play back the tape and compare his phrase with that of the instructor's by listening to both tracks. The student track may be erased and used over and over again without destroying the instructor's track.

SOUND ON SOUND is a method of combining sounds. To illustrate, a person makes a recording on track A by playing a guitar and singing the lead part. The tape is then rewound back to the starting point. The singer-guitarist puts on a headset. The microphone is plugged into the B channel of the recorder. While listening over the headset to the original recording, he sings a melody part and plays additional parts with his guitar. This second set of voice and music is recorded on channel B at the same time as the original sound of channel A is being transferred or dubbed onto channel B. When finished, channel B will contain two voices and two guitars. This is sound on sound. This process can be continued by transferring the two parts on channel B back to channel A and at the same time recording third parts along with it. To do these things, one must have a stereo recorder. Visit us for further information.

"WHO KNOWS WHERE THE TIME GOES?" — Judy Collins — Elektra EKS-74033:

Judy's latest attests to the mature taste and sensitivity which pervades not only her delivery of a song but also her choice of tunes and instrumental backing. Electric piano adds an interesting touch here and there, and such fine performers as Van Dyke Parks and Steve Sills contribute to the excellent accompanying group. "Pretty Polly" reminds one of Weill, "Story of Isaac" sounds like Leonard Cohen (which it is), and in "Someday Soon" Judy sounds more like Joan Baez, with the pedal steel guitar adding a subtle country mood to the tune. Bravo Judy again!

"WHEATSTRAW SUITE" — The Dillards — Elektra EKS-74035:

This group produced some delightful Kentucky bluegrass LPs a few years ago, and now they are back with their version of the latest "sound" from that part of the country. It is sort of a pop-country-folk-bluegrass mixture, with the distinctive sounds of the Dobro, mandolin and pedal steel guitars. The voice and tunes of Rodney Dillard are a real treat. You don't even have to be a country music fan to enjoy the Dillards.

"RESTORATION RUIN" — Keith Jarrett — Vortex 2008:

This is an amazing LP. Jarrett, pianist for the Charles Lloyd jazz group, has put together a tour-de-force of talent and imagination. He wrote all 10 tunes, and aside from a string quartet background on some, all the varied instruments heard are played (through tape overdubbing) by himself. He also sings on several. The style is unclassifiable, touching on jazz, rock, blues, classics. This is one of the most inspiring examples of the fantastic musical creativity which very young performers in the music of today are coming up with.

"CLEANLINESS AND GODLINESS SKIFFLE BAND'S GREATEST HITS"—Vanguard VSD-79285:

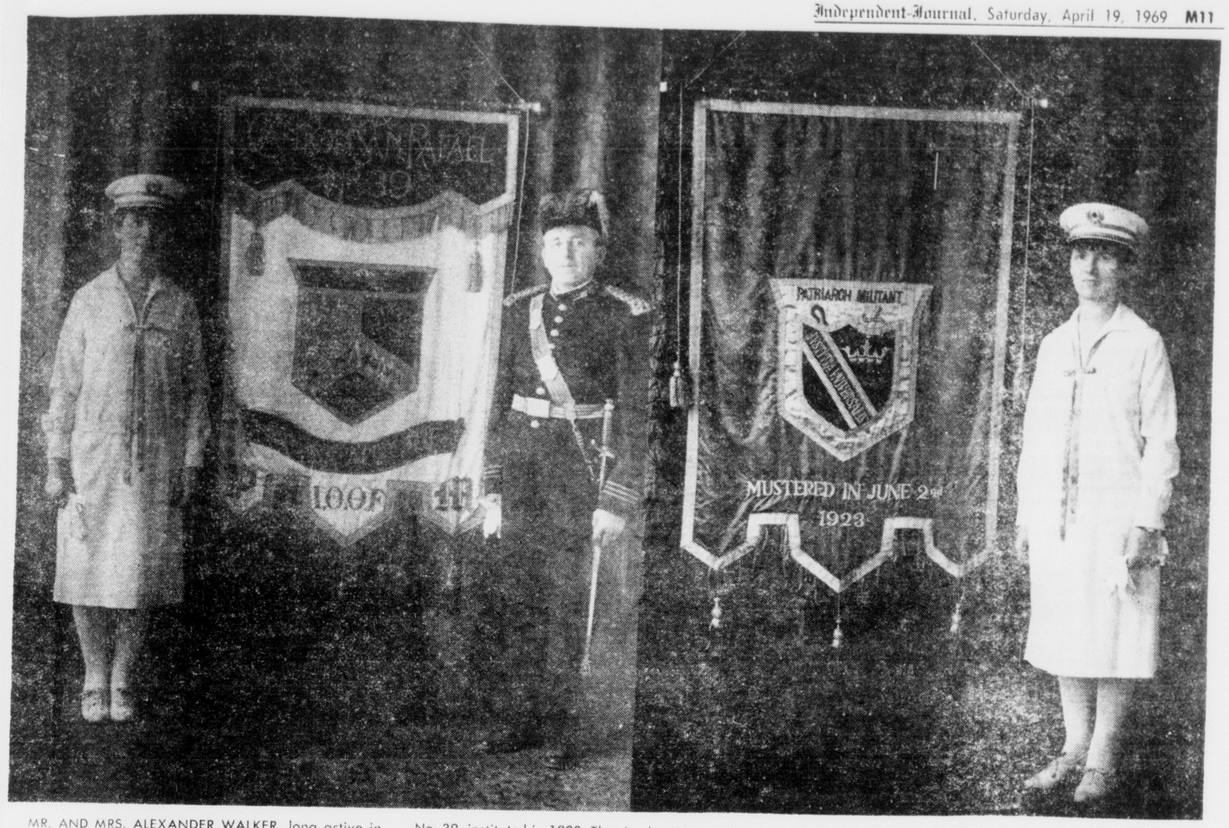
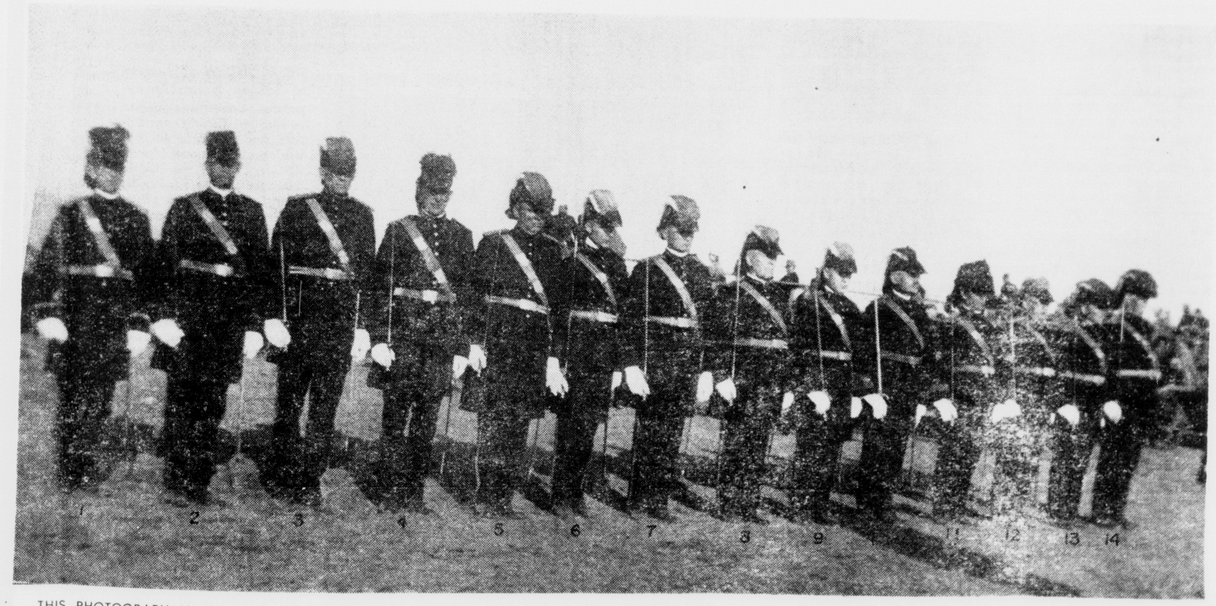
The "good time sound" in folk-rock seems to have fallen by the wayside and I for one regret it. The Lovin' Spoonful and Sopwith Camel were at their best a barrel of fun, and for lovers of those optimistic, whimsical tunes here is an LP that will have you jumping for joy. Contrary to the title, this is the local groups' first LP, and it features such standards as "Dr. Jazz," atmospheric ballads like "Lotus Blossom" and hilarious originals such as "Do It Up." Annie Johnston is the female member of the group, heard in some great vocals as well as on mandolin and guitar. Hank Bradley is a singing fiddler, as well as doing mandolin and harmonica.



MR. AND MRS. ALEXANDER WALKER, long active in Odd Fellow and Rebekah affairs in Marin County, posed with the banner which Mrs. Walker had made for the newly organized San Rafael IOOF Canton No. 39, instituted in 1923. That is also Mrs. Walker at right, since the framed photograph that hangs in the San Rafael Odd Fellows Hall on Fifth Avenue is actually a composite of two pictures showing both sides of the banner. The banner was lost in a 1957 fire which destroyed the IOOF quarters that were then located at Fourth and D. Alexander Walker is deceased, but Mrs. Walker continues to be an active Rebekah.



THIS PHOTOGRAPH IS one of the few mementos from the past history of Marin Odd Fellows Lodge No. 200 and its affiliates to survive the 1957 fire. It also hangs on the wall of the present San Rafael IOOF Hall. It shows the Marin parade team that won first place in competition at the Grand encampment of 1929, held in Watsonville. Uniforms and ritual have long been on important part of Odd Fellowship, but humanitarian and brotherhood efforts are foremost in the IOOF program.

On How To Scratch Those Itchy Palms

If you are one of those who are irritated when the cab driver takes them four blocks out of the way to reach their hotel, when the wait for the after-dinner check in the restaurant seems interminable, when an overzealous porter insists on carrying their overnight cases, then welcome to the ranks of the grudging tipper club.

It's an ever-growing organization among travelers.

Membership entitles you to frown while you resentfully scratch those outstretched itchy palms with your inflation-depreciated money. It even permits you to snatch back your overnight case from that grabby porter, or to leave the barest 10 per cent tip for the waiter when dinner service has been something less than satisfactory.

BUT, ALAS, the times and customs being what they are, in most instances, it does not entitle you to forget to tip the people who perform services for you — especially while abroad. In many instances, the tips are the principal income of these workers.

What does a taxi-driver in Milan expect in the way of a tip? Does the 15 per cent service charge added to your bill in Europe take care of the friendly wine steward who recommended a really magnificent wine at a very reasonable price?

Too large a tip can be as offensive as too small, and, believe it or not, in some places, a very few to be sure, people are offended if you tip them at all.

For both domestic and international travelers, the American Society of Travel Agents has some advice on when, where, whom and how much to tip.

THE BASIC principle to remember is that there are no hard and fast rules concerning tipping, since customs vary widely from country to country, by mode of travel, and by the efficiency and courtesy of the service rendered. Local customs largely determine tipping practices.

The problem, however, especially for the American tourist, is determining what the local customs really are.

Tipping is usually calculated on a percentage basis. Fifteen to 20 per cent is the standard range for almost all services in all countries. If there is a doubt, it is often wiser and safer to overtip by a few cents.

Tipping really is a reward for service and it has traditionally been even more widely practiced in Europe than in the U.S. Europeans seem to tip more often than Americans, but in lesser amounts each time.

Remember, too, that in many countries elaborate service is held in higher esteem than it is in the U.S., so that what seems like the red carpet treatment to Americans might even be considered poor service by some Europeans.

If in doubt about local tipping customs, ask someone who lives in the area.

Following are some guidelines formulated by the travel agents.

AIR TRAVEL — Never tip airline personnel such as flight crews, stewardesses or reservations staffs, no matter how helpful they have been. If someone has been especially helpful, write to the airline and commend that person.

Air terminal porters, and limousine drivers are always tipped. The size of the tip depends on the amount of luggage and the promptness and courtesy of delivery.

HOTELS — Foreign hotels generally add a service charge of 10 to 25 per cent of your bill. In Europe, 15 per cent is customary. Tip porters, bell boys and dining room waiters as they perform their services.

In resort hotels, tipping scales are slightly higher than in metropolitan ones. Occasionally these hotels will add a service charge. Be sure to check. Here, again, tip porters, bell boys and dining room waiters as they perform their services. As you leave the hotel, leave a tip for the room maid. The rate is normally $1 per day of your stay.

RESTAURANTS — Most European restaurants add a service charge to your check. If the service has been good you may still leave 5 per cent above this. If no service charge is added, 15 per cent is the standard tip in Europe. In the Far and Middle East, tips of 10 or 12 per cent are ample.

BARBERS and Beauty Salons — Tip 10 to 20 per cent depending on service and the plushness of the place.

GUIDES — Tip about 15 per cent, which works out usually to be 25 to 50 cents. If the tour is of a religious institution, however, do not tip the guide. Rather, leave the money for charity.

LOCAL TOUR conductors and drivers — They usually are tipped, depending on the cost of the tour and the length and helpfulness of their services. These are often joint tips collected from everyone on the tour.

TAXI DRIVERS — They are normally tipped 15 to 20 per cent of the cost of the ride. In Tokyo, however, they are not tipped.

THEATER USHERS — They are generally not tipped in the U.S. but they are in Europe, with the exception of Switzerland. At least 15 cents is common.

If you are traveling on a tour, a large portion of your tips may be included in the total cost, but probably not all of them. Check with your travel agent or tour conductor as to which tips are included.

The association advises travelers to tip in the local currency. If American money is used, you will often be overtipping because of the difference in the value of the currencies. And, unless you really want to be an ugly American, never tip with gifts.

THREE FACES OF FORMOSA

THE ECONOMY of Formosa or Taiwan is heavily dependent upon three sources or income—fishing, agriculture and tourism. At top, fishing boats are shown tied up along the China Sea coast of the Far Pacific island. Thanks to their catches, shrimp, prawns, lobster, pronfret and other seafood delicacies are a featured part of Formosan cuisine. In center photo, Taiwanese farmers, both men and women, are shown preparing a flooded paddy field for a second planting of rice. The first crop has already been harvested. Fields are terraced and irrigated so that every tillable acre can be used by farmers for growing rice and such other crops as bananas and pineapples. In bottom photo, golfers on a course at Chung Tsing Lake near Koahsiung play in the shadow of one of the many pagodas that dot the island. Taiwan boasts many golf courses, the best known being the Taiwan Golf and Country Club at Tamsui. The courses welcome visitors to Formosa as guest players.

The Big Show At Yosemite

YOSEMITE PARK'S great falls will be more spectacular than ever this spring, National Park Service rangers say, thanks to a large snowpack with an unusually high moisture content. Such falls as Yosemite Falls, above, that drops 2,425 feet in three stages, second only to remote Angel Fall in Venezuela, will become thundering cascades in early May as the thaw sets in.

Record snow depths accumulated at the higher elevations in Yosemite National Park this winter are expected to result in the most spectacular waterfall display in the Park's history this spring.

By early February, well over 100 inches of especially wet snow had piled up at each of nine measuring stations in Yosemite, three times the amount of snow recorded last winter, and twice the park's 30-year average. And, since that date, a good deal more snow has fallen.

NATIONAL PARK Service rangers who made the measurements reported that not only was the snow at record depths, but it had an exceptionally high water content.

As a result, when the big spring thaw comes in May, Yosemite's famed waterfalls are expected to pour forth with cascades of water much larger than ever before. In addition, it is anticipated that the falls will flow full longer into the summer than usual, perhaps into August.

Even before the thaw, the various Yosemite falls, usually just a trickle in the cold winter months, were running fuller than normal. When the spring run-off begins, countless rivulets will cascade down the sheer granite cliffs which ring the Yosemite Valley.

BUT, THE BIG attractions will be such great landmarks as Yosemite Falls, whose 2,425 foot drop is exceeded only by the remote Angel Fall in Venezuela; the picturesque 620 foot Bridalveil Fall; and the smaller but equally beautiful Vernal, Nevada, Royal Arch and Illilouette Falls.

Yosemite officials said that spring in the famed California park, always a particularly pleasant season, will be more dramatic than ever this year.

Vonnegut's New Novel

SLAUGHTERHOUSE-FIVE or THE CHILDREN'S CRUSADE by Kurt Vonnegut Jr.; Delacorte Press, 186 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Jerry Megahan.

On the day of Feb. 13, 1945, an American prisoner of war was sitting in a cellar in Dresden, Germany, when Allied bombers swept over the city and wreaked the greatest destruction in the history of aerial warfare.

While the city was being reduced to rubble, a gigantic fire storm rolled through the streets, roasting nearly every inhabitant instantaneously. A total of 135,000 lives were lost, compared to 71,379 killed when the first atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

The prisoner of war who lived to tell the tale was Kurt Vonnegut Jr., and whether he knows it or not, in a way, he has been writing about Dresden every time he sits down at a typewriter.

Long before Black Humor became a cant phrase with every kid who ever took Composition 101, Vonnegut's searing vision of the human condition was burning holes in science fiction magazines all across the United States.

From "Sirens of Titan" through "Cat's Cradle," the only book in American history to become a best-seller through sheer word-of-mouth, Vonnegut has had just one real subject: the pettiness, stupidity and indifference of the two-legged animal called man.

Only one black humorist has ever matched him for sheer virulent brilliance of attack; that was Malcolm Purdy and in just one book, "Cabot Wright Begins."

That's why it's such a drag to have to say that "Slaughterhouse-Five" doesn't quite get it.

The trouble is that Vonnegut Indian-wrestled with his subject too long and, above all, the trouble is that Joseph Heller came out with a novel called "Catch-22" about eight years ago. When it comes to writing anti-war novels, prudent men stack arms after reading Heller.

All of which would seem to imply that "Slaughterhouse-Five" is a klinker as a novel. It is not, but neither is it the well-timed shot to the jugular that every novelist lives for.

Vonnegut got Dresden at the heart of "Cat's Cradle" and "Mother Night"; he missed by a hair with this book.

I can even give him a clue as to what went wrong. If Vonnegut is as anxious to repudiate his science fiction beginnings as he appears to be, he had better excise them from his style first. The Tralfamadorean schtick is by far the weakest link in a book which has to be letter-perfect if it would do what Vonnegut wants it to do.

And I'd like to venture a very shrewd guess that the classic phrase "and so it goes" occurred to Vonnegut long before he ever thought of inventing Tralfamadore to justify its usage. To paraphrase the immortal Ed Sullivan, "and so it goes" is a phrase that needs no justification.

KURT VONNEGUT JR.
The nitty gritty

Tralfamadore is a shuck and Vonnegut knows it. It was a cheap way of doing what Vonnegut wanted to do with time in this book. In other words, Vonnegut has allowed his skill at constructing handloomed outhouses to interfere with his genius as an architect.

However, I might also opine that "Slaughterhouse-Five," weak as it is for Vonnegut, whittles any novel, say, Norman Mailer ever wrote down to what it really is.

Mailer and his press agent like to talk about the nitty gritty; Vonnegut has been there and gone.

An Important Work From Soviet Union

CANCER WARD by Alexander Solzhenitsyn; Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 560 pages, $10. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

Another chapter in contemporary Russia has reached the shores of the United States with the recent publication of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's massive novel, "Cancer Ward."

It is surely one of the most important works to come out of the Iron Curtain country where the author's works are banned by the Soviet hierarchy.

In sweeping prose Solzhenitsyn portrays the relationships of a group of patients thrown together in a cancer ward in a provincial Soviet hospital.

The hero, Oleg Kostoglotov, clearly resembles the author who himself was confined in such a hospital ward in the mid-1950s and later recovered.

The fear of death is nothing new to Kostoglotov. He had been living in exile when downed by cancer and is only returned for special treatment.

With the word cancer ever present, the author presents a deep insight into the structured society of Communist Russia where privacy is swept away in the confines of a dreary, overcrowded house of mercy for the suffering.

Entwined into this setting is Kostoglotov's tender love affair with one of the hospital's woman doctors. It closely resembles the poignant love affair in "Dr. Zhivago" where destiny played such an important part in bringing the two lovers together and just as sadly tore them apart.

This translation, by Nicholas Bethell and David Burg, is one of two being offered. It is a scholarly presentation, footnoted occasionally, for accuracy. In the novel status "Cancer Ward" will probably equal the success of last year's "Full Cycle," by the same author. But it should also be treated as a great literary art as well. The author's honesty and his challenge of the Soviet machine should alone put it in this class.

Another important chapter in this novel is Solzhenitsyn's letter to the Fourth Congress of Soviet Writers, pleading his case for publication of the work in his native land.

The frustration of the Soviet writer is summed up in one paragraph. In it he asks the congress to discuss:

"The no longer tolerable oppression, in the form of censorship, that our literature has endured for decades, and that the Union of Writers can no longer accept."

'There's Nothing Useless'

HOW TO MAKE SOMETHING FROM NOTHING by Ruth Stearns Egge; Coward-McCann, 224 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

The conversion of discards into decorator items is a hobby that is catching the fancy of more and more Americans. They call it "junking."

In this book, Mrs. Egge tells how she got caught up in it, and how she practices it.

It offers two-fold fun. First there is the search for something unused — in the attic, the garage, the second hand stores, etc. — that strikes a note with the finder. Then its conversion into something that will be used —or at least admired.

Not only is it easy on the budget, but it is also satisfying to the creative urge.

Much of Mrs. Egge's book is devoted to the projects she has carried out successfully — candlesticks from table legs, cabinet chest from an old sewing machine, centerpiece from bits of metal jewelry, compotes from old bowls, etc. Her descriptions of her handiwork techniques are quite clear, and are further amplified by photographs that also prove the worth of her finished pieces.

"A sensible person finds nothing useless," she quotes as her conclusion.

Me And Thee Made Very Real

EXCEPT FOR ME AND THEE by Jessamyn West; Harcourt, Brace and World; 309 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bruce Coleman.

Reviews Of New Reading

It was the time of the katydids.

"Jess placed his large hand upon her small rough one. 'Thee glad to have it summer, Eliza?'

" 'Summer for us, too,' she said unexpectedly."

This is the tenor of the language between Jess Birdwell and his wife, Eliza, in this warm story of two Quakers and their three small children who go west to Indiana to start their own farm.

It is something very special in our hip times when there seems to be so little of the Birdwell way of life left.

Jess and Eliza start out in a log house, suffer the loss of their daughter, Sarah, by scarlet fever and endure unusual hardships when they shelter slaves in the Civil War's underground railroad.

Dialogues are good and so is the humor of Miss West as when Jess, who likes to race horses but feels it a bit un-Quakerish, tries to outmaneuver Eliza. When he returns home from a lost race on the pike, he learns that Eliza had prayed that he would lose. Jess didn't think his wife even knew about the race.

And a sad but plausible talk between Josh and Labe after their sister, Sarah, died: "I wish they hadn't put her in such a deep hole," said Labe. "It was only her body," Josh replied. "It was Sarah," Josh said. "She is an angel." "Can she fly?" "Yes." "Why do you have to die to fly?" Labe asked. "Angels fly," Josh said. "That's why."

Miss West, author of "The Friendly Persuasion," was born in Indiana of Quaker parents and now lives in California. She makes the Birdwells—me and thee—very real.

A Book That Falls 'In-Between'

THE GIRL IN MELANIE KLEIN by Ronald Harwood; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 182 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Jerry Megahan.

One of the curses of being a potluck book reviewer is the small-scale, well-made novel which is too good to be sluffed off with a negative review and too slight to make one want to pull out the stops.

"Melanie Klein" is Harwood's third novel. Not having read the first two, I have no idea whether his career is running forward or backward.

What is very nice about this book is Harwood's ability to shade scene and character in a few quick strokes. Any number of big-reputation writers could take lessons from him on that.

Then, too, he has been very canny in picking a narrative voice. Not many people could write a novel seen through the eyes of a mad, androgynous 50-year-old ballet dancer without toppling over into Carson McCullers. Harwood accomplishes this feat so handily the reader doesn't even notice.

Wing Commander Wassler is a stock "Mad Englishman" character but Miss Nora almost runs away with the whole book. Some Dame Edith Evans type would run amuck with such a part, if this was ever made into a movie.

However, the book falls down when Harwood takes on the task of delineating the catalytic figure, Niobe Grynne, who is "The Girl in Melanie Klein." She never quite comes to life, unfortunately. Her fatal secret is a nice piece of black comedy but not the kind of climax Harwood has been so carefully building.

Dr. Lipschitz, the curator of this madhouse, is similarly inert. And he has tantalizing possibilities, too.

To close with one of the most tiresome of cliches "Melanie Klein" is the work of a most promising writer who has not yet fulfilled that promise.

Maybe next time Harwood will put it all together.

It Might Have Been Something You Ate, Says Science Writer

By DON KEOWN

POISONS IN YOUR FOOD by Ruth Winter; Crown, 248 pages, $5.95.

That stomach churning and head spinning you endured a few days or weeks back may not have been influenza after all. It might have been something you ate.

For all-around quality, admits Ruth Winter, award-winning medical science editor of the Newark, N.J., Star-Ledger and syndicated columnist, America's abundant food supply is the best in the world.

But, she adds, it could and should be much better, and much safer, and she documents that claim in her book, "Poisons in Your Food."

Whether they eat in restaurants or at home, Americans run a considerable risk of consuming along with their salad or entrees a variety of contaminants that play havoc with their insides. And very often they fail to connect their malaise, which may occur many hours later, with their eating.

The villain may have been an additive intentionally placed in the foodstuff after receiving a too hasty clearance for human consumption. It may be a pesticide sprayed on the fields or used in the kitchen. It may be plain filth or a poisonous bacteria promoted by unsanitary surroundings or careless handling.

Mrs. Winter makes the charge that 40 per cent of our communicable diseases are transmitted by food. While it would be impossible for her to prove that figure, she makes it clear that more of our sicknesses, sometimes serious and even fatal, but more often on the discomfort level, are due to contaminated foods than we suspect.

Her book is replete with food poisoning incidents, certain to raise the hackles of an industry which will accuse her of exaggerating the bad and ignoring the good. But she might well reply that the trade should hardly expect applause for doing exactly what it is supposed to do — provide us with clean and wholesome foods. And that if it were meeting that responsibility more consistently, she would not have available to her this lengthy list of horrible examples.

Her most spectacular citations deal with transmissions of salmonella, staphyloccus, shigella, etc., with the spread of trichella and brucellosis, with cases of botulism and virus diseases, sometimes in epidemic proportions.

But perhaps the more sinister aspects of the problem are the slower acting poisons — the pesticides that have crept into our foods and from them into our vital organs, and the additives that have been put there deliberately in answer to our demands for more and more convenience in our groceries.

There are, Mrs. Winter says, 2,764 such products now being added intentionally to our foods, and many of them have been inadequately researched and tested. Man has what amounts to only a shadowy knowledge of the effects of pesticides and many of the additives upon the human body. Indeed, she reminds us, science is frequently and belatedly discovering health hazards in products that the public has been ingesting for years.

Mrs. Winter's book, while alarming, is not purely alarmist. She has concrete, constructive suggestions for dealing with the problem. On the individual level, she offers checklists to help the customer determine the sanitation standards of supermarkets and restaurants. She presents procedures to assist the homemaker in managing her kitchen so as to reduce the dangers of tainted foods. Not all her ideas are easy to implement without virtually unlimited refrigeration space. But they provide a goal.

Her most sweeping recommendations are on the governmental level — for legislation establishing closer supervision of food processing and preparation, for better inspection services, for stepped-up research. Mrs. Winter estimates that inspectors of the understaffed Pure Food and Drug Administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture, check no more than 10 per cent of the food destined for American tables — and that is only "spot-checked." State systems are even less effective.

From her book one learns that our pesticide regulations are less rigid than those of Germany, that our trucking of frozen and highly perishable foods is often done without the temperature graphs required by law in Britain, that with all our use of chemicals our growing methods are less efficient than those of Japan, that our medical schools pay but slight attention to nutritional studies contributing to poor diagnoses of food illnesses and allergies.

Mrs. Winter, incidentally the wife of a neurosurgeon, has written a book in the Rachel Carson-Ralph Nader tradition pointing up a problem deserving of more attention than it has been receiving from the public and from the government. No doubt what she has written will create a stir — perhaps a storm — of interest. It is to be hoped that it will be of sufficient intensity, and duration, to effect at least some of the reforms she advocates.

PHOTOGRAPHER Robert Wenkam's picture of a pandanus tree on Ke's Beach in Hawaii is one of the illustrations in "Kauai and the Park Country of Hawaii," originally published by the Sierra Club in its Exhibit Format Series and now reprinted by Ballantine Books as a $3.95 paperback.

SUNSET EDITORS have issued an "all-new edition" of their "Garden & Patio Building Book," 96 pages in softcover and priced at $1.95.

The publication is crammed with construction ideas for the outdoor living area, ranging from a garden gate to a gazebo. There's practical instruction for such projects as waterfalls and ponds, steps, retaining walls, benches, trellises, storage sheds, barbecues, screens, hotbeds and fences. Both drawings and photographs serve as illustrations, and are employed generously and effectively.

Lane Magazine & Book Co. of Menlo Park, the Sunset parent firm, is the publisher.

"FALL OUT Laughing, Beetle Bailey" is a collection of antics of the Mort Walker-created cartoon character, the fouled-up GI, Beetle Bailey, and his buddies, published as a 75-cent paperback by Grosset and Dunlap on its Tempo Books label.

Beetle was lousing up the army long before Gomer Pyle began unraveling the Marine Corps, and the syndicated strip now appears in 1,100 newspapers as one of the few comic strips that are really comic.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE OLD ENGLISH PEEP SHOW by Peter Dickinson; Harper & Row, 216 pages $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Peter Dickinson, former Punch editor and satirical versemaker, scored big with his first suspense novel, "The Glass-Sided Ants' Nest." This, his second, is certain to earn him new praise for originality and style.

Superintendent Pibble is dispatched by Scotland Yard to Herryngs, ancestral home of two of England's most distinguished World War II heroes. There has been a death there. In the midst of the historical spectacle, plus lion park, that have made Herryngs a major tourist attraction, Pibble begins to suspect that the unreality goes deeper than just the veneer of showmanship for visiting Americans.

Dickinson writes with a fine, restrained sense of humor that enhances his story-telling and adds zest to a novel rich in eccentric characters and geographical color.

VINTAGE, a Random House division, has published an interesting list of paperback reprints aimed at the intellectual readers.

Heading the list are Jean Lacouture's definitive political biography of Ho Chi Minh, and Staughton Lynd's "Intellectual Origins of American Radicalism."

Some of the other titles include Andre Malraux's "Man's Fate," the "Latin American Radicalism" report on nationalist and leftist movements in the lands to our south, edited by Irving Louis Horowitz, Josue de Castro and John Gerassi; and another highly regarded collection, "Towards a New Past; Dissenting Essays in American History," edited by Barton J. Bernstein.

There are others on the same high plane, priced at from $1.65 to $2.45, and indicative of the kind of brain-testing reading fare that is available today in the inexpensive softcover format.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Dover Publications has completed the reprinting of Andrew Lang's great collection of fairytales with the appearance of six more volumes in its high quality paperback format.

The new arrivals are "The Crimson Fairy Book," "The Olive Fairy Book," "The Grey Fairy Book," "The Orange Fairy Book," "The Pink Fairy Book" and "The Lilac Fairy Book," each priced at $1.95.

The other six members of the color series that began in 1889 with the publication of "The Blue Fairy Book' had been reissued earlier by Dover.

Lang collected the classic stories of many lands, from the popular tales of Denmark's Hans Christian Andersen and Germany's Brothers Grimm to Eskimo and African folk stories. There are approximately 35 fantasy and magic stories per book, all retold with the special facility that made Lang famous.

All of H. J. Ford's original illustrations are also reproduced in what is a dazzling piece of scholarship and a most worthwhile contribution to the archives of folk and fairytale literature. Parents, as much as children, will enjoy these delightful reminders of a world of princes, sorcerers and speaking animals.

Some other new books for the juniors:

Peter Dickinson, African-born Londoner who turned from satirical verse to suspense novels and scored a big hit with adults, has now written his first book for juniors, "The Weathermonger" (Little, Brown, $4.95). It is a science fiction-adventure tale about a young British couple five years in the future and in a dramatically changed country that has reverted to the Middle Ages. Dickinson is a most imaginative plotter and a superb stylist, so that his depiction of a clash between superstition and science is charged with excitement. Youngsters at the 13 and 14-year level capable of handling the taste of terror will revel in Dickinson's inventiveness.

Writing for girls in the primary grades, Jean Little, the Formosa-born Canadian daughter of missionaries, has added another book to her growing list—"One to Grow On" (Little, Brown, $4.50). Janie Chisholm seemingly can't help herself from lying. But her godmother, Tilly, comes to her rescue and together they find the cause, thus opening up a whole new way of life for the young girl. Jean Little stories are always professionally written and plotted on sound moral grounds.

There's a phantom hound that howls at the moon and all kinds of other strange goings-on in "The Mystery of the Crimson Ghost" (Westminster, $3.75). And deeply involved in this ghostly mystery set in New Jersey's Sussex County are the young girl, Janey, and the horse, Star. The author is Phyllis A. Whitney, one of the best of the spinners of Gothic novels for both adults and juniors. This is a particularly appealing and exciting effort on her part, ideal for girls in the 12, 13 and 14-year bracket who are mystery story buffs.

Sister Noemi Weygant of the Order of St. Benedict might well be called "the photographing nun." Her camera work has won her many professional awards. In her earlier "It's Autumn" she combined poetry, photographs and nature lore into a most appealing book. Now she has done "It's Spring," (Westminister, $3.95) that captures beautifully the special magic of this season. While it is essentially a book for young people to whom spring has a special meaning, the poems and colored photographs will attract all ages.

Fibrous Begonia Is A Marin Favorite

Gardening Page

There's good reason — in fact a number of good reasons—for the popularity that fibrous begonias enjoy among Marin County gardeners.

First, they are perennials that reward their growers with not one, but several years, of beautification.

Secondly, they are among the showiest of the perennials, indeed one of the few that can compete with the annuals from the standpoint of colorful bloom.

THEY ARE among our hardiest perennials. While they are essentially shade lovers, they will take a considerable amount of sun in Marin. And they are capable of withstanding far harder frosts than those normally experienced in this county.

They have a long blooming period.

Care is minimal.

And they are extremely versatile and diverse. Fibrous begonias come in blooming colors of red, white and pink. Foliage hues range from apple green to a deep red-brown that is almost a mahogany.

AS FOR SIZE, there are the semperflorens that stand 24 to 30 inches tall, ideal for foundation and background plantings. And there are the dwarfs less than a foot high that make splendid borders or massed beds.

Now is the time to purchase fibrous begonias in the nurseries as small, inexpensive bedding plants in flats.

In planting, use a nurseryman's prepared mixture to assure good drainage and the humus needed in the soil.

Once in the ground, fibrous begonias need no pampering. Just water regularly and deeply, feed sparingly.

If you haven't already been won over to them, you won't be long in discovering why fibrous begonias enjoy such a loyal following among Marin gardeners.

DWARF PINK fibrous begonias planted in a setting with junipers and mugho pines and with a Scotch moss groundcover provide just the proper accent, eye-pleasing without being overpowering. Such begonias, available now from bedding flats in the nurseries, will continue to bloom into the winter months. (Photo courtesy of the California Association of Nurserymen)

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓It is planting time for dahlias, tuberous begonias, gladiolus and a large assortment of other summer-flowering bulbs.

✓To prevent damage to your grass in mowing the lawn, take these two precautions: Make certain that your mower blades are sharp. And do not cut lower than an inch and a half from the ground. Mowings that are too close expose the grass to sunburning and result in browning of the lawn.

✓If you haven't already done so, "spring-feed" your lawn. And while you are at it, combine the application of an insecticide with your fertilizer to take care of two jobs at once.

✓Bedding plants of popular annuals and perennials are in abundance at the nurseries.

✓Gardenias should be fed once a month, beginning now. Special food is available. And unless your soil is perfect, the feed should be augmented with applications of iron chelates.

Handyman's Page

A leaky faucet wastes water and causes discoloration of the sink, important reasons why it should be fixed. But it is likely that more persons are annoyed by the persistent drip-drip than are worried by the waste of water or the resulting stain.

Whatever the reason for the decision to halt the leak, the repair usually can be made effectively, even by someone to whom most plumbing problems are something of a mystery. The most important step is the first one — shutting off the water.

IN SOME fixtures, this is done by turning the handle underneath the sink in a clockwise direction. In others, the shut-off valve to that particular line may be in the basement or the utility room.

And in a small minority of instances, it is necessary to close the main shut-off valve.

Step No. 2 is to loosen the cap or packing nut just under the handle. Use a wrench with smooth jaws so as not to mar the nut. To be doubly sure of not causing any damage, wrap adhesive tape around the nut, which is turned counterclockwise.

WHEN THE cap nut is loose, turn the handle in the same direction as when you turn on the water, going as far as you can. The shaft or stem of the faucet can then be removed, either by lifting it out or unscrewing it.

The washer at the end of the stem will be worn or chewed up. Remove it by taking out the holding screw. Put a new washer of the same size in its place, replace the parts in the opposite order in which they were removed, turn on the water and the job is done.

In nearly all cases, it's as simple as that. Once in a while, you'll run into trouble. The screw won't come out. Or there will still be a leak after the washer has been replaced. Or your faucet won't be of the compression type still in use in the majority of homes.

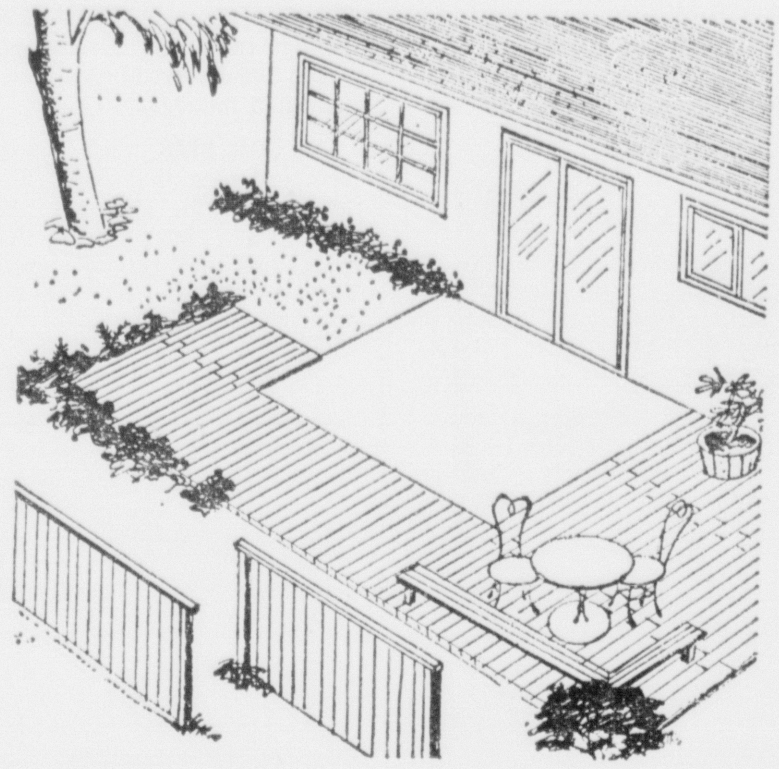
IN ANY OF these events, you can take the stem to your hardware dealer and ask his advice—or you can call a plumber.

In discussing the matter with the hardware dealer, ask him about the possibility of using a gadget other than a washer. Some work well, some don't.

If you're having a lot of trouble with old faucet fixtures and you're in the mood to spend more money for something better, consider the purchase of the single lever or other type of modern faucet, some of which do not utilize conventional washers.

BUT IF YOU do purchase a washer, be sure to get one of the same size as the old one.

In this area, too, you have a choice. There are different kinds of washers, some made of materials which last longer than others and some of which work better with hot water faucets.



AN ORDINARY paved patio has been expanded to a more generous size simply by adding a wooden deck. Built in joining eight-foot squares, the deck uses pressure-treated Douglas fir two-by-fours for both framing and deck boards. Joists rest on 12-by-12-inch concrete pads. Gravel beneath the deck inhibits weeds and helps drainage. Screens may be added for privacy.

An Easy Way To Expand A Patio

Of all the rooms in the house, it's the roofless one that a family outgrows the fastest.

No sooner is the barbecue purchased and a chaise longue installed than the family begins discovering the many enjoyments of outdoor living. And all of them add up to a need for more space.

Fortunately, when the backyard is more or less level, expanding a patio can be easy — on both the budget and the back. It's done by adding a wood deck all around the existing patio.

THE DECK addition will be easy to handle if it's built on an eight-foot-square module, using a framing system so simple that the only materials required are two-by-fours and concrete foundation pads, plus nails and some gravel.

The construction crew can be family-size and, for tools, just a hammer, saw and carpenter's level are needed.

After roughly leveling the ground, the first step for each square is to position 12-by-12-by-three-inch pads on three-foot, six-inch centers. Nine pads are needed, one at each corner, one centered on each side, and one in the middle of the square.

JOISTS COME next: three eight-foot two-by-fours are laid parallel, on edge and centered over the pads. Be sure joists are level.

Now two-by-four-inch blocking is nailed crosswise between joists. Six pieces are needed, one at each footing. If offset slightly, they can be nailed through the end where they meet the center joist.

Spread a three-inch layer of gravel on the ground under the deck to inhibit plant growth and improve drainage.

Finally, nail on the deck boards, laying them at right angles to the joists. Again use eight-foot two-by-fours, spacing them about one-eighth inch apart. Nail deck planks twice to each joist.

IT'S NO TRICK to join the basic eight-foot squares to make a deck of whatever size or shape is needed. Going in the direction of the joists, simply repeat the basic square. Going in the direction of the deck boards, adjoining squares share a row of foundation pads.

But instead of a single centered joist, two joists are used, laid on opposite edges of the pads with a nine-inch space left between.

Then, to avoid a hard, straight line where deck boards meet end-to-end, a staggered joint may be created by cutting every other plank three inches shorter than those in between. For the adjoining square, the same thing is done, but opposite.

WHERE NEEDED for shape or size, the basic eight-foot square is easily broken down into a two-by-four-foot rectangle or a four-foot square. It's also easy to split the basic square diagonally to make a triangle, if desired.

For a close-to-ground deck, pressure-treated Douglas fir or cedar two-by-fours should be used for joists.
